Item No. 1 – Student Work-Study Program

Dear Patty,

As the semester comes to a close, we want to thank you for providing a wonderful year of student employment opportunities. Attached is a list of dates to keep in mind about closing the fiscal year and preparing for 2017-2018 academic year. The dates listed are for student employment purposes only. Please continue to follow any state funded or graduate assistantship end dates from your contracts. We will continue to process ePAF/PA throughout June as students get hired/rehired.

Please contact Student Employment Services if you have any question. We look forward to working with you again in the new school year.

Thanks for a terrific semester!

- What
- kinds of writing do individuals in your field do?
- What
- writing conventions are specific to and important to your field? How did you learn those conventions?
- What
- was your experience like learning to write in college?
- What
- kinds of writing do you do most often in your work?
- What
- expectations do you think faculty members should have for students who are learning to write in your field?

- What
- suggestions or advice do you have for students in your field?

Who May Attend?

Workshops are open to all UMass Boston faculty and staff. Participation is voluntary. An employee interested in participating should discuss dates and times with their supervisor so that adequate coverage can be maintained while the employee is absent.

Note: If you registered for a workshop and you cannot attend, we ask that you cancel your registration or contact HR@umb.edu so that space can become available for someone who would like to attend.

Initiating Difficult Conversations

Tuesday, June 18, 2019 3:00 - 4:00 –Location: Presentation Room 2

There are conversations in which the stakes are high: asking for a raise, ending a relationship, giving a critical performance review, confronting disrespectful behavior, apologizing or disagreeing within a group. This workshop is about developing the skills to initiate the conversations which most people find difficult, unpleasant and generally avoid. You will learn the practical skills involved in framing a problem without blame or defensiveness and how to keep the conversation productive.

Time Management Tools: To-do Lists, Calendars, Smartphones and More

Tuesday, July 9, 2019 10:00 - 11:00 - Location: Presentation Room 2

It seems that more than ever, people are living busy, chaotic lives that often leave them feeling overwhelmed and out of control. Between work, parental responsibilities, community involvement, exercise, hobbies, friendships, family responsibilities and more, sometimes it feels as if keeping track of it all is just impossible. Fortunately, there are many tools available to help people gain control, though sometimes sorting through what's available can add what seems like even more chaos to life. Smartphones, day planners, alarms, e-mail systems, priority grids, voice mail systems, note pads, to-do lists, contact lists, address books, folders, file cabinets and more—the purpose of this lunch-and-learn is to help you sort through the tools available to help you organize your life, and pick the ones that will work for you.

The Art of Patience

Tuesday, July 11, 2019 2:00 - 3:00 - Location: Presentation Room 2

Many of us are impatient at times. And when we lose control of our patience it hurts not only us, but those around us. Impatience raises our stress levels and over time can even inflict physical harm to our bodies. But it seems that patience is a skill that is quickly diminishing, but one that constantly needs improving. You see examples of impatience and patience throughout each day; when you're stuck in traffic, when you're waiting in line for the grocery store, and when your children are taking too long to get ready for school in the morning. Even if you don't rate your own level of personal patience as being very high, the good news is that with practice, you too can learn to be more patient in your life.

Learning to Say “no”

Tuesday, July 16, 2019 3:00 - 4:00 - Location: Presentation Room 2

Saying “no” can often be difficult. It can arouse feelings of guilt or fears of displeasing others. Nevertheless, the word “no” is one of the most important words in our language. By saying “no” we define who we are, what are willing or not willing to do and what we permit others to do to us. The ability to say “no” is a critical skill that many have never developed or fear to use. This workshop will address the skills involved in learning to respectfully say “no” in order to build and maintain healthy self-esteem.

Human Resources

ComPsych Guidance Resources Workshops

Summer 2019

Effective Communication

Thursday, July 18, 2019 11:00 - 12:00 - Presentation Room 2

Why is interpersonal communication important? Personal success depends on our ability to communicate. Effective human relations depend on our communication skills. Overall, interpersonal communication skills are necessary for understanding and for action. This workshop explores interpersonal skills and techniques necessary for successful interactions.

Understanding Depression

Tuesday, August 6, 2019 10:00 - 11:00 - Presentation Room 2

Many people still believe that the emotional symptoms caused by depression are "not real," and that a person should be able to shake off the symptoms. Because of these inaccurate beliefs, people with depression either may not recognize that they have a treatable disorder or may be discouraged from seeking or staying on treatment due to feelings of shame and stigma. As a result, many people with a depressive illness never seek treatment. But the vast majority, even those with the most severe depression, can get better with treatment. Intensive research into the illness has resulted in the development of medications, psychotherapies, and other methods to treat people with this disabling disorder. This workshop will identify the symptoms associated with depression, possible causes and treatments.

Stress: A way of Life or Fact of Life?

Thursday, August 8, 2019 2:00 - 3:00 - Presentation Room 2

All aspects of work and life require stress—everyone experiences it. Experiencing stress is not all bad, but how we perceive stress is what's important. Stress is our body's normal response to any extra physical, mental or emotional demand we place on it. This workshop will help you to understand more about stress, identify your stressors and learn ways to cope with and manage high stress levels.

Reinventing Yourself

Tuesday, August 13, 2019 3:00 - 4:00 - Presentation Room 2

We have the choice of reinventing ourselves as a positive response to change. Austrian bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger won Mr. Universe and other body-building titles, then moved to a successful acting career and then was elected governor of California. We can choose to reinvent ourselves as the people we would like to become, rather than waiting for the future to find us. This session will look at getting started with self-reflection and planning. We'll also look at self-improvement techniques. The role of mentors will be examined as well as ways to stay motivated.

Secrets to Self-Motivation

Thursday, August 15, 2019 11:00 - 12:00 - Presentation Room 2

We can do anything we set our minds to. But sometimes it can feel like our brains are working against us when it comes to achieving our goals. Plans to learn a new skill, to get in shape or to save money keep getting pushed back in the hopes that the Future You will handle it "someday." Your attitude and beliefs about your likelihood of success can predict whether or not you actually succeed. If you actively keep your internal motivation high, you can significantly increase the likelihood of achieving your hopes, dreams and visions of your future.

Thanks for those details. I just spoke with Patty, our general manager, and she'd like to sit down with you and get to know each other a little bit in person. Let's find a time early next week for you to come down to the station and meet with us. Any time on Tuesday or Wednesday after 11 works for us, so please let me know when you can stop by. We'll be looking to dig a little deeper into specifics--like how often you're aiming to make shows, how much studio time you think you'll need to make each one, what your plans are for the summer and the next academic year, and so on. No need to answer all that in an email, just think about those questions in preparation for our meeting. The more concrete and specific you're able to get, the more likely it is we'll be able to move ahead with this project.

We would definitely love to do this as a Beacon Radio show and podcast. To answer some of your questions, this would be in conjunction with the Philosophy club in terms of sponsoring WUMB/the podcast. Members who are presenting in a given week for club could also come in a talk about their topic for the podcast (there are weekly talks given by students or faculty for club). Myself and the club treasurer, [REDACTED] (CC'd) would like to be the ones hosting the podcast on air. Next, I've spoken to many faculty who would be supportive of the podcast. [REDACTED] who is our faculty adviser, as well as [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] are Professors who I have asked in person and have been very supportive of the idea. I'd like to ask the department head and the director of the applied ethics center at some point as well. I'm certain they would also support this endeavor. Some may even be interested in coming on the podcast if they get the chance which would be quite fun [REDACTED] has expressed interest in this). Finally, none of us have formal podcast experience but we are familiar with the format from watching many different ones. For audio experience [REDACTED] has some but if it is not sufficient we are all willing to learn. We also plan on asking other students who would be interested in being a part of the audio/editing team. Weekdays from 9-5 are also consistent with our schedules. If you have any other questions let us know, we would love to get this idea off the ground!

Hi [REDACTED]

I ran this idea by our programming director and our station manager and we're all very receptive to this idea. There are some logistics that we would need to work out, but the general feeling here at the station is that if we can find an arrangement that works within the limits of our schedule and staff then we would love to support this as a podcast. We don't have any room in our on-air programming for this show, but we can offer our studio space and occasional staff support as needed to help make this into a podcast.

I'd like to get some more specifics and details about your proposal. Would this be in conjunction with the Philosophy Club on campus? Who are the faculty members that would support the podcast? Who would be working on the show and who would be on the air? And finally, what level of experience with podcasts and audio production more generally do you guys have? The other logistics we would need to figure out have to do with what our staff and schedule can allow for. We would not be able to support production if you guys need a technician/producer to work with you all the time. But if anybody has experience with audio production or would be able to learn the basics from one of our producers, we can have you guys use our studio and work independently as long as one of our producers is in the station for emergency support if needed. That means as far as scheduling is concerned, we can only offer studio time during business hours (9-5) on weekdays. I can act as a liaison between your club and our staff to help coordinate times.

This is a great idea and we would love to make this happen if we can!

All the best,

Bobby Pinkham

To whom it may concern,

Myself and 2 other students are interested in being apart of WUMB to do a radio show or podcast. From what I understand WUMB has a student online radio station and some students come on and talk. We think it would be a good opportunity to get both students and professors invested in WUMB. The idea we propose is doing a podcast or show on Philosophy. Of course, it would be accessible to students without training in Philosophy. We think this would be a great topic to cover because it has a wide range of subjects it covers, such as ethics, politics and science. This could definitely get more student interest and support for UMB's radio station. We also have faculty willing to support us if If this idea seems plausible or interesting, let me know and we can discuss this further.
