Segment One—Akaska SD Walleye Fishing Tournament

Lake Oahe was chosen as the site of an international walleye fishing championship in 2011. (Unlike many big-name tournaments, this one features a catch-and release rule designed to protect fish resources.) SDPB rides along with several of the pros participating in a pre-tournament scouting of the big lake - a rare chance to see some of the nation's best competitive anglers at work and up close.

Producer: Chad Andersen

Segment Two—Wild Rainbows

Deerfield Lake is now just the second place in South Dakota where you can catch a wild-born Rainbow Trout. (Before now, Spearfish Creek was the only place where wild rainbows had established themselves.) SDPB's Charles Michael Ray takes a look at a Game Fish and Parks study on the new population of wild-born Rainbows in the headwaters of Deerfield Lake.

Producer: Charles Michael Ray

Segment Three—Schoenbeck's Golf South Dakota

Lee Shoenbeck and his teenage son Jake took the summer of 2010 to golf all of South Dakota's golf courses. SDPB's Stephanie Rissler had a chance to meet up with this golf duo in Sisseton SD to learn more about this 3 month adventure that taught them both a lot about golf, each other and themselves. This adventure included both private and public courses including courses that many people in the state didn't even know existed. The Schoenbeck kept the scorecard from every course and have framed a map showcasing the routes they traveled to tackle all of South Dakota's greens.

Producer: Stephanie Rissler

Segment Four—Dakotalapse Photography

Randy Halverson uses a still camera to create motion video frame by frame. Beyond an average nature video, Halverson tracks the path of the Milky Way and surrounding stars as they move across the sky at night. Randy travels around the country to create his pieces, but prefers to shoot on land near his home in central South Dakota. Corn, wheat and sunflower fields are often featured in the foreground as the heavens above appear to rotate around the earth. A SDPB crew met up with Halverson for a photo session toward the end of August.

Producer: Melissa Hamersma Sievers

Our South Dakota – The USS South Dakota Silver Service

A brief history of the first battleship's silver service, which is now on display at the South Dakota State Cultural Heritage Center in Pierre

Segment One—The Art of the Wood-fired Kiln

People have been molding clay and firing it into useful objects for thousands of years. But, considering the long history of pottery, artist Jess Elofsen of rural Brandon describes modern methods as those developed in, say, the last couple thousand years. Elofsen does do contemporary ceramics, but part of the process he uses goes back to the very beginning.

Producer: Kealey Bultena

Segment Two—South Dakota's Story of Stained Glass

Art in stained glass can be found in churches big and small through out South Dakota. Much of that glass was installed years ago and in some cases, little is known about who crafted it. An Aberdeen researcher has set out to uncover those histories, finding stories of faith and beauty along the way.

Producer: Stephanie Rissler

Segment Three—Lantern Slides of the Loemker Collection

Photographic techniques and technologies keep evolving of course, but most people hang on to at least a few of their old pictures and slides. Pass those pictures down from one generation to the next and you might one day have a valuable historical record. A collection of relatively rare images recently donated to the South Dakota State Historical Society proves the point.

Producer: Brian Gevik

Segment Four—The Black Hills Photo Shootout

Photographers rarely need a reason to create images in the Black Hills, but a yearly photographer's workshop during the peak of the fall color provides an additional motivation Photographers from around the country come to the Black Hills Photo Shootout for more than just the pictures.

Producer: Melissa Hamersma Sievers

Our South Dakota – The Oahe Chapel

A brief history of an historic South Dakota Landmark near Pierre. Some of South Dakota's earliest places of worship were mission churches. The Oahe Mission on the east bank of the Missouri River, was established in 1874 by the Reverend Thomas L. Riggs.

Segment One—Recording the Old Barns of Clay County

Big old barns dot the landscape all over South Dakota but the view is changing day-by-day as old barns give way to new buildings. An effort to create permanent records of the history and heritage of some of those barns is underway and it's nothing less than a race against time.

Producer: Brian Gevik

Segment Two—The Art of the Barn Quilt

Barn quilts are nothing new in many parts of the country but so far, they haven't really caught on in South Dakota. That's changing, thanks to a handful of quilt enthusiasts and an artist who knows there's more to a good barn quilt than meets the eye.

Producer: Brian Gevik

Segment Three—The Real Farm Girl

More and more, the Internet is becoming a crucial part of rural life. Now, information about farm living isn't just coming into the country, it's going out to a wider world. Here's the story of a young dairy farm manager making sure that the real story gets told.

Producer: Dave Foote

Segment Four—Football by the Numbers

Every autumn in South Dakota, high school football fans gather in Vermillion for the state championships. Final scores tell some of the story, but SDPB's Gary Ellenbolt and Steve Zwemke found a few other interesting numbers to consider.

Producer: Gary Ellenbolt

Segment Five—Inside the Homestake Adams Research and Cultural Center

The Black Hills has a rich and diverse history and part of that history is now being preserved in a new place. The Homestake Adams Research and Cultural Center is now open in Deadwood. It's a treasure trove for anyone wanting to know more about the gold rush days of the Black Hills.

Producer: Charles Michael Ray
