America's aging baby boomers are headed for a shock as they near retirement. In addition to Social Security, the pillars of retirement income for Americans have been either lifetime corporate pensions or employee-contribution plans such as 401Ks. But both retirement strategies are in trouble. Buffeted by pension cuts, corporate bankruptcies, and the 2001-2002 stock market crash, most boomers now expect to be working into their retirement years.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem is still dependent on how you look at it. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most controversial areas in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Tied to Sex Abuse in '70s, Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim West, had been outed by the town's newspaper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had once sponsored legislation forbidding gays from teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of his office to lure them into sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

For nearly a century, humans forgot their glorious past and huddled in a state of ignorance and fear. Scientists have uncovered evidence from around the world that indicates that the early Dark Ages may have been triggered by an actual event that occurred around 535 A.D. Science writer David Keys believes that the cause was a natural phenomenon of cataclysmic proportions. Determined to discover the exact nature of this catastrophe, and to understand its political, economic and social repercussions, he embarks on a scientific odyssey that ranges from Greenland to the Antarctica; from the Americas to the Far East. At the center of a stunningly-complex chain of events seems to be a loud bang (according to Keys this was a volcanic explosion equal to two thousand million Hiroshima size bombs.) The subsequent environmental calamity, he believes, affected human civilization from Mongolia to Constantinople, precipitating plague, famine, death, great migration, the fall of the great Mexican city of Teotihuacan, the Anglo-Saxon victory over the Celts, and may even have played a role in the rise of Islam.

On May 6, 2005, the residents of Spokane, Washington, awoke to one of the strangest headlines in the town's history: "West Ties Using Office to Lure Young Men". The popular, socially conservative Republican mayor of Spokane, Jim Walsh, had been outed in the paper The Spokesman-Review. The paper told the sordid story of a man with two lives: in public, he had sponsored legislation teaching in public schools, while in private, the paper alleged, he was trawling for young men online, using the trappings of the sexual relationships. But as bizarre as the revelations were, so too were the newspaper's methods. For months, a middle-aged "forensic computer specialist" had posed as an eighteen-year-old boy online, engaging the mayor in a relationship that became more and more intimate, ultimately exploding on the front page of the newspaper. With unfettered access to all the principal players, FRONTLINE explores how this story forced an all-American town to confront its most basic feelings about homosexuality and sheds new light on the confusing, often contradictory, experience of gay people themselves in a place far from the main battlefields of the culture wars.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem it is still depends on who you ask. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most pro-military communities in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

With critical midterm elections just days away, we tell you what to watch for and why. Tonight, on "Washington Week," a year of debate over the war. Rep. Christopher Shays: (From tape.) said, "I support our being in Iraq. I don't care its impact on my election". A year of scandal. "Congressman Foley duped a lot of people, and he deceived me, too", claims Rep. Dennis Hastert (R-IL). From a political ad, Conrad Burns took $150,000 from convicted lobbyist Jack Abramoff and his associates. And a year of voter discontent. Sen. Joseph Lieberman (D-CT) said, "It would be a mistake for the voters to use me as a way to get a message to George Bush". A campaign with its share of verbal miscues. Sen. George Allen (R-VA), said, "This fellow here over here with the yellow shirt - Macaca or whatever his name is", and Sen. John Kerry (D-Ma) "You study hard and you do your homework and you make an effort to be smart, you can do well. If you don't, you get stuck in Iraq." And a campaign with cutting edge issues. Sen. Jim Talent (R-MO) said, "I supported the marriage amendment. I believe marriage is a relationship between a man and a woman." "Stem cell research offers hope to millions of Americans", said Michael J. Fox. The president this week made a last ditch appeal to reliable Republicans. President George Bush said, "It's good to be in a part of the world where the cowboy hats outnumber the ties." But for Republicans, the bad signs are outnumbering the good. Elections 2006, with analysis and reporting by Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the Wall Street Journal, Jackie Calmes of the Wall Street Journal, and Michael Duffy of TIME Magazine.

Washington turned upside down: the Democrats in, Rumsfeld out. Tonight, on "Washington Week." President George Bush said, "If you look at race by race, it was close. The cumulative effect, however, was not too close. It was a thumping." Even the president could not find a silver lining this time, as Democrats partied from coast to coast. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "Tonight is a great victory for the American people." Republicans licked their wounds. Senator George Allen (R-VA) declares, "The people of Virginia, they have spoken, and I respect their decision." Don Rumsfeld lost his job and Pres. Bush said, "I named a good man to succeed Donald Rumsfeld, former CIA Director Bob Gates." And both parties rethought the way they do business. Tonight we'll assess the impact of Election 2006, with Gloria Borger of CBS News and US News, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and James Barnes of National Journal.

For nearly a century, humans forgot their glorious past and huddled in a state of ignorance and fear. Scientists have uncovered evidence from around the world that indicates that the early Dark Ages may have been triggered by an actual event that occurred around 535 A.D. Science writer David Keys believes that the cause was a natural phenomenon of cataclysmic proportions. Determined to discover the exact nature of this catastrophe, and to understand its political, economic and social repercussions, he embarks on a scientific odyssey that ranges from Greenland to the Antarctica; from the Americas to the Far East. At the center of a stunningly-complex chain of events seems to be a loud bang (according to Keys this was a volcanic explosion equal to two thousand million Hiroshima size bombs.) The subsequent environmental calamity, he believes, affected human civilization from Mongolia to Constantinople, precipitating plague, famine, death, great migration, the fall of the great Mexican city of Teotihuacan, the Anglo-Saxon victory over the Celts, and may even have played a role in the rise of Islam.

Iraq. The word itself has transcended geography and now has a new definition: "problem." But how big a problem it is still depends on who you ask. With a crucial mid-term election days away, NOW put Iraq's "problem" status to the test by traveling to one of the most pro-military communities in the country. In Texas' 31st Congressional district, home to America's largest active army base, we take a penetrating and surprising look at the people and politics of President Bush's home state. On NOW Online (www.pbs.org/now), watch web-exclusive video reports about two Texas candidates, both veterans, both making the war the center of their campaigns, but each coming at it from a radically different point of view. Finally, no one could ever accuse journalist Andrew Sullivan of being shy with his opinions. In an insightful interview, he talks to David Brancaccio about what the mid-term elections will mean for Republicans now and in the future. Are they doomed? Andrew says yes...and no.

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

A tiny government agency has a well-intentioned mission: to channel federal contracts to charities that train and employ workers who are blind or have severe disabilities. Known as JWOD, the program is so obscure that even some members of Congress are unaware of its existence. But when journalists from THE OREGONIAN exposed abuses by JWOD's biggest contractor, the program took on a much higher, if unwanted, profile.

For the past few months, we've been watching the school system in New Orleans undergo an amazing comeback. But the story of what some call the most expansive charter school experiment in history is really about the children, parents and educators on the front line of the Big Easy's upheaval. On this week's broadcast and in a web-exclusive video profile, NOW takes a closer look at the New Orleans plan and some residents living at the tenuous crossroads of despair and hope. As a special extra, read NOW Producer Brian Epstein's essay about his experiences documenting this story and how a chance encounter affected his outlook. In this week of Thanksgiving, we give thanks to YOU for watching, downloading, and supporting our efforts to reconnect America to the ideals upon which it was founded. Now pass the cranberry sauce!

From the huskies of the frozen north to the basenjis of the Congo River basin and the golden retrievers in America's backyards, dogs have carved a niche for themselves in every human society. How did this unique relationship develop? What can the latest breakthroughs in genetics tell us of the secrets of dog origins and breeding? And can dog sociologists and psychiatrists unravel the puzzling, lovable, and often maddening quirks of dog behavior? Despite such variation, all domestic dogs, as well as their common ancestor, the gray wolf, have virtually identical genes. How can science explain this incredible diversity? In Dogs, NOVA launches an entertaining and affectionate search for the secrets of dog variation and behavior. We'll visit state-of-the-art dog labs where the latest developments in genetic mapping and even cloning are in the air. Along the way, breeders and dog experts as well as scientists will help explore the bond we share with these remarkable animals, seeking insights into the future of our oldest and closest relationship with another animal species.

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

In March we first told you the story of Peggy Buryj, the mother of a U.S. soldier killed in Iraq. Many questions remained unanswered about her son's final moments -- how he died and why -- without much information or help from the army. Now, with Congress more likely than ever to reevaluate our country's military tactics in Iraq, we revisit her case and other instances of the army misinforming families of soldiers killed in Iraq and Afghanistan. Also on the show, David Brancaccio talks with a 25-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency about past intelligence blunders and what to expect next. Online, NOW's Maria Hinojosa interviews the always-interesting and outspoken U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel. What does he really think of Dick Cheney?

Last week we told you the Democrats are in charge. This week we ask what difference will it make? Tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-CA) said, "As we say in church let there be peace on Earth and let it begin with us, let the healing begin". Maybe not so fast. Before the victory parties even ended Democrats were fighting among themselves in the House overshadowing the more orderly transition in the Senate. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "We will be a robust minority, a vigorous minority and hopefully a minority that is only in that condition for a couple of years". Marked by one remarkable comeback. But will Democratic control make a difference in Iraq? Will it make a difference as presidential hopefuls prepare for 2008? And will it make a difference on issues that affect your life? Tonight, the environment. Covering these stories, Charles Babington of the Washington Post, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Jeanne Cummings of the Wall Street Journal, and Margaret Kriz of National Journal.

Bush prepares to meet with Iraq's prime minister as the search goes on for ideas on what to do. What are the options for the U.S. and where are they likely to come from, tonight on "Washington Week." Kofi Annan [UN Secretary General] says, "The U.S. in a way is trapped in Iraq; trapped in the sense that it cannot stay and it cannot leave." After one of the most violent weeks in Iraq since the war began, now what? President Bush hopes for some answers soon from Jim Baker's Iraq study group with no shortage of advice. Rep. Duncan Hunter claims, "I have an alternative and it's called 'Go Iraqi.'" Sen. John McCain says, "Another 20,000 troops-" Sen. Barack Obama suggests, "Phased redeployment-." In the meantime, a summit next week with Iraq's prime minister. Why now? What's behind the move by Iran and Syria to offer help of their own? And whatever the president decides, how much support is he likely to get, especially from his own party. Covering these stories: Linda Robinson of US News and World Report, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Barbara Slavin of USA Today, and Peter Baker of the Washington Post.

Author Bruce Feiler brings his award winning book to life as he takes an archeological odyssey to visit the inscrutable desert landscape where the world's greatest religions were born. The three-part series takes viewers to some of the Bible's most inspiring places -- from the heights of Mount Ararat, where according to the Bible Noah's ark landed; to the desert in Turkey, where Abraham first heard the words of God and to the summit of Mt. Sinai, where Moses received the Ten Commandments. Combining breathtaking images, sweeping landscapes and intimate snapshots, the documentary puts a visual face on the stories that continue to inspire the human spirit. The first episode, "Go Forth: From Creation to Abraham," focuses on initial problems entering hostile areas in the Middle East, meeting Avner Goren -- a leading biblical archaeologist who becomes his traveling partner -- and the forbidding and dangerous environment of the Mesopotamian highlands, where civilization was born.

Egypt. Land of the Pharaohs--and of the Bible. Bruce Feiler continues his journey through the greatest stories ever told, by retracing Joseph's path to Egypt after his brothers sell him into bondage. When Joseph interprets the Pharaoh's dreams, he rises from slave to the heights of power and even brings his brothers and father Jacob to live in Egypt. Feiler takes us from the great temple of Karnak in Luxor, formerly ancient Thebes--to the pyramids and sphinx of Giza, and descends into the royal burial tombs in the Valley of the Kings. As he treks by camel, boat, horseback and even pyramid-climbing, he discovers how the ancient Egyptian culture and religion influenced the Israelites during their centuries-long stay in Egypt, especially in the importance placed on dreams and story-telling. Feiler explores the ancient ruins of cities where the Israelites were said to toil under an oppressive pharaoh. Beginning at the shallow waters of the Nile, Feiler retraces the story of one of the Bible's greatest figures, Moses, and his eventual confrontation with Pharaoh to let his people go. Did the Israelites build the pyramids? What could have caused the ten plagues? Was it really the Red Sea Moses crossed? As Feiler confronts these questions, on the very body of water that could have been where the waters were parted, he realizes that it isn't the location, or even the event that's important, but that it was experienced as an act of God.

The Sinai Desert. In the concluding chapter of "Walking the Bible," Bruce Feiler follows the Israelite's 40 year trek through what the Bible calls a "great and terrible wilderness." Feiler experiences the stark reality of the Sinai desert where it's a struggle simply to survive. He finds the locations said to be where God provided water and food for the Israelites - and discovers the secret of the tamarisk tree, which secretes a sweet, honey-like substance called "manna." In the shadow of the mountain believed to be the Biblical Mount Sinai, Feiler visits St. Catherine's Monastery, the oldest operating church in the world. He attends the services, a powerful, unchanged ritual of 1,500 years, and sees what's claimed to be the real "burning bush" in which God spoke to Moses. One of the monks, Texas-born Father Justin, shows him the Monastery's world-renowned library of priceless religious art and manuscripts. Later, when Feiler climbs Mt. Sinai where Moses is said to have received the Ten Commandments, he is struck by the spiritual significance of the land, and its relationship to the people, and to God. As he follows the 40 year route of the Israelites, he visits a local Bedouin family who also derive sustenance from the desert and travels to the "lost city" of Petra in Jordan, where the Israelites may have lived for many years. Nearing the end of Moses' journey, Feiler climbs Mt. Nebo, where God shows Moses the Promised Land the Israelites are about to enter. At the end of his own journey, Feiler realizes that although Moses is denied entrance himself, it is not the land after all that is important for Moses. It is his meeting with God.

With 35 million people in America now age sixty-five and older, "the old old"-those over 85-are now considered the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population. While medical advances have enabled an unprecedented number of Americans to live longer and healthier lives, this new longevity has also had unintended consequences. For millions of Americans, living longer also means serious chronic illness and a protracted physical decline that can require an immense amount of care, often for years and sometimes even decades. Yet just as the need for care is rising, the number of available caregivers is dwindling. With families more dispersed than ever and a healthcare system overburdened, many experts fear that we are on the threshold of a major crisis in care.

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

In March we first told you the story of Peggy Buryj, the mother of a U.S. soldier killed in Iraq. Many questions remained unanswered about her son's final moments -- how he died and why -- without much information or help from the army. Now, with Congress more likely than ever to reevaluate our country's military tactics in Iraq, we revisit her case and other instances of the army misinforming families of soldiers killed in Iraq and Afghanistan. Also on the show, David Brancaccio talks with a 25-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency about past intelligence blunders and what to expect next. Online, NOW's Maria Hinojosa interviews the always-interesting and outspoken U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel. What does he really think of Dick Cheney?

This program tells the story behind the construction and destruction of one of the most heralded World War II engineering feats: the 250-mile River Kwai railway in Thailand. Forced to work under savage conditions by the Japanese army, more than 100,000 Allied POWs and Asian laborers lost their lives in the building of the railway, which immediately became a top target of the Allied forces. To destroy it, they had to rely on new and relatively untested technological weapons -- AZON bombs, the guided, radio-controlled precursors to the modern military's smart bombs. Using first-hand survivor testimony, modern science, a blend of reconstructions and archival footage, and never-before-seen photographs of the railway as it was being constructed, "Bridge on the River Kwai" will piece together the real story behind the birth and death of this lost railway. Among those featured in the program is Frank Nelson, one of many specially trained American cadets responsible for destroying the railway, who will speak publicly for the first time about his experience at the head of the AZON squadron.

Bush prepares to meet with Iraq's prime minister as the search goes on for ideas on what to do. What are the options for the U.S. and where are they likely to come from, tonight on "Washington Week." Kofi Annan [UN Secretary General] says, "The U.S. in a way is trapped in Iraq; trapped in the sense that it cannot stay and it cannot leave." After one of the most violent weeks in Iraq since the war began, now what? President Bush hopes for some answers soon from Jim Baker's Iraq study group with no shortage of advice. Rep. Duncan Hunter claims, "I have an alternative and it's called 'Go Iraq!'" Sen. John McCain says, "Another 20,000 troops-" Sen. Barack Obama suggests, "Phased redeployment-." In the meantime, a summit next week with Iraq's prime minister. Why now? What's behind the move by Iran and Syria to offer help of their own? And whatever the president decides, how much support is he likely to get, especially from his own party. Covering these stories: Linda Robinson of US News and World Report, Helene Cooper of the New York Times, Barbara Slavin of USA Today, and Peter Baker of the Washington Post.

For the past few months, we've been watching the school system in New Orleans undergo an amazing comeback. But the story of what some call the most expansive charter school experiment in history is really about the children, parents and educators on the front line of the Big Easy's upheaval. On this week's broadcast and in a web-exclusive video profile, NOW takes a closer look at the New Orleans plan and some residents living at the tenuous crossroads of despair and hope. As a special extra, read NOW Producer Brian Epstein's essay about his experiences documenting this story and how a chance encounter affected his outlook. In this week of Thanksgiving, we give thanks to YOU for watching, downloading, and supporting our efforts to reconnect America to the ideals upon which it was founded. Now pass the cranberry sauce!
