"A New Reality (1950-1970)": What the Depression, wireless and war couldn't do, "talking furniture" perhaps could: TV arrives. Warner Bros. fights back with new technology (CinemaScope, 3-D, Eastman Color) and new stars (girl-next-door Doris Day and teen icon James Dean). And a showdown between Harry and Jack Warner leads to a daring new spirit at the studio that releases breakthrough films like "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" and "Bonnie and Clyde." Key interviews: Warren Beatty, Elia Kazan, Kim Hunter, Arthur Penn and Carroll Baker. Key films: "A Streetcar Named Desire," "East of Eden," "Cool Hand Luke," "A Face in the Crowd" and "My Fair Lady." "Woodstock Notions (1970-1989)": What the 1960s start, the 70s bring to flower. The film Woodstock signals a new era, while new talent (including Clint Eastwood, Martin Scorsese and Stanley Kubrick) and management spark a return to taking chances and setting trends. The past, meanwhile, becomes prologue: the tough authenticity of the 30s and 40s is re-imagined in "Dog Day Afternoon," "All the President's Men," "Dirty Harry" and other pivotal hits. Key interviews: Clint Eastwood, Robert Redford, Dustin Hoffman and Jack Nicholson. Key films: "The Shining," "Mean Streets," "Superman: The Movie," "The Exorcist" and "Body Heat."

Northern Uganda has been ravaged by one of Africa's longest civil wars. For more than 20 years, as many as 25,000 children, some as young as five years old, have been kidnapped by Uganda's anti-government rebel group, the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), and forced to serve as child soldiers and sex slaves. Under the command of LRA leader Joseph Kony, these children have been terrorized into committing the worst atrocities, even killing their own families. "Lord's Children" follows three former LRA soldiers who escaped from the bush and have taken refuge in a rehabilitation center. WIDE ANGLE is with the center's counselors as they help the physically and emotionally scarred children put their lives back together. Fourteen-year old Jennifer was abducted by the LRA when she was nine-years old, handed a gun and trained to kill. Raped by a rebel soldier, she now fears that she's HIV positive. Kilama, 13, is rejected by his grandmother, who is fearful of his turbulent past. Homeless, he wanders to the nearby city, like thousands of other children, in constant fear of being re-kidnapped by the rebels. At a young age, Francis witnessed the execution of two boys, killed by machete for not following orders. Terrified of a similar fate, he fled and now hopes to be reunited with his mother. As these children piece their lives together, the LRA continues to carry out attacks in the region. Though the ICC issued an arrest warrant for Kony in 2005, he remains at large, hiding in the jungle of neighboring Congo.

Alaska Senator Ted Stevens has been indicted for failing to disclose gifts he received from VECO Corporation, an Alaska-based oil services company. But his indictment is only the latest news - and perhaps the tip of the iceberg - in an ongoing political scandal that's rocking the state and Congress. This week, NOW goes behind the breaking headlines to shine a bright light on the scandalous connection between VECO and Alaska's old-boy political network. Three state legislators have already been convicted in Federal court for accepting bribes from VECO, and the FBI has video and audio evidence that reveal VECO executives shockingly handing out cash to those legislators in exchange for promises to roll back a tax on the oil industry. And more lawmakers - including Senator Stevens' own son, former Alaska State Senate President Ben Stevens - are being eyed in the growing scandal. NOW continues its ongoing investigation into the bribes, the connections to big oil and the payoffs to obtain friendly tax policies.

Allegations of celebrity over substance on the campaign trail, an indictment on Capitol Hill could sway the balance of power, and a murder mystery that might be solved. I'm John Harwood sitting in for Gwen Ifill tonight on "Washington Week." A McCain Ad said, "He's the biggest celebrity in the world, but is he ready to lead?" After Barack Obama's trip overseas, the McCain campaign hits back. Sen. Barack Obama (D-IL) said, "I do have to ask my opponent. Is that the best you can come up with?" Sen. John McCain (R-AZ) said, "Campaigns are tough and I'm proud of the campaign that we have run. I'm proud of the issues that we have been trying to address with the American people." Will this be known as the week the campaign turned from cordial to nasty? And which candidate put the explosive issue of race on the table - McCain or Obama. He's long been one of the Senate's most powerful Republicans. Matthew Friedrich said, "Between 1999 and 2006, Senator Stevens accepted gifts from a privately held company." Could a new cloud hanging over the Alaska senator have larger implications in November? And shocking developments in the nearly seven-year-old mystery of who may have been behind the anthrax attacks that targeted politicians and journalists. Covering these stories this week: Karen Tumulty of Time Magazine, James Barnes of National Journal, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, and Pete Williams of NBC News.

In 2006, Congress authorized the Secure Fence Act - a multi-billion dollar plan to build hundreds of miles of fencing along the southern border of the United States to stem the flow of undocumented immigrants and provide security from potential terrorism. But what was built to fight illegal immigration has turned into a nightmare for many Americans living along the U.S.-Mexico border. The fence, which will cover less than half of the actual border, inexplicably cuts through the middle of some properties, while leaving others untouched. Many question if it can keep people from sneaking in at all. This week, NOW senior correspondent Maria Hinojosa travels to Texas to meet border families who fear losing their property, their safety, and their way of life. We also follow an investigative reporter who questions whether certain landowners are getting preferential treatment. Is America's border fence working, or an utter waste?

How have women in politics changed America and the world? Given the hoopla surrounding Sarah Palin and Hillary Clinton's historical political ascendance, why does the U.S. rank only 69th in the world in percentage of women holding political positions? This week, in a one-hour special, NOW's Maria Hinojosa talks to women leaders around the world and here in the United States for an intimate look at the high-stakes risks, triumphs, and setbacks for women leaders of today and tomorrow. Among these women are President Michelle Bachelet of Chile, the first woman leader in Latin America who did not have a husband precede her as President, and former New Hampshire Governor Jeanne Shaheen, now in a tight race for a seat in the U.S. Senate. We also travel to Rwanda, where, 14 years after a horrific massacre left nearly one million people dead, women make up nearly half of parliament; and to Manhattan, where ambitious high school girls are competing in a high-stakes debate tournament. "Women, Power and Politics" is also about the personal journey of mother and award-winning journalist Maria Hinojosa as she strives to answer the question: What does it mean to be a woman in power?
