Description: Six-year-old's Lemonade Stand.

Six-year-old Annabella Kunse from Broomfield can't spell the words "community service," but with a little help from her mom Jaimi, she's learning what it means. "I wanted her to know that community service is a way of life rather than something you got to do when you were older," her mother Jaimi Kunse said. And what better place to start than at the Lakewood Department of Public Safety. "We started with Broomfield where we live and then just kind of branched out to the other police departments as we go," Kunse said. The setup is classic "kid" lemonade with cookies, pudding and, of course, lukewarm lemonade served up in plastic cups. There is no charge for the goodies, but there is a tip jar, that is filling up fast. "Learning customer service. How to treat other people but also the big thank you. There's people out there who do a lot of us," Kunse said. All the proceeds from the tip jar, in excess of $40, will go to buying more goodies to set up future lemonade stands. Annabella may not know how to spell "community service," but she doesn't have to since she already knows how it's done.

Description: Goats in Roxborough State Park.

On this calm and serene morning in the wild land, urban interface of Roxborough State Park, more than 400 goats storm the ground. "They know what their job is," said goat herder, Lani Malmberg, owner of Goat

Green. The goats are there for three reasons: Weeds, Fire Mitigation and Soil Erosion. This herd will eat more than one ton of food per day. Resident Richard Hart calls it a win-win. "There's always going to be a risk of fire and hopefully these goats will help us reduce that risk," said Hart, a member of the Roxborough Park Fire Mitigation Committee. The goats get to eat and the ecosystem thrives. "I'm very interested in how they are cleaning out the under story and they do a fantastic job of it," Hart said. "They prefer brush and trees, poisonous things, pokey things, dry things and grass is their last choice," said Malmberg. Moved from location to location, this herd never bites off more than they can chew. "Because the weeds are smarter than the good plants. The goats are the only things smarter than the weeds and the only thing smarter than a goat is a border collie," said Malmberg. "We can reduce the biomass by 40-50% without destroying the ambience of the community," Hart said. "So they eat all that and then the poop is broken down into little pellets and that is the nutrients of carbon, nitrogen, phosphorous, boron, sulphur, and magnesium. Those are all released back into the soil then. It's very good for the environment, it's very good for the people," Malmberg said. This is the third year the Roxborough Park Fire Mitigation Committee has brought the goats in. The committee said goats are the most environmentally friendly option they have.

Description: Secret Teen Sites.

Sexting in schools is a growing problem, even with kids as young as fourth and fifth grades. Sure, you know about Snapchat and Instagram. What about Kik and AskFm? How about Omegle? And now, there are other apps out there to hide those apps. Authorities are worried. It's not just sharing inappropriate pictures and messages, but all of this is opening up our kids to becoming victims of sexual predators. The Jefferson County District Attorney's Office has one of the leading programs in the country to not only take down predators, but also to educate kids and parents about the dangers. Mike Harris has been the leader of "The Cheezo Unit" since 1996. His team has arrested 853 predators. This year, they have already arrested 52 people. We paid them a visit and were surprised at how quickly someone can get in trouble online. Harris was showing us an app called "Omegle" where users are anonymous. Child predators use the site to gather information on children. Within seconds, Harris, posing as a 14-year-old girl, was approached by a 45-year-old man. Within minutes, the suspect was asking to meet for sex. Harris said, "He is asking me what I like to keep secrets about." It's not just apps, it's online, in games, and in real life. We met a 14-year-old girl who met a boy on Xbox Live. The boy claimed to be 11 years old. The girl got suspicious when he asked her to meet. She said, "He didn't want me to tell my parents. He said don't tell your parents, they don't need to find out, it's just between you and me. That's when I was like, 'oh no, this is not good, what do I do?' At that time, I didn't know who to ask for help, at that time, I was too afraid to ask my parents, I was afraid they would be angry with me." Her parents did find out, likely just in time. Her mom told us, "That's my biggest fear, she would meet with this guy. Who knows what would've happened. It's creepy, it takes the innocence away from your kids, even being in your own home, playing a fun game. It's scary because we are finding more and more kids making mistakes." Harris knows kids will make mistakes. He and the Cheezo Unit travel to schools around the metro area teaching children how to be safe online. His number one message to kids: only talk online to people you already know in person. He said, "It's so simple it sounds stupid but if you only talk to people you know face-to-face, then you don't have to worry about meeting a creeper. Then all we have to worry about is the mistakes you make when you're with your friends." And his number one piece of advice for parents: set parental controls on your child's phone. "For every app I tell you to worry about, there's another app coming out that kids are already using, so the best way to combat that is to constantly check your kids' apps. Is that a pain? Yes. But you can eliminate that pain by again putting the parental controls," Harris said.

Description: Season of Sharing Toy Drive.

Christmas may still be several days away, but it sure felt like it Monday at the Salvation Army. Thousands of Denver area families were handed bags full of toys that were donated to the Salvation Army in recent weeks through the Angel Tree program and FOX 31's Season of Sharing Toy Drive. The Salvation Army estimates more than 100 families were served every hour on Monday. In fact, more than 25,000 children in the Denver area will receive toys from the Salvation Army this year. That's up more than 30 percent from last year. "It's an interesting thing because we're hearing the economy is doing really well, but the need seems to still be there," said Lt. Kelsey Pearce with the Salvation Army. The Salvation Army was facing a big toy shortage this year. However, Coloradans came through late last week, donating more than 3,000 toys and over $1,000 in cash and gift cards during FOX 31's annual Season of Sharing Toy Drive to benefit the Salvation Army. "It's my favorite day of the year. We see tears. We see smiles. We see kids literally jumping for joy when they receive these toys and that kind of keeps us going I think," said Lt. Pearce. If you signed up to receive Christmas help from the Salvation Army but weren't able to pick up your presents, no worries. The Salvation Army will be giving away those toys on Christmas Eve at the Colorado Convention Center.

Description: Marijuana Edible Suckers Recalled.

Denver-based pot-infused manufacturing business Mountain High Suckers has voluntarily recalled over 100,000 units of marijuana products, the city of Denver announced Wednesday. The recall is due to the presence of potentially unsafe pesticide residues, according to the City of Denver. The recalled products are marijuana infused edibles consisting of suckers, lozenges and powdered candy, determined to have been derived from contaminated plant material purchased from Western Remedies and Rocky Mountain Farmacy, two cultivation facilities in Denver. Samples of these marijuana infused products had residual levels of Imidacloprid and Myclobutanil, two pesticides the Colorado Department of Agriculture has determined cannot be used legally on marijuana in Colorado. The Mountain High Suckers products subject to the recall were widely distributed to Colorado businesses. The City of Denver has a full list of the label information with identification numbers of all the products subject to the recall. The Cannabist reports that Mountain High Suckers officials posted news Wednesday about the recall on its Facebook page: “A couple of weeks ago it was brought to our attention that our products may contain pesticides that have been deemed unusable on cannabis,” the statement reads. “We decided to take a proactive step and submit samples of all of our products for pesticide testing so we can help make sure that our products are safe. “Going forward, we will be voluntarily submitting every concentrate batch we make for full pesticide screening before we make products.” The Facebook page was unavailable as of Wednesday at noon. There have been no reports of illness and the possible health impact of consuming marijuana products with unapproved pesticide residues is unknown, the City of Denver said. Consumers with concerns about their personal health should contact their physician with related questions. Consumers who have these recalled products should dispose of the products or return them to the store from which they were purchased. For more information about returns, Mountain High Suckers can be reached at info@mountainhighsuckers.com or 303-733-3957. Consumers with questions or concerns about recalled product or pesticide residues in marijuana products are encouraged to contact the product retailer and/or the DEH Public Health Inspections division at phicomments@denvergov.org or 720-913-1311.

Description: New Mammogram Guideline Concerns.

Screen later and less often: the controversial new breast cancer screening guidelines put out by the American Cancer Society. A new perspective comes out as some survivors say, without early checks, they'd be dead. Aristea Brady introduces us to one of those women and her radiologist who say they have an important message all women need to hear. Here is what the American cancer society now recommends for women at average risk of breast cancer. First you have an option to start screening at 40. Second there's a hard recommendation to screen annually starting at 45. Then by age 55, you should screen every other year. Self-exams are no longer necessary and they recommend doctors stop manual breast exams. While this is the gist of the new guidelines, some doctors and patients alike say there's more to the story. Lindsay Fryer's story starts similar to most people who get unexpected news on an idle Monday. “I was active, healthy, normal 30 year old and one day just felt a lump in my breast,” Fryer says. “And that's when they said you know I think we need to biopsy this.” Not a week had passed before she got a phone call. “You have a very aggressive form of cancer and the only way to treat it is with chemo,” she recalls. Although the lump was small, Lindsay underwent radiation, chemo, even a double mastectomy, at 30, to get rid of the cancer. “I lost my hair and my breasts and those two things are what define your femininity so for me my identity was gone,” said Fryer. Not six months later, her mother was also diagnosed with a type of breast cancer. “As a result of what my daughter was going through, then I ended up having to increase what I was doing on a yearly basis more,” said Ellen Goldstein, Fryer's mother. “By the time they got to the mammogram for me is when they found out that I also had a problem going on.” Following her daughter's example, she too, got a double mastectomy. “It was not an easy time to have both things happening at the same time,” said Goldstein. Ellen

Goldstein says her surgery was the easy part, watching Lindsay fight cancer and her other daughter living now in cancer's shadows, was the hard part. "It's very hard to watch, here's my daughter and now my other daughter having to face similar things-- it's not what I went through, it's what my girls are going through," said Goldstein. In younger women, like Lindsay, the cancer is often more aggressive. Lindsay says this is one of the reasons she takes issue with the new American Cancer Society guidelines that give a hard recommend to screen later. "The fact that they are moving it up, it's frightening because it's the younger women that need to be more in tune and more aware," said Lindsay. Dr. Lora Barke was Lindsay's radiologist. She is the medical director at the Invision Sally Jobe, a center specializing in breast imaging. Dr. Barke says breast cancer is one of the few diseases where patients have an option to choose prevention. "It's one of the cancers we can screen for so it's such a shame people aren't taking advantage of that screening tool," said Barke. She says one of the reasons the a-c-s announced the less strict guidelines is because of the potential for mammograms to create false positives. "They are saying that that is of potential harm to the patient because they had to come back for additional imaging," said Barke. "Harm from a physiological perspective or emotional perspective? Not at all, from an emotional perspective-- and potential cost perspective." Lindsay says she was not afraid of a false positive. And while the study says women with a family history or who carry the 'breast cancer gene' may need to screen earlier, Dr. Barke points to a startling statistic for people without a predisposition. "75 percent of cancers are in patients who have no family history of breast cancer," said Barke. These women say they want to make their point known: the risks of self-exams and mammograms are minimal... The benefits, often life saving. "We are young, but we are not immune and it can happen. I'm proof that it can happen. Own your body, own your health and be your best advocate," said Fryer." Because of the new guidelines-- you might notice your insurance plan changing. Experts say they will take into account the updated recommendations when looking at their coverage policies. Dr. Barkie says, bottom line-- there is no one size fits all approach. Everyone's risk is different. She recommends going to a comprehensive breast center and talking to prevention specialists to determine what screening regimen is best for you.

Description: Colorado Springs Shooting.

A somber sight lights up the streets of Colorado Springs as officers escort the body of their fallen brother, Officer Garrett Swasey away from Friday's deadly crime scene. "this country is filled with heroes. People that are willing to put their lives at risk to protect their neighbors." But a day after Robert Lewis Dear allegedly gunned down twelve people outside this Planned Parenthood clinic there remains more questions than answers. The biggest being why. "you can certainly infer what it may have been in terms of where it took place and the manner in which it took place. But we don't have any confirmation." Two civilians and a police officer were killed. Nine others including five officers were injured in the attack. Ozy licano was shot in the parking lot of Planned Parenthood. He managed to escape to a nearby king super's.

But 15 Planned Parenthood employees and nine patients were trapped inside. The standoff lasted more than five hours. The suspect firing at officers as police worked to distract him. Just before five last night, Dear finally surrendered. But not before lives were taken victims of yet another senseless act of violence in Colorado.

Description: San Bernadino Mass Shootings.

The 355th mass shooting of the year in what police are focusing on right now, after killing the husband and wife attackers who killed a dozen people at a holiday work party. Something prompted Syed Rizwan Farook to storm off angrily. It ended as a bloodbath with 14 people dead and 17 more wounded. Dressed in black, carrying semi-automatic rifles, authorities say that they unleashed a massacre Wednesday at the party hosted by the San Bernardino County, California, Health Department. That was their first brazen act. Then they led police on a chase. Farook fired while Malik drove. They died in a hail of bullets when confronted by 21 officers. The city's police chief said there was a dispute at the event "under circumstances that were described as angry." The level of preparation, the amount of firepower suggest meticulous planning. Authorities don't yet know. Nor do they know of any interaction Farook and Malik had in the past with police. Neither of them were known to the FBI or on a list of potentially radicalized people. Ten people were still hospitalized Thursday morning, divided evenly between Arrowhead Regional Medical Center and Loma Linda University Medical Center. The Loma Linda hospital CEO, Kerry Heinrich, said two of the victims there were in critical condition. Police have not released the names of those who died.

Description: Peyton Manning Pulled from Bronco Game.

DENVER — In what was supposed to be a day of celebration for quarterback Peyton Manning turned out to be a disaster as he was benched in the Broncos' 29-13 loss to the Kansas City Chiefs on Sunday for their second consecutive loss. Manning became the NFL's all-time passing leader in the first quarter, but he threw four interceptions — three in the first half — and the Chiefs' Cairo Santos made five field goals as Kansas City snapped a seven-game losing streak against Denver. The Broncos avoided being shut out at home for the first time in franchise history when Ronnie Hillman scored from 1 yard out with 5:27 left in the game. The Broncos have played 425 regular-season home games without getting shut out. They last were shutout on Sept. 20, 1992, in a 30-0 loss at Philadelphia. The Broncos have scored in 366 consecutive regular-season games. Manning was a dreadful 5 of 20 for 35 yards and a 0.0 quarterback rating, the lowest of his career. He was pulled by coach Gary Kubiak with 6:34 to play in the third quarter and replaced by Brock Osweiler. Osweiler was an upgrade for the Broncos offense, which didn't take its first snap in Chiefs territory until there was less than two minutes remaining in the third quarter. And on Osweiler's second drive, he had already surpassed Manning's passing yards in the game. Osweiler finished with 146 yards and a 7-yard touchdown pass to Andre Caldwell. And while the defense kept the Broncos in the game by limiting the Chiefs to five field goals, Manning's performance held back the team. Manning surpassed Brett Favre for the most passing yards in NFL history with a 4-yard completion to Ronnie Hillman in the first quarter. Favre held the previous record of 71,838 yards. The game was briefly stopped as the crowd rose to cheer Manning, and the ball was given to the executive director of the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Relive the game below as it unfolded. The Broncos (7-2) still lead the AFC West by three games and face former coach John Fox and the Bears in Chicago next week at 11 a.m.
