Description: Historic Flood One Year Anniversary. Today marks one year since the devastating Colorado flood. And this morning thousands of people from Boulder to Larimer county are still rebuilding from the disaster. Fourteen counties and more than a dozen cities were affected by the flood. It also killed nine people. Among the hardest hit was Boulder County specifically the Lyons area. We spent the day in the area where he talked to residents who are rebuilding their lives one step at a time.

Description: Expired Food Grocery Stores. Pat Anselmo has been at shopping grocery salvage for years. She loves the savings, and estimates her Friday groceries purchases would have cost $300 at a normal grocery store. But at Dacono Discount Groceries salvage store, she just spent $55. "They' got wonderful prices, absolutely," Anselmo said. "I don't know how they do it." Brothers Ruben and Justin Esh began their chain of three stores 12 years ago in Loveland, Evans and Dacono. The brothers take in damaged, dented, dated or discounted products grocery stores won't sell, letting consumers get crazy discounts. Their customers seem to appreciate it. Even new employees are learning how to eat better and cheaper. "I'm a single parent and this store actually makes it feasible for me to shop," clerk Rhonda Gahm said. "And it has actually turned me into a better consumer, comparing prices. I never used to compare prices." What's more, food safety experts say you can't go wrong buying shelf stable items. "The manufacturers put best-buy dates or purchase-buy or use-by dates for quality purposes, not necessarily for safety purposes," state health spokesperson Sue Parachini said. Parachini says avoid products with bulging tops or cuts in cans and you should be okay.

Description: CU Named 10th Most Affordable College. The University of Colorado-Boulder was ranked among the 10 most affordable public schools in the West this week. That declaration left many recent graduates and those who paid for those educations wondering about how the rankings were produced. The list was compiled by GreatValueColleges.net, and the site's operators indicated the ranking system was born out of data from multiple sources, including Payscale, the College Board Advocacy and Policy Center, the National Center for Education Statistics, the Federal Student Aid Report and the Bureau of Labor Statistics. After all that data was considered, CU came in at No. 10 on the list. Colorado State University wasn't too far behind at 13. GreatValueColleges.net indicated that CU's "net price" again, that's the total cost of attendance minus the average financial aid package — was about $3,000 a year lower than CSU's. Considering CU's total cost to out-of-state students is actually estimated at about $8,000 a year more than CSU's, according to CollegeCalc.com, the assessment of net price by GreatValueColleges.net would seem to indicate that CU offers students significantly better financial aid packages. CSU came in 13th.

outweighing the marketing effort.

Description: Soaring Costs of College & Stress. If you're paying for or planning for college costs, you know just how much tuition costs have gone up. Today, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi paid a visit to CU to talk about what can be done to make an education more affordable. We are live on the CU campus with how the stress of paying for a higher education is weighing on local families and your money.

A program in Aurora called Early Beginnings provides free to minimal cost childcare for young parents who attend Aurora Public Schools. Currently there are 21 infants and toddlers enrolled in the program. The Center has room for 32 kids. Besides childcare, it also offers parent support groups.

Issue: Government
Program: KDVR 5pm News
Date: 8/6/14

Description: Streamling FASFA Application. It can be a painful process to apply for college student loans. The first form a family is required to fill out can take hours. It's so daunting, many people simply give up. But there is a push to simplify things, and make it much easier to apply for college loans. The Auraria campus in downtown Denver serves more students than any other campus in Colorado. Eighty percent of the students there qualify for financial aid but only about 50 percent ask for it. Metro State University student Joshua Allard is one of the college students and staff telling U.S. Senator Michael Bennet stories of students who are turned away by financial red tape. Specifically he wants to streamline the "Free Application for Federal Student Aid" form, or "FAFSA" as it's known. It's currently 10 pages long and it asks families 108 questions. Bennet says the government really only needs answers to two questions: 1. What is your family size? 2. What was your household income two years ago? It's estimated last year alone 2 million students would have qualified for financial aid, but they didn't fill out the FAFSA form.

Issue: Homeless/Housing
Program: KDVR 9pm News

Description: Urban Nights. Experts say there is a crisis of youth homelessness in Denver. More than 900 young kids are on the street every night. FOX31 Denver is a proud sponsor of this year's Urban Nights event, a fashion show and benefit for Urban Peak, which provides shelter and services. Some of the 900 young people will sleep outside the one safe place they know, Urban Peak, at 21st and Stout. Tezra is a young artist who uses the services. She says her dad passed away when she was ten and her mother abused her. In his northwest Denver studio, celebrity designer Mondo Guerra is using Tezra's art as inspiration for his new collection. "I had to hit rock bottom so I can relate to not having resources," he says. Before he won TV's "Project Runway Allstar Edition," Mondo nearly died from HIV. Now he runs an international clothing business and he's using his celebrity to raise money for the Urban Nights Fashion Show Friday night. "For me that's what made me live and breathe so that's why I took this project on to display the idea of moving forward and growth," he says. "That's really cool," Tezra says. "I didn't think little old homeless me and my painting would go anywhere. That's really cool!" Some of Tezra's art, along with art created by other youth will be auctioned off. When you see it you realize how deep the well of talent is among them. You wonder, with over 900 homeless young people in Denver on any given day, what else they can achieve if given a chance.

Issue: Health/Welfare
Program: KDVR 8am News
Date: 8/1/14

Description: Ebola American Victims. Two infected Americans including a former Colorado resident will be flown to Atlanta for treatment. Nancy Writebol who grew up in Colorado and Dr. Kent Brantly are still in grave condition. Brantly gave up a single vial of experimental treatment sent from the US so Writebol could receive it. However, the Samaritan's Purse Charity says Writebol's condition worsened even after the treatment. Writebol and Brantly will fly on a jet the CDC has retrofitted with medical equipment including an isolation tent. That plane took off for Liberia yesterday amid controversy with some Americans worried about the outbreak coming to the US. Ebola has killed more than 700 people in Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone. The CDC has issued a travel warning for people to stay away from those countries.

Description: ALS Ice Bucket Challenge. The "Ice Bucket Challenge" is proving to be one of the most successful fundraisers ever. The campaign raises money to fight ALS, a deadly disease that attacks the nervous system. Fox 31 Denver's Shaul Turner shows us how social media has generated millions in donations in just a few weeks.

Issue: Public Safety/Crime
Program: KDVR 5pm News

Description: Denver Crime Statistics. New statistics reveal a troubling trend in Colorado as several types of crime are on the rise. The number of overall crimes reported was up 1.8% in 2013 including a 2% increase in violent crimes. Reports of rape jumped more than 41 percent but police expanded the definition of rape and say these stats do not represent an increasing trend in these crimes. Rates of robberies, assaults and burglaries did decrease.

Description: Group Rallies to Pardon Man of 98 year Prison Sentence. An Aurora man mistakenly released from prison and sent back to serve 90 more years is getting some help from religious leaders. Tuesday, Together Colorado gathered outside the Governor's Mansion to pray for Rene Lima-Marin, 35, and his family. They also will deliver letters to Gov. John Hickenlooper and Attorney General Jon Suthers. The faith-based group is fighting against unjust sentences and for reform of a state law passed in the legislature in 1985 that doubled the prison time for all felony sentences. Jasmine Lima-Marin and her two young sons, 4 and 7, gather with others to pray—not inside a church—but outside the Governor's Mansion. They ask not only for help from above—but from the governor and attorney general. "I actually pray every day and my faith has not changed as far as my husband not spending 98 years in prison," says Jasmine. Her husband, Rene, in January was suddenly and unexpectedly returned to prison to finish a 98-year sentence. He robbed two video stores when he was 19, and ordered to serve consecutive sentences. But a court clerk mistakenly told the prison his sentences were to be served all at once. "People have raped, molested kids, taken lives, and have 15, 20, 25 years. And I made a mistake and tried to steal some money and I am given my entire life in prison?" questions Rene. So the faith-based group called Together Colorado is standing up for Rene and against unjust sentencing laws. "People need to have the opportunity to have another chance. Long sentences do not give you a second chance," says Together Colorado leader Sharon Bridgeforth. They want to reform the state's Mielke law which doubled the prison time for all felony sentences. "You lose hope when you having something like that, to devastate you, but it also devastates the family," says Bridgeforth. That family here today prays help is coming their way with a pardon, either through divine intervention or the compassion of our state's leaders. "I'd speak to them as far as the person my husband is now, the person he's become, that putting him back in prison after he's been rehabilitated, isn't justice," says Jasmine. Lima-Marín won't be eligible for parole for 40 years. He'll be 75 then. The family's attorney has filed an appeal with the AG's Office. But the Appeals Court says it probably won't hear the case until the middle of next year. His family has an online petition to gather signatures from people in favor of pardoning Rene at Change.org.
