Program: Politica Ya con Tsi-tsi-ki Félix / Show # 78 / Segment # 3 / TRT: 7'19"

When: February 16th. 2020 Sunday 5:00 am

Description of program

On Thursday, February 6, El Salvador's President, Nayib Bukele, invoked a clause in the Salvadoran Constitution in order to convene the country's legislative branch, the National Assembly, on Sunday, February 9. The president hoped to approve a controversial international loan agreement that would provide $109 million to buy security equipment and other support for the president's anti-crime program. The Assembly had been delaying approval of the loan, motivated in part by political disputes with the president, some say having legitimate concerns about key aspects of the loan. But others just used as an excuse to hide criminals inside the Salvadorian congress who paid gangs to execute Salvadorians at their will. Wendy Clavijo and Sherly Cordova talked about it in our studios.
