July Issues

July 11

The Future of Civilization: Climate Change

Lester Brown is the president of the Earth Policy Institute. The Washington Post calls him "one of the world's most influential thinkers." In 1974 he founded the Worldwatch Institute, the first research institute devoted to the analysis of global environmental issues.

The eco-crisis includes rising temperatures and sea levels, deforestation and species extinction, drought and soil erosion, and water and food shortages. In the not so distant future the ecological crimes against the Earth will come home to roost.

July 18

Seeds & Freedom

Vandana Shiva is an internationally renowned voice for sustainable development and social justice. A physicist, scholar, political activist and feminist, she is Director of the Research Foundation for Science, Technology and Natural Resource Policy in New Delhi.

The threat to seed freedom by multinational corporations, like Monsanto, has radically changed the agricultural landscape. The imposition of intellectual property rights and patenting have been ways corporations have devised to put a price tag on seeds and to undo what has been for millennia a shared heritage.

July 25

Contamination without Consent

Sandra Steingraber is a biologist, professor, writer and environmental health expert. In the tradition of Rachel Carson she is a leading voice alerting the public to toxic trespassing and the dangers posed by fracking.

The planet is facing a medical emergency. In response, activists are sitting in, chaining themselves to fences and blocking roads. Some, like Sandra Steingraber go to jail in upstate New York in protest of fracking.

August Issues

August 1

Captain Ahab & US Imperialism

Chris Hedges is an award-winning journalist who has covered wars in the Balkans, the Middle East and Central America. He writes a weekly column for Truthdig.org and is a senior fellow at The Nation Institute.

The U.S. with its obsessive drive for control of oil and other resources, its relentless hunger for profits, its garrisoning the globe with military bases, its arrogant disregard for the environment, is on the same suicidal path as Ahab.

August 8

Distress Signals from Earth

Paul Ehrlich is Bing Professor of Population Studies in the Department of Biology and president of the Center for Conservation Biology at Stanford University.

A steady stream of reports on the deterioration of the environment is issued. There is a brief flurry of media coverage. The corporate-funded climate change deniers make counter claims. We wake briefly to the crisis then most of us lapse into a couch potato stupor. Neoliberal dogma and an almost mystical belief in capitalism makes almost certain that little will be done to avert coming calamities.

August 15

The Societal Impact of Inequality

David Cay Johnston, a former reporter for The New York Times won the Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of tax policy.

The U.S. has the dubious distinction of being the most unequal of all developed countries. The gaps between rich and poor have not been seen since the Gilded Age over a century ago.

August 22                      Understanding the Middle East

Chris Giannou was chief surgeon for the International Committee of the Red Cross. He has worked in many war zones.

Large parts of the Middle East today are engulfed in violence. Why? What historical factors shape the current conflicts? Actual U.S. policy in the Middle East is buried in a blizzard of propaganda about democracy and human rights while in practice Washington backs feudal and repressive regimes like Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain and the Emirates as well as dictatorships like Egypt.

August 29                      Egypt: From Pharaoh to Pharaoh

Mohamad Elmasry is a scholar of mass communication and sociology in the Arab world, and has taught at the American University in Cairo and Qatar University.

In August 2014, Human Rights Watch officials were denied entry into Egypt after issuing a report documenting a series of mass killings carried out under Sisi. Politics makes strange bedfellows for Washington but this one really stinks up the boudoir. Interviewed by David Barsamian.

September Issues

September 5                      Racism & Surveillance

Deepa Kumar is an Associate Professor of Media Studies and Middle East Studies at Rutgers University. Arun Kundnani teaches Media, Culture and Communication at New York University. He also teaches terrorism studies at John Jay College.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has a long history of spying on African Americans including Nobel Prize winner Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Today, state security agencies and police departments profile and target Muslims.

September 12                      Gandhi & Caste

Arundhati Roy is a world-renowned writer and global justice activist.

Gandhi supported the highly elaborate Hindu caste system of social segmentation and stratification, and hereditary class division. While deploring discrimination and oppression of Dalits, formerly known as untouchables, Gandhi did not see the hierarchical caste system as morally wrong and undemocratic.

September 19                      The Internet, Privacy & Power

Bruce Schneier is a cryptographer and specialist in computer security technology.

With every click, we entrust our conversations, emails, photos, and much more to Facebook, Microsoft, Google and Yahoo. But what happens when the government asks these corporations to hand over their users' private information? What happens to our rights and expectations of privacy?

October 26                      Making & Breaking Stories

Rebecca Solnit is an award-winning essayist and environmental historian.

Competing narratives about fracking in Colorado and tar sands in Alberta play out in daily information wars, while substantive structural changes remain nearly indiscernible.

Marta Ulaeus 10/10/14

Interview by Jana Juniper Gee

August 28

Non-Defensive Communication:

Simple steps to take defensiveness out of our communications, described in this interview, can utterly change the dynamics between ourselves and others.

Interview by Sue Supriano, originally produced for Steppin' Out of Babylon; adapted for WINGS by Frieda Werden

Featuring:

Sharon Ellison, communications Counselor

September Issues

September 4

Gender in the Andes

Dr. Herencia discusses her research and observations about the non-gendered roles of Andean Indian children and how this affects women's empowerment both historically and in the present day. She sees today's pressures to assimilate to western culture as a tactic of globalization.

Dr. Cristina Herencia, social psychologist and Latin American Studies scholar from Peru.

Your Brain or the Game?

They say a smart athlete will use their head. But what if using your head cost you everything? That's a question being asked in locker rooms the world over. Whether it's boxing, hockey, or soccer, it seems that head injuries are finally being taken seriously. In the United States, lawsuits brought by players, as well as a body of scientific evidence, has led to growing awareness about the impact American football has on players' brains. And now a similar debate has kicked off across the Atlantic among players and fans of the sport that American football evolved from: rugby. On this special edition of Making Contact, producer

Luke Eldridge brings us to the UK to hear how rugby is dealing with the issue of head injuries.

Not My War: The Deserters' Dilemma

More than 150,000 people sign up for the US military every year. Their reasons for joining vary widely, from those hoping for financial help through college, to others looking to follow in the footsteps of parents or grandparents. In recent years getting into the military has gotten harder, with criminal records and low academic scores proving the biggest barriers. As hard as getting into the military might be, getting out may be harder still. On this edition of Making Contact we'll hear radio adaptations of Michelle Mason's film, Breaking Ranks, produced by Screen Siren Pictures and the National Film Board of Canada and of Deserter by Rick Rowley, from Big Noise Films and PM Press.

Host: George Lavender
