BADGER CLARK

POET AMONG THE PINES

A COWBOY'S PRAYER

(WRITTEN FOR MOTHER)

Oh Lord, I've never lived where churches grow.
I love creation better as it stood
That day You finished it so long ago
And looked upon Your work and called it good.
I know that others find You in the light
That's sifted down through tinted window panes,
And yet I seem to feel You near tonight
In this dim, quiet starlight on the plains.

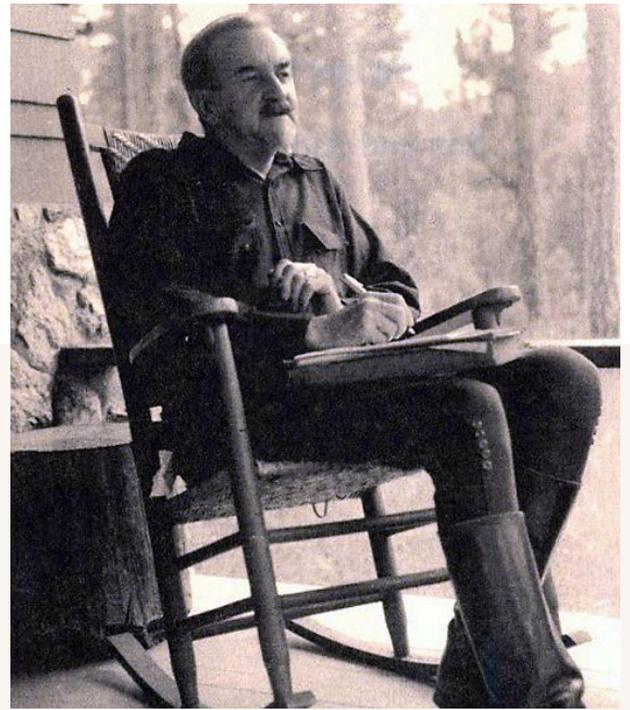

I thank You, Lord, that I am placed so well,
That You have made my freedom so complete;
That I'm no slave of whistle, clock or bell,
Nor weak-eyed prisoner of wall and street.
Just let me live my life as I've begun
And give me work that's open to the sky;
Make me a pardner of the wind and sun,
And I won't ask a life that's soft or high.

Let me be easy on the man that's down;
Let me be square and generous with all.
I'm careless sometimes, Lord, when I'm in town,
But never let 'em say I'm mean or small!
Make me as big and open as the plains,
As honest as the hawse between my knees,
Clean as the wind that blows behind the rains,
Free as the hawk that circles down the breeze!

Forgive me, Lord, if sometimes I forget.
You know about the reasons that are hid.
You understand the things that gall and fret;
You know me better than my mother did.
Just keep an eye on all that's done and said
And right me, sometimes, when I turn aside,
And guide me on the long, dim, trail ahead
That stretches upward toward the Great Divide.

A Cowboy's Prayer; you might have heard it at the rodeo, a wedding, or perhaps even a funeral. For ages, cowboys and those of similar lifestyles have found comfort and familiarity in the words of this poem. Maybe even more significant than the poem itself is the man behind it, Badger Clark. Born Charles Badger Clark Junior on January 1st, 1883, this writer of nature started his profession while simply working as a ranch hand. His time in solitude was spent in observation and consideration, and what began as a poem to his stepmother became one of the best-known cowboy poems in history.

Throughout his lifetime, Badger wrote books of poetry and inspired others with his way of living. A man of simple means paved the way for arts in our state and nation. This October, we will air an hour-long documentary that tells the story of his life. To introduce the feature, we talked with Brad Dumke, producer of Badger Clark: Poet Among The Pines. Brad owns 1856 Media, a production company based in Sioux Falls specializing in films and video for businesses.

"When you have a compelling character like Badger Clark," says Brad, "it was easy for me to dive into it because he was so interesting. There were two different sides of him. There was the one who wanted to be left alone and live alone, and then there was another side who just absolutely adored the public, especially kids. I think the folks who met him found him really dynamic and just wanted to be around him. In a world of distractions that we live in right now, it's important that you do take time out of your day to put away the phone and just connect with what your true self is. That's what he did. He was able to control any distractions around him and think about what was important to him, write it down, and share it with the public. That's probably the most important lesson with him, is to be able to find your true authentic self by being alone with your thoughts."

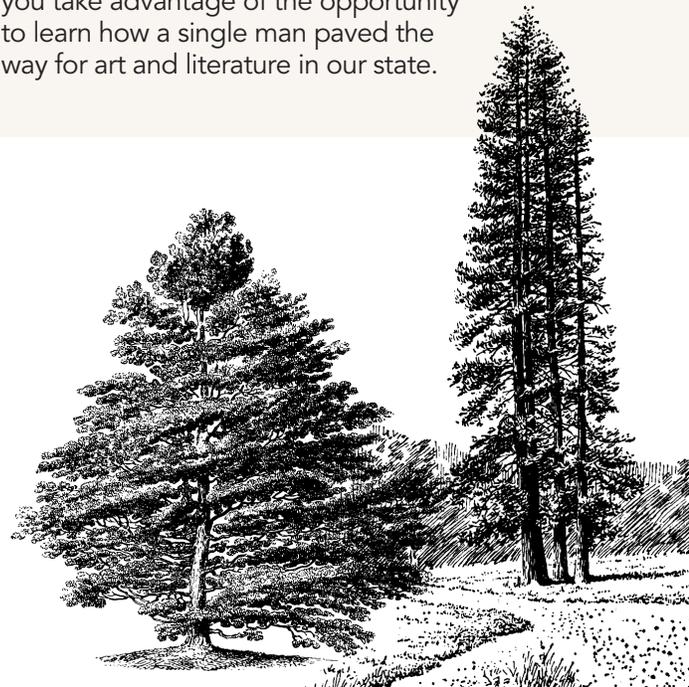

Badger is South Dakota's first poet laureate and was the genesis of this genre. While some may not have thought cowboy literature so profound, Badger's writings united a state of familiar feeling with his words and character. Brad expands on this.

"He invented the genre. He invented cowboy poetry. Now, were there cowboy poets ahead of him before him? I'm sure there were, but none could write like him, and none of them put their thoughts to paper like he did and got published. The folks that go to these poet conventions, especially cowboy poetry conventions, have been influenced by Badger Clark. They model their poetry after him. That's the most prominent influence he had in the state."

After diving into the life of Badger, Brad shares how those who want to learn more about him can get a personal insight into the man he was.

"One of the best ways for people to connect with Badger Clark is to visit his cabin at Custer State Park. It's available during the spring, summer, and fall. His home has been preserved perfectly, as he had left it when he passed away in the fifties. The best way to learn about Badger is to just be where he was, follow his footsteps, and think about what's most important to you. Even sitting on his porch and maybe closing your eyes to connect with nature."

For an inside look at the life of Badger Clark, watch Badger Clark: Poet Among The Pines on Thursday, October 5th at 8pm Central (7 MT). Additionally, SDPB is partnering with Custer State Park to host a Badger Clark Day on October 14th. Mark your calendars for activities and artifacts at the Visitor Center and Badger Hole. We hope you take advantage of the opportunity to learn how a single man paved the way for art and literature in our state.

TATANKA

A WAY OF LIFE

Tatanka: A Way of Life is SDPB's newest documentary series. Focusing on how South Dakota tribes have begun to raise their own herds of buffalo and bringing the animal back to their natural habitat, Tatanka shines a light on the history, story, and future of the buffalo in South Dakota. All tribes within South Dakota have a buffalo program that is reintroducing this animal in a way that not only serves their tribal members but also helps when food is in limited supply. Not only are South Dakota tribes and tribes within the region reintroducing buffalo, but they are also reintroducing the purebred animal. Tatanka chronicles South Dakota's tribal effort to reintroduce the buffalo as a way of life, culture, and use before contact with European settlers. This is a direct testament to tribes exercising their treaty rights and fulfilling their Tribal Sovereignty as their members see fit. The first episode of the three-part series features a buffalo harvest on the Pine Ridge reservation and the story of the White Buffalo Calf Woman.

Buffalo had been the primary food source for many tribes throughout the United States. Native Americans utilized every part of this animal for tools, shelter, clothing, and more. The Legend of the White Buffalo Calf Woman tells the importance of the culture and how the morals and values, such as the seven virtues of the Lakota/Dakota/Nakota, should shape how a person lives with dignity and respect for themselves, and how someone should be treated and treat others. Respect for not only oneself but respect for elders is a key virtue that one must have to walk this path.

Maḥpíya Lúta (Red Cloud Indian School) has been harvesting and processing buffalo to teach their students, the next generation, the traditions and culture of all that entails regarding that way of life. Students of all ages participate in processing the buffalo. Traditionally, the men of the tribe did the hunting, and the women of all ages processed the buffalo for food, tools, shelter, and clothing. Children were raised as a collective and taught these values, mainly at the hands of the elders. Maḥpíya Lúta is not only reintroducing these customs and way of life, but they are allowing the next generation to learn the ways their ancestors existed and provide a potential opportunity to maintain food sovereignty and sustainability but also to capture and teach their future generations the way of their people - the way we respected and used the buffalo, respecting the environment in which we live.

"As we began to discuss some ideas for local programs to produce in conjunction with Ken Burns' American Buffalo, we wanted to tell a story that was not being told by most media in the state of South Dakota—the story of the relationship between indigenous people of South Dakota and the buffalo. To do this successfully, we needed to hear the voices of the people who lived and continue to live the story of tatanka. Because of our relationship with Maḥpíya Lúta (Red Cloud Indian School) and their willingness to allow us to attend the buffalo harvest and record their students reciting the White Buffalo Calf Woman Story in Lakota and English and Richards Two Bulls', the producer of the documentary series, personnel connection with the American Bison as a Lakota, SDPB was able to better tell the story from the perspective of indigenous people. Richard's insight and drive have been the primary force in telling the story of Tatanka. Without our friends and partners in the Native community, this documentary would not be possible.

Tatanka: Way of Life is an ongoing series with the second episode to air in May 2024 and will focus on the Wolakota Buffalo project near Mission, South Dakota. The series will evolve as we go forward, and SDPB will rely on the indigenous people of South Dakota to shape, form, and dictate the stories told in this series, and SDPB will be here to share it with our audience. Richard coined the title Tatanka: A Way of Life. I hope that Tatanka is only the beginning of SDPB sharing the story of South Dakota's Native people and their way of life."

A FILM BY KEN BURNS

The American Buffalo documents the startling swiftness of the species' near extinction in the late 19th century. Numbering an estimated 30 million in the early 1800s, the herds began declining for a variety of reasons, including the lucrative buffalo robe trade, the steady westward settlement of an expanding United States, diseases introduced by domestic cattle and drought. But the arrival of the railroads in the early 1870s and a new demand for buffalo hides to be used in the belts driving industrial machines back East brought thousands of hide hunters to the Great Plains. In just over a decade the number of bison collapsed from 12-15 million to fewer than a thousand, representing one of the most dramatic examples of our ability to destroy the natural world. By 1900, the American buffalo teetered on the brink of disappearing forever, and the Native people of the Plains entered one of the most traumatic moments of their existence.

But the other, lesser-known part of this story, told in the film's second episode, is about the people who set out to save the species from extermination and how they did it. Their actions provide compelling proof that we are equally capable of pulling back from the brink of environmental catastrophe if we set our minds to it.

"It is a quintessentially American story," Ken Burns said, "filled with unforgettable stories and people. But it is also a morality tale encompassing two historically significant lessons that resonate today: how humans can damage the natural world and also how we can work together to make choices to preserve the environment around us. The story of the American buffalo is also the story of Native nations who lived with and relied on the buffalo to survive, developing a sacred relationship that evolved over more than 10,000 years but which was almost completely severed in fewer than 100."

The series was written by Dayton Duncan, who is also the author of the companion book, Blood Memory: The Tragic Decline and Improbable Resurrection of the American Buffalo. It was produced by Burns's longtime colleague Julie Dunfey. Julianna Brannum, a member of the Quahada band of the Comanche Nation of Oklahoma, served as consulting producer. W. Richard West, Jr., a Cheyenne and founding director and director emeritus of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of the American Indian, was the senior advisor.

A Story of Resilience

This one-hour conversation with the filmmaker, Ken Burns, is moderated by Judy Woodruff, and features experts Jason Baldes, Rosalyn LaPier, and Dan Flores. They explore lessons from the film, the early history and special relationship between native American people and the buffalo, its relation to the larger grassland and prairie ecosystems, and Tribal contributions to restoration of the buffalo today.

Cultivating Creativity

Working in conjunction with the South Dakota Art Museum in Brookings and with support provided by Art Bridges, SDPB presents Cultivating Creativity Keith BraveHeart. The art of Keith BraveHeart (Oglala Lakota) honors the past and combines the ironies of the modern world with traditional Lakota life. "A lot of the time what I want to do is to tell a story," says BraveHeart. "Sharing a story that either comes from my culture, comes from the world at large, or from myself. Usually I'm relying on something that's relevant to today."

KATHY & KEITH SPRINKEL

SUPPORTER SPOTLIGHT

"WE'VE BEEN SUPPORTERS FOR MOST OF OUR LIVES TOGETHER. WE'RE TRUE BELIEVERS."

- KEITH SPRINKEL

In the hustle and bustle of every day, it is hard to find time to plan your future more than a few days out, much less years into the future. Have you ever thought about the impact you can have on the world once you've left it? This month, we're highlighting our members who not only think about SDPB in the present, but far into the future. Aberdeen residents Keith and Kathy Sprinkel, are two of SDPB's Legacy Society members who thoughtfully included SDPB in their estate plans. The couple sat with us to share why South Dakota Public Broadcasting is worth supporting.

"I love how SDPB touches every segment of the population from young to old," says Kathy. There's programming for everybody, and we always learn something, even if it's something silly like Sesame Street. I think our favorite thing is the local production, the South Dakota-based productions. We love learning about our state, who is out there, and what they're doing."

SDPB wants our members to feel like more than just a number. A praise that Keith and Kathy shared was the ability to work directly with a member of Friends of SDPB, Theresa Schake, who helped them every step of the way with their estate plans.

"Our visits with Theresa played a big part in it," says Kathy. "We had talked about [estate giving] in the past and knew public broadcasting was something we would always support but didn't really think about giving after we went on. Theresa helped us with that. It was very eye-opening to talk to her about what needs there are and how we can support those needs moving forward. They made that really easy. It wasn't complicated."

Keith shares that they believe their own story is an inspiration for others who might become long-term supporters as well.

"I find it satisfying to be a part of something like Kathy's and my long relationship with public broadcasting. It was a highlight when Theresa started calling us; that was so brilliant on SDPB's part to reach out to their supporters. I would also tell people how easy it is to be a supporter. You give $5 a month out of your checking account or whatever you can afford. It's easy and painless, and it's also very important to help support."

Together, Keith and Kathy have been members for most of their lives, more than 40 years. We will be forever grateful for our dedicated members who pour into us and allow us the power of continued programming and content.

Season 2 of Native America is a groundbreaking portrait of contemporary Indian Country. Building on the success of the first season, this four-part Native directed series reveals the beauty and power of today's Indigenous world. Smashing stereotypes, it follows the brilliant engineers, bold politicians, and cutting-edge artists who draw upon Native tradition to build a better 21st century. Each hour reveals a core tenet of Native heritage: the power of Indigenous design, how language and artistry fuel the soul, the diverse ways that Native women lead, and the resilience of the warrior spirit. Brought to life with dynamic stories of the here and now, these thematic episodes launch an active dialogue between past and present. They reveal the foundational beliefs and traditions that Native Americans carry forward to this day, even as they live fully modern lives.

Season 2 of Native America premieres on October 24 at 8pm (7 MT)
