More Americans are spending beyond their means and have no money saved for emergencies, says the New York Post. The debt is being fueled by rising mortgage debt, student loans and the ease of obtaining available credit. One credit counselor to the Post says the easy-to-obtain credit traps people into thinking they can buy what they want - regardless of their ability to repay that debt. Those living week-to-week on their paychecks will feel the pinch of this debt first, according to Bankrate. Bankrate says another recession could squeeze people further than what they already make paycheck-to-paycheck, leading to an increase in delinquencies.

Senators Marco Rubio and Rick Scott want to make it easier for Canadians to stay in the U.S. longer. They announced proposed legislation yesterday called the "Canadian Snowbird Act." It would let Canadians over 50-years old spend eight months to a year in the U.S. if they rent or own homes here. That would be two months longer than they are currently allowed to stay. The Senators think longer visits would help Florida's economy.

A new bill that would allow Canadian's to stay in the U-S a little longer each year is being pushed by Florida's two senators...

Looking at more than 10,000 kids starting in the fourth grade, then checking on them three years later, researchers found the mental health benefits were greater in those who participated in team activities, as opposed to those who took part in more individual activities like music lessons or who did nothing at all. "I think team sports naturally foster peer belonging," giving children a sense that we're "in this together," said lead author Eva Oberle from the School of Population and Public Health. Oberle would like to see team sports made more affordable, conducted in places and at times where kids don't need to be shuttled by their parents.

Guest(s):	Alan Harris, Emergency Manager
Contact:	(407) 665-5102; Prepareseminole.org
Date:	9/8/19
Duration:	15:00
Issues:	Harris discussed the lessons learned as residents and emergency management agencies prepared for, and responded to, the threat of Hurricane Dorian. Although Hurricane Dorian did not actually hit Florida, the threat was real and significant. Therefore Harris said, we can learn from how systems were activated and how residents prepared their homes and evacuation plans. Because hurricane season is still underway, Harris says to keep stocks of supplies and add to them when one is able.

The parents of a woman killed in the 2017 Las Vegas massacre filed a first-of-its-kind lawsuit today against manufacturers and dealers of the guns used in the attack.

VERBATIM:

Carrie Parsons had just gotten engaged when she was gunned down, with 57 others. Her parents filed the first lawsuit against manufacturers of the rifles used in the attack, arguing they violated the law by designing products easily converted into weapons that simulate a machine gun. "Choosing profits over public safety," the Parsons family said the gun companies made rifles "that will shoot automatically with modifications that require no technical expertise." While federal law largely protects gun makers from liability the plaintiffs said it does not shield what they called "reckless" corporate conduct. Aaron Katersky ABC News New York.

[It's Florida law - when we're under a state of emergency, you can get a 30-day early refill of your recurring prescriptions.

This is to ensure you have them on hand AFTER the storm in case you're not able to go out for a while.

Even if you recently filled your prescription, you can still do this again.

Keep in mind early refills will be noted to insurance companies and added to your refill schedule. Meaning this WILL count as a refill, so you'll have to wait the full period before you can fill it again.]

and panthers - in anticipation of the approaching storm. "Rest assured, if you see an alligator swimming down your street or sitting in your pool, it ain't one of ours," McHugh narrates. The park's alligators will likely ride out any storm that comes through Central Florida under water, with an occasional trip to the surface to grab some air. As for the gators, these storms are nothing new for them, McHugh said in the video. "They have been around for 75 million years," he said. "It ain't their first rodeo with a nasty storm."

A beachgoer taking in the sights of the rough surf Tuesday morning at Paradise Beach Park spotted what appeared to be a wrapped package that washed up, labeled 'dinamitar' or dynamite in Spanish. Except it wasn't that - it was a kilo of cocaine. Melbourne police were called to the site and retrieved the item. Police said there were reports of other bricks of cocaine possibly washing ashore in northern Brevard. They also caution residents to contact police if other unusual debris washes ashore.

A UCF student is back at school after a brush with Hurricane Dorian. Freshman Ure Saunders rode out Hurricane Dorian in The Bahamas with her family.

Rising floodwaters forced them to stay on the second floor of her grandparent's house in Freeport for two days. She came back to Florida by boat, and says it was a very humbling experience.

Tropical Storm Humberto will be the next named storm, and it could form from a tropical wave that is approaching the Caribbean in the next four days, or from a new system that popped up even closer to Florida and the Bahamas.

The new system the National Hurricane Center said is a set of disorganized showers and thunderstorms a few hundred miles northeast of the northern Leeward Islands. Its four day track could bring it over the lower Bahamas or to the east in the Atlantic.

Hurricane Dorian diminished to a post-tropical storm over the weekend -- but not before flexing its muscles one last time in Canada.

The category 2 hurricane arrived in Nova Scotia on Saturday, where its 87-miles-per-hour winds tore roofs off homes, sent trees crashing down on vehicles and even knocked a huge construction crane onto a building. By the time Dorian had powered down to a post-tropical storm, it had dumped nearly six inches of rain on parts of the province.

As a result of the weather event, about 387,000 people -- representing more than 75 percent of Nova Scotia's population -- were left without power.

[Building 300 has no AC, but new fans have been installed and new paint has been added- After a study showed temperatures inside this area peaked at 95 degrees during the summer. They were unable to retrofit an A/C unit in this particular building, so they installed a $450,000 ventilation system back in 2017. With that, and now, with the new industrial fans and paint, temperatures have dropped about 10 degrees.

County officials still believe there is still a need for a new building with A/C. A proposal is scheduled to come before the Orange County Board of County Commissioners next month.
