Protection from Business Scams	LifeCon	9-Apr	7am/6:30a	10min/6min	AM/ FM	Brad Peterson talked with Better Business Bureau State Director Jessie Schmidt joined us this morning. A new study recently released by the Better Business Bureau shows just how widespread scams involving digital currencies are spreading across the United States. Cryptocurrency scams are now the second-most reported scam to the bureau, behind only online shopping scams. The total amount of money stolen is also climbing, to nearly $1-billion. Cryptocurrency scams have become a new version of the old gift card scam, only this time, the scammer asks you to pay in crypto, instead of a card. "So, we're starting to see old scams use crypto as a form of payment," said Schmidt. Crypto is more attractive to scammers because digital currency transactions such as those involving Bitcoin, don't go through banks or credit card companies and are next to impossible to trace, because there's no paper trail.
Protection from Business Scams	LifeCon	7-May	7am/6:30a	10min/6min	AM/FM	Brad Peterson talked with Our guest is Jessie Schmidt of the BBB, as many are looking for ways to financially support Ukraine from here at home, scammers know it's also an opportunity to make a quick buck. Because of this, the Better Business Bureau is urging people to do their homework. Schmidt said in a time like this it's common for scammers to seek people out so it can be easy to fall victim to a scam. The BBB is encouraging everyone to take several minutes to vet exactly where their donation is going. They said it's important for organizations to have a track record in the countries impacted, like Ukraine. You want an organization that knows what it's doing and that can get money where it needs to be so it can do the most good. Vague emotional requests for money should be red flags. If you are unsure after visiting the charity's website, the BBB site Give.org makes the vetting process easier. There you'll find questions you can ask yourself while looking at potential organizations and also a full list of accountability standards the BBB believes trustworthy charities should meet.

Protection from Business Scams	LifeCon	18-Jun	7am/6:30a	10min/ 6 min	AM/FM	Brad Peterson talked with Jessie Schmidt of the Better Business Bureau is our guest.
