"The Road Home" focuses on stories of participants' ancestors in the early 20th century, including the tragic account of Tom Joyner's great-uncles, who were executed in 1915 for a crime that evidence suggests they did not commit, and Bliss Broyard's stunning discovery about the identity of her father - renowned New York Times critic Anatole Broyard - at the time of his death. "A Way Out of No Way" continues to trace the guests' lineages back through the late 1800s to the Civil War, featuring such stories as that of Chris Rock's great-great-grandfather, a black Civil War veteran who was twice elected to the South Carolina State Legislature, and Don Cheadle's great-great-grandparents, who, as Chickasaw Freedmen, struggled to build lives for themselves in Oklahoma after being excluded from the tribal rolls.

Big debates over big issues that could have a direct effect on your life, this week on "Washington Week." Fasten your seat belts: high gas prices, collapsing credit, and big Wall Street bailouts. A consumer said, "Everybody is watching the price of gas. Nobody is talking about the price of a gallon of milk. I got two kids and a gallon of milk is almost $5." Pres. George W. Bush said, "In the long run our economy is going to be fine. Right now we are dealing with a difficult situation." The nation's economy is rocking and rolling but not in a good way. Who pays the price? Sooner or later the presidential candidates will have to deal with all that, but first they've got an election to win. Sen.

Barack Obama (D-IL) spent the week wading in and through one of the nation's most confused and painful debates - race. He said, "The anger is real. It is powerful. And to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races." Did Obama manage to change the subject from the topic of his controversial pastor? Can he keep his critics at bay? And will a last-minute Bill Richardson endorsement help? For Sen. Hillary Clinton (D-NY) the answer to those questions may come in Michigan and Florida. She said, "We won't achieve universal health care. We won't end the housing crisis and get the economy moving again unless we win in Michigan and Florida in November." The Democratic primary by the numbers. And at the Supreme Court, gun control: front and center. Is an outright weapons ban constitutional? The arguments pro and con. Covering the stories this week: David Wessel of The Wall Street Journal, John Harris of Politico, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Linda Greenhouse of The New York Times.

Could a new effort to fight global warming save money and create jobs at the same time? NOW looks at a city-wide plan in Cambridge, Massachusetts, to make all its buildings more energy efficient. Up to 80 percent of emissions in many urban cities comes from buildings. Cambridge hopes that this unprecedented effort to green its buildings will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent in just five years, the equivalent of taking 33,000 cars off the road. If every major city in America took the same approach, it would have a significant impact on the carbon footprint of the United States -- and it would generate tens of millions of new "green" jobs.

At a research site in Fongoli, Senegal, a female chimpanzee breaks off a branch, chews the end to make it sharp, then uses this rudimentary spear to skewer a tasty bushbaby hiding inside a hollow tree. The footage represents an astonishing breakthrough for primate researchers: It's the first time anyone has documented a chimpanzee wielding a carefully prepared, preplanned weapon. But it's only the latest in a slew of extraordinary new findings about ape behavior. The more researchers learn about the great apes -- chimpanzees, bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans -- the more evidence they find of creative intelligence. What, then, is the essential difference between us and them? "Ape Genius," a NOVA-National Geographic special, explores that provocative question and examines research that is illuminating the ape mind.

Ten years ago, stimulants like Ritalin and Adderall were the drugs of choice to treat behavioral issues in children. Today children as young as four years old are being prescribed more powerful anti-psychotic medications that are much less understood. The drugs can cause serious side effects, and virtually nothing is known about their long-term impact. The increase in the use of anti-psychotics is directly tied to the rising incidence of one particular diagnosis - bipolar disorder. Experts estimate that the number of kids with the diagnosis is now more than a million and rising. As the debate over medicating children continues to grow, FRONTLINE producer Marcela Gaviria confronts psychiatrists, researchers and big pharma about the risks and benefits of prescription drugs for troubled children.

A hundred years ago, in communities across the U.S., white residents forced thousands of black families to flee their homes. Even a century later, these towns remain almost entirely white. "Banished" tells the story of three of these communities and their black descendants, who return to learn their shocking histories. By investigating this little-known chapter in American history, the film takes a contemporary look at the legacy of racial cleansing. Through conversations with current residents and the descendants of those who were driven out, "Banished" contemplates questions of privilege, responsibility, denial, healing, reparations and identity. What can be done to redress past injustices? What is the ongoing impact of the expulsions on families and communities today? In the stories of black families whose land and livelihood were stolen, the film illustrates the limits of the American legal system and the need for creative forms of repair.

In The Four-Winged Dinosaur, NOVA investigates the most bizarre of these feathered dinosaurs, which has rekindled a fierce, decades-long debate over the origin of bird flight. The central character in this drama is a strange little dinosaur with wings on its legs as well as its arms. The pigeon-sized Microraptor is the smallest adult dinosaur ever found, perhaps the first known tree-dweller. But could it really fly? NOVA assembles a team of top paleontologists, aeronautical engineers, and paleo-artists to reconstruct Microraptor and build a sophisticated model for a wind tunnel experiment. The results have surprising implications for long-accepted ideas about how winged flight began.
