Education in New Mexico	Report From Santa Fe	11/7/2022	9:30AM	27:40:00	Mexico. The New Mexico Department of Education and Secretary Steinhaus have been facing two huge developments and challenges – the vast amounts of paperwork required of teachers and administrators, and, of course, the coronavirus pandemic. Dr. Steinhaus and the Education Department reduced paperwork for teachers by 41%, and reduced administrative paperwork by 34%. Also, the department has risen to the challenge of the pandemic by analyzing pandemic-specific impacts on learning, and creating “Extended Learning Time Programs,” and offering more mental health and anxiety treatment programs for schools, students, and staff. Dr. Steinhaus has formulated an “Entry and Learning Plan” for the pandemic circumstances New Mexico education faces. Steinhaus asserts, “This transition presents an opportunity for positive enhancements in our schools; (as well as) for the state's instructional leader and chief executive officer to work closely with school leaders and community toward success for all.” One of the long-term effects of the pandemic to in-person learning, was to increase the number of students partaking in home schooling, which doubled from 8,800 students pre-pandemic to 16,000 students in 2021 as the pandemic was in full swing. Kurt Steinhaus was born in Los Alamos, NM, and has dedicated his career to education and advocating for the diverse population of New Mexico students, most recently as superintendent of Los Alamos Public Schools. His Bachelor's degree is in music education. Steinhaus holds master’s degrees from the University of Oregon, in science, and Eastern New Mexico University, in music, as well as a doctorate of education from the University of New Mexico (UNM), where he produced a dissertation on “Educational Leadership and Organizational

Security of Documents	Report From Santa Fe	11/14/2022	9:30	28:06:00	secure location boxes of "top secret" national security documents. Plame discusses former President Donald Trump's illegal possession and abuse of classified documents and what it means for the national security of the United States. She also discusses why the actual job of being a spy can be boring, and why women make great spies. Having served in the field, Plame pulls no punches about the recent developments. "When this news first broke, it was absolutely shocking to those of us who understand what this means. Everyone in the intelligence community is required to sign a secrecy oath, which I did when I first started at the CIA and you agree not to reveal classified information, sources and methods, which is most closely held of all secrets. Because that is how you collect intelligence, how you collect that information that is then given to our senior US policymakers. So, when the news came out that boxes and boxes of classified information were found at Mar-a-Lago, this is clearly not an innocent mistake." She continues, "Given that there has been speculation that in some ways Trump was what we would call, "An unwitting asset of Putin and the Russia Government," you do have to wonder what's the role of all those documents, and his holding on to them...The question I want to know is why?"

Native American Artist and Activist	Report From Santa Fe	12/12/2022	9:30AM	0:28:53	New Mexico in 2011. Buffy Sainte-Marie, singer, songwriter, musician, composer, educator and social activist. Throughout her career in all of these areas, her work has focused on issues of indigenous peoples of the Americas. Sainte-Marie is the only Native American to win an Academy Award, which she won for her song "Up Where We Belong." She talks about her life as an artist and as an activist. “What I really was trying to do as an entertainer...I saw an opportunity to spotlight local issues in Indian country. So it is funny that I become an activist, because I think probably what that brings to mind is people yelling and throwing their fists and holding signs, and I never was part of that. But as a writer and a singer and a person who spoke out - that was the kind of activism that I did. It was much more in the arts.” She also sings parts of her songs "Up Where We Belong," "The Universal Soldier," and "Until It's Time For You To Go." Quotes: “I always tell people who have to make a speech or be on stage or something, don't think about yourself. It is not about you, you know, it's about the message. So I really thought people would enjoy the songs, especially my love songs, rock and roll songs, country songs, but when it came to songs about any kind of social issues, war, and Native issues or, you know, treating each other right, bullying, women's issues, what I was offering people was information that they couldn't get at the time.”
