The 2020 census is an account of all people living in the United States, regardless of their status. A few reasons the census is important is because it determined the amount of federal funding and represented in Congress. Questions on the census are really simple. Brandale Mills, a Census Bureau media specialist, says some of the questions are as simple as your name, age, race, and ethnicity. They then use this data to gather demographic information about the state and county.

Jeanine Patterson, a Registered Nurse who focuses on educating about health promotion and disease prevention from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Mexico talked about ways to lower your risk for heart disease and how to improve your overall heart health Friday. Heart disease or cardiovascular disease is also sometimes called Coronary Artery Disease. It's the leading cause of death for men and women in the United States. The disease is responsible for one in every three deaths. There are many risk factors for heart disease. Some factors you cannot control like age and family history. However, making some changes in your lifestyle can reduce your chance of having heart disease. Controllable risk factors for heart disease include diet, activity level, stress, weight, smoking and drinking.

Sheree Anderson, 14, of Rainsville, New Mexico is one of the top youth volunteers in the Prudential Spirit of Community Awards. Anderson created a business card to raise awareness of and prevent animal testing that highlights shampoo and conditioner products that are not tested on animals. Anderson spent hours on the internet researching shampoos and conditioners that were not tested on animals, then visited local stores to assess their availability. She compiled a list of acceptable products, recruited a sponsor, printed her list on 600 cards, and began distributing her "pockets of knowledge" to family members, friends, fellow Girl Scouts, animal shelters, veterinarians, health food stores, and elsewhere in her community.

Sleep awareness is so important as 60% of Americans suffer from poor sleep. This results in irritability, anxiety, slow reaction time, poor productivity at work and at home, poor communication, poor parenting skills, and other harmful behaviors. The correlation between stress and disease is a scientific fact as stress is the number one factor that affects your sleep. Managing stress should be a top priority as stress cannot be avoided. Birthday celebrations are usually a joyous occasion for children, unfortunately, for some children living in homeless shelters celebrations like these don't happen often. Executive director and founder of Project Birthday NM Jessica Lucero and Program Director Jodi Garcia visit the set to discuss how they're bringing the joy of birthdays to underprivileged children. After watching a morning show segment on a Pennsylvania nonprofit that provides birthday celebrations for children experiencing homelessness, Jessica was inspired to build a better future for children in her own community. Project Birthday NM's mission is to bring smiles to the children of our communities and to show them that they matter.
