Description of program

From the impeachment of President Trump, to a showdown in the Supreme Court, to a historic election with record voting numbers, 2020 was packed with news that shocked the world of politics.

Our correspondent in the White House Rafael Sánchez Cruz prepared a report on the matter.

Undoubtedly the most observed issue by the Latino community of the next administration in its first hundred days in addition to the handling of the pandemic by covid 19 will be "immigration. The lawyer Luis Paoli, former immigration prosecutor, spoke about the issue in politics already.

Description of program

This week, the 2020 presidential election process would come to an end on Wednesday, January 6, with the certification by the Congress of the electoral college votes, which would seal the victory of Joe Biden after the November 3 elections. A formal act that for more than two centuries had passed without problems, however hours before the meeting of the lower house, the Senate and Vice President Pence, Donald Trump gave a long speech where at the end he harangued his base to go drink The capitol. They obeyed and the country and the world witnessed another historic day like so many other unfortunates of the last 4 years.

Rafael Sánchez-Cruz made the count and why of what happened.

On the other hand, the Democratic federal congressman from New Jersey Albio Sires recounted his experience inside the Capitol last Wednesday.

Also to analyze the issues that occurred this week, we welcome Marco Davis who is the President and Chief Executive Officer of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute based in Washington D.C.

When: January 17th. 2021 (Saturday 11:00 pm / Sunday 6:00 pm) Length: 09' 46"

Description of program

This week, the images of the shielding of the capitol and surrounding areas in the capital of the country and the arrival of the national guard and personnel from all federal agencies that exceed the imagination because there are more troops in the district of Columbia than in Iran and Afghanistan gave around the world while at the same time vice president Pence denied the petition to invoke the 25th amendment and then congress would initiate the proceedings for a second trial of Donald Trump. That at least in the lower house was confirmed on Wednesday afternoon.

Times never seen before in the most divided country we know. In a climate of tension after being known by the same capitol police that the pro-trump insurgents planned to "form a perimeter" and assassinate Democrats who try to break the line.

We talked about this and more from the legal point of view with the constitutional lawyer angel loyal from Miami Florida.

Another piece of news that generated stupor across the country was the warning from the federal bureau of investigations that supporters of President Donald Trump plan to carry out "armed demonstrations" in all 50 state capitals and in Washington, D.C. In the days leading up to President-elect Joe Biden's inauguration on January 20.

National Guard in A.D.

Faced with the possibility of Trump supporters launching another attack on the capitol, more than 25,000 members of the National Guard were deployed.

Our correspondent Yamile Arango in Denver, Colorado expanded on this.

Description of program

In the most armored city on the planet, Joe Biden takes office as 46th President of the United States and Kamala Harris becomes the first woman to assume the office of vice-president. The first 100 days to fulfill hundreds of campaign promises has begun. But what challenges does Biden face in topics like health, economy, immigration and more?

We talked about this and more with Virginia Senator Tim Kaine.

On the other hand, our correspondent at the White House Rafael Sánchez-Cruz tells us about some of the executive orders that will enter into effect during the first 10 days of the Biden administration, which include:

- The revocation of the prohibition of traveling in various predominantly Muslim countries.

- Reincorporation to the Paris agreement on climate change.

- Extending the limits related to the pandemic on evictions and payments of student loans.

- Issuing a mandate on the use of the toilet for federal property and interstate travel.

- Order agencies to find out how to gather the children separated from their families after crossing the border.

It also plans to send a broad immigration legislation providing a path to citizenship for 11 million people living illegally in the country. Together with his promise to vaccinate 100 million Americans against coronavirus in its first 100 days.

We also interviewed a Guatemalan and North American woman who has already become the new deputy director of communications at The White House. She is Pili Tobar who was born in Florida, recently worked with Senator Chuck Shummer and also with the non profit organization America's voice.

Description of program

This week we continue to experience the worst of the covid-19 pandemic. Unfortunately, we are expected to reach 500,000 deaths from covid-19 in the coming weeks. This at the same time that the CDC announced that it is safe to return to school if the proper measures are taken.

In the economic sphere, the Federal Reserve keeps interest rates low, waiting That the vaccination of the population advances until the pandemic is under control and that then there is a robust economic recovery.

Also in this first week of the Biden-Harris administration and there are two setbacks on immigration, one by the Governor of Texas. Also, Trump's impeachment is moving forward despite stiff Republican resistance.

Our first guest was the federal congressman for California Salud Carbajal.

In the early days of the Biden administration, the new administration has dedicated itself to reversing Stephen Miller's drastic anti-immigrant policies, implemented during Donald Trump's four-year tenure. The Justice Department officially struck down the "zero tolerance" rule that resulted in thousands of family separations. Our correspondent at the White House Rafael Sánchez-Cruz presented us with the reprotect.

This week there were also severe setbacks to President Biden's actions on immigration. Who better to talk about this exciting topic happening in this country of immigrants than someone who has worked in the bowels of the national security agencies, U.S.C.I.S. And I.C.E. like attorney John Amaya.

Description of program

This week, experts say that President Trump created a multi-billion dollar debacle. And he got nothing in return. This is in the wake of the decision to delay signing the $ 900 billion pandemic aid package that could end up costing millions of workers lost or delayed benefits, as the five-day delay allowed extended pandemic unemployment assistance to lapse. Ben Monterroso, advisor to the organization poderlatinx, talks about it.

The covid-19 pandemic has its epicenter in California where public health officials reactivated strict stay-at-home orders for 11 southern California counties, including Los Angeles, and areas of central and northern California. .

In them, restaurants are prohibited from serving outside patios and tables, and they keep shopping centers operating at 20% of their capacity, and the closure of gyms and other non-essential businesses is considered. Los Angeles remains the focus of the pandemic with 29,464 positive cases since the pandemic began. And the hospitals are at full capacity.

At the same time, the vaccination of healthcare personnel throughout the United States continues at full speed and one of the largest hospital groups in the country, launches a study sponsored by the cdc to understand the spread, symptoms and adoption of covid vaccines -19.

To talk about this and more we link with dr. Federico Asch who is the director of cardiovascular laboratories, Medstar health research institute.

On the other hand, the most important effect of the pandemic is undoubtedly the economic one. However, the United States Federal Reserve (FED) announced on Wednesday that it will keep its benchmark interest rate close to zero and that it will continue with its monthly federal bond purchase program to prop up the economy while there is a recovery thanks to vaccination. massive that would bring the pandemic under control.

Biden wants the middle class to lead this economic recovery but this seems to take a long time to come. Because we will not run with the same fate as the one thousand most important billionaires in the country to whom I take only listen well:

Nine months to recover their fortunes after the coronavirus pandemic. According to oxfam international's annual inequality report, it will take the world's poorest people more than ten years. We talk about economics in an easy and understandable way. That is why we have invited Stan Veuger, an economist at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington D.C.

Democrats on the House of Representatives labor and education committee approved a federal minimum wage proposal of $ 15 an hour included in President Biden's coronavirus relief package.

Raising the federal minimum wage from $ 7.25 to $ 15 an hour by 2025 would cut jobs by 1.4 million, but lift about 900,000 Americans out of poverty, according to a study released by the congressional budget office. The federal deficit would increase by about $ 54 billion over 10 years.

There are millions of Latino families struggling to survive the ravages of the pandemic, including so-called essential workers in some cases without any protection.

At the end of April last year, an executive order from the now-former President Trump ordered to keep open the plants that produce chicken, pork and beef.

Months later, Congress investigates hundreds of deaths of workers in these industries. Our correspondent Carlos Moreno from Colorado has us more.

Once again, the country was dressed in mourning after the death of 10 innocents who unfortunately were in the wrong place and time, something that could happen to any of us. Once again it was revealed that mental health and access to firearms are a lethal combination. Colorado Governor Jared Polis said Tuesday that there are indications that Ahmad Al Aliwi Alissa, accused of killing the 10 people, was driven by mental problems and "extreme paranoia," but said the motive for the attack was "pure evil. ".

This 21-year-old man, pleaded guilty in March 2018 to assault in the third degree for attacking a classmate and was sentenced to one year of probation, 48 hours of community service and treatment for the anger that it appears it was of no use. And as every time this happens, we see the usual "Thoughts and prayers", an increase in the sale of firearms and the issue of firearms control in Congress.

On Tuesday, former President Obama called politicians who oppose firearms control cowards, after President Biden called for a congressional ban on automatic weapons and high-capacity chargers. We talked about this and more with the constitutional lawyer Ángel Leal.

This week, experts from the World Health Organization who were going to investigate the origin of the coronavirus in China, had to postpone their trip because the powerful Asian giant had not authorized their entry. Beijing and the WHO are still negotiating the details of the experts' visit to the place where the virus was first known, Wuhan. Something that President Trump has said for months and even caused the United States to leave the body. The question that almost a year after the pandemic we still ask ourselves is whether the present administration took action on the matter in time. This below is our editorial analysis.

Meanwhile, the situation in California, the center of the Covid-19 pandemic, is more than critical, since the death toll exceeds 11 thousand and the number of infected already reaches one million cases. Hospitals, which have been reported to have collapsed for several weeks, continue to receive patients and it is reported that county ambulances sometimes take more than 8 hours to deliver patients to the emergency room and to top it all now face the request not to transport patients with little chance of survival to hospitals. On this topic we interviewed epidemiologist Dr. Ligia Peralta from the University of Maryland.

If the current rate of contagion is maintained, the Centers for Disease Prevention and Control (CDC), which project that more than 500 thousand deaths from covid-19 will be reached throughout the country by February 20. At a press conference, the newly appointed director of the CDs, Rochelle Walensky, said that, although the number of daily cases nationwide has decreased in the last week, the rate of infections in the country remains "extraordinarily high." The United States leads the number of COVID-19 infections worldwide, with almost 26 million cases. This week, unfortunately, it was confirmed that the world exceeded 100 million cases and more than 2 million deaths.

New cases of COVID-19 across the country are on the decline, but variants of the virus are a threat, warned the center for disease control CDC. This at the same time that Republican senators continue with a counter proposal to President Biden's original plan for a third economic stimulus package and a brutal delay in some states to achieve those 100 million inoculations in 100 days. Illinois Senator Tammy Duckworth goes on these topics with Tsi-Tsi-Ki Félix.

April 30 will be the first 100 days of Joe Biden's term. And do not forget that one of his promises would be to administer 100 million vaccines against COVID-19. We are talking about a million doses a day. Just on Wednesday of this week, according to the Washington Post, 27 million people would have received one or both doses of the vaccine. Anthony Fauci, a government infectious disease expert, said we should continue social distancing and even wear "double masks" for added protection.

We talked about this and more with Laurie Ann Ximenez-Fyvie, doctor of medical sciences from Harvard University, professor and researcher of microbiology at the National Autonomous University of Mexico and author of the book "Un irreparable damage."

The death of 13 people in a vehicle accident in Holtville, California, very close to the border with Mexico, shows us the impunity and limitless cruelty of human traffickers. Claudia Buccio prepared a report on the matter from the Imperial Valley agricultural region, which provides vegetables such as lettuce, onion, broccoli among others to supermarkets throughout the country. Holtville is even the carrot capital of the world. This area has become an important route for illegal crossings and now more than ever organized crime uses this area to trade in human lives. We talked about this and more with political analyst José Parra from Florida.

Migrants are not only abused before reaching their destination in the United States, but also those who have a made life are victims of criminals who, especially during the pandemic, stalk their prey in their workplaces, as our correspondent Carlos Moreno tells us below. from Colorado.

Republican congressmen visited the border, the entourage led by the head of the Republican minority in the lower house, Kevin McCarthy, said that "this is more than a crisis, it is a human anguish." Dalinda García, our correspondent in El Paso, Texas, has us the report of what happened.

Federal authorities said they found nearly twice as many minors who crossed the Mexican border unaccompanied by an adult than on an average day last month.

Thus, amid criticism of the situation, the secretary of national security, Alejandro Mayorkas, faced questions from congressmen for the first time since his confirmation. Mayorkas attacked the policies of his predecessors, and in front of the lower house national security committee refused to classify the situation at the border as a crisis. We precisely talked about it with Fernando García, who is the president of the Border Network for Human Rights from El Paso, Texas.
