TITLE: Solid waste landfill proposed in Bloomington

Date: 12/7/2023

Duration: 30 second story, ran between 6am and 3pm

A Bloomington garbage company wants to set the record straight on a possible new transfer station off Bunn Street. Lakeshore Recycling Systems, a Chicago-based company, owns Henson Disposal. Earlier this year, Henson applied to build a new transfer station that could handle up to 400 tons of solid waste daily. But now, the company faces feedback from community members on the possible uptick in traffic. Rob Fazzini, a business consultant for Henson Disposal, spoke with WJBC's Scott Miller. If approved, the transfer center, which compacts solid waste, would be the only solid waste landfill in McLean County. It could take several months before Henson's disposal could receive a green light to begin constructing the center.

TITLE: New payment system coming to Uptown Normal parking decks

Duration: 30 second story, ran between 6am and 3pm

All three parking decks in Uptown Normal will be getting an upgraded parking system that requires an app. The current gated entry to the parking decks will cease to exist. The system that is currently in place, which is original to the decks, will no longer be manufactured after 2023. This has caused all three parking decks to start implementing a new system which will be a gateless entry that now has license plate scanners. Drivers will download the "Passport Parking" app to pay for the time they park. Town officials say there is still an option to pay with cash at Uptown Station, but that can occasionally cause a longer wait time, especially when trains and buses are unloading. Signage with QR codes for the "Passport Parking" app will be put up in all three parking decks, but the change won't officially start until January 2.
