90.3 WCPN ideastream® PROGRAM LIST

for the period

October 1 to December 31, 2016

The list below represents the current issues of community importance to which ideastream's news, public affairs and general programming staffs addressed their attention during the designated reporting period noted above. The list has been compiled by the ideastream® Content Department, under my direction and supervision.

The subjects are a consequence of current news as it developed in Northeast Ohio during the reporting period and the staff's newsgathering and outreach which included contact with officials in the region, community leaders, business leaders, healthcare representatives, other news media and a diverse mix of private citizens among others.

The Content staff regularly follow news of local issues or impact as presented by other news organizations, consult informally with colleagues in the media, and routinely read a wide variety of daily and weekly news publications from area communities, including The Plain Dealer, The Beacon Journal, and occasional additional neighborhood publications; minority news and special interest publications such as the Scene and The Call and Post; area weekly and monthly news publications, including Crain's Cleveland Business, Cleveland Magazine; and online news sources such as www.CoolCleveland.com and blogs such as www.brewedfreshdaily.com, as well as national news and special interest publications such as The New York Times, and The Wall Street Journal in order to stay aware of issues and events inside and outside of our region and to gain various perspectives on what is newsworthy.

The staff accesses the daily Ohio Public Radio Statehouse News Bureau (Columbus) audio feeds. Local, state, regional, national and international news from Associated Press is also part of the daily diet of the Content staff, as are other regularly-produced independent productions.

The ideastream® Content staff also regularly reaches out to community civic groups and agencies for research and/or scholarly data to provide supplementary background material to assist in understanding local issues. The College of Urban Affairs at Cleveland State University, the Center for Regional Economic Issues at Case Western Reserve University, the Citizens League of Greater Cleveland, the League of Women Voters are examples of academic agencies or organizations whose written and programmatic materials have been particularly instrumental in helping us address community issues.

In addition, ideastream's ongoing utilization and broadcasting of cross-cultural and international-content materials is a valuable means to stay abreast of concerns and issues of immediate interest to the people of the many cultural heritages represented in the Greater Cleveland area.

The attached list represents the current issues of community importance to which ideastream's news and public affairs and general programming staffs have addressed their attention for the above-designated reporting period.

The programming listed was broadcast, in response to these issues, and after consultation with the ideastream Community Advisory Board, which provided specific recommendations about stories and issues to be considered.

In addition, the list and programming were developed with the advice and assistance of the staff of the ideastream news and public affairs staff, drawing on their extensive and on-going contacts with area officials, community leaders and private citizens representing the broad spectrum of endeavors and interest in Northeast Ohio.

The attached program descriptions represent materials that were locally produced and broadcast in WCPN's morning, afternoon and evening news, and as specials; plus materials that were obtained from a variety of other sources specifically for broadcast in conjunction with WCPN's presentation of programming related to community issues.

Barnett, Senior Arts Reporter, ideastream

There are laws in place to protect older workers and job seekers from age discrimination, but many people over 50 will tell you it happens anyway and it's difficult to prove. Sometimes it's subtle; younger employees just don't think seasoned co-workers are up to speed. Sometimes it's outright -- employers say they want new blood. This morning on The Sound of Ideas, a look at age discrimination in the workplace and the lengths older workers go to avoid it.

of Hope Foundation Facing History website POV: What Tomorrow Brings

We're about two months into the school year, and the thrill seen in those smiling 'first day of school' photos on Facebook might be wearing off. Going to school is second nature to many kids living in the US, something many take for granted and gripe about when morning rolls around. But imagine a scenario where kids 'beg' their parents to go to school every day but in this scene, add onto that the dangers that come with attending school as a female student in rural Afghanistan.

Guests: N/A

The faceoff in Cleveland between the Indians and Chicago Cubs got underway Tuesday Night shortly after 8pm.

Weather was crisp, but dry, as Tribe fans roared in approval for the AL Champions on their home field. The Indians quickly brought 2 runs in the first inning.

Francisco Lindor lead the Tribe with a single, then stole second, and the bases quickly loaded from there with help from Jose Ramirez.

A shaken Cubs pitcher Jon Lester battled on, ultimately hitting Brandon Guyer with his 23rd pitch, and bringing the Indians to a 2-0 lead.

Guests: N/A

by David C. Barnett

After playing to a draw on the North Coast, the Cleveland Indians and Chicago Cubs take their World Series fight to the Windy City, this weekend. When it comes to baseball battles, music has played a big part in lifting team spirit, for over a century. Bands, organ players and popular recordings have helped inspire both fans and players of America's Pastime.

Some fans show their sports pride by wearing team jackets and caps. Others go as far as painting their faces. And still others just sing.

Progressive Field erupted in cheers with the first two pitches called as strikes from Josh Tomlin. That sentiment was short lived though. Cubs 3rd baseman Kris Bryant hit a home run. That was the start of a bad run. Shortly thereafter bad outfield coordination between Lonnie Chisenhall and Tyler Naquin gave the Cubs a 3-0 lead.

A grand slam at the top of the third inning further deepened the cubs lead, this time started by Addison Russell. That left it at 7-0 favoring Chicago.

Cleveland City Council is considering legislation to reduce the hours when street performers can sing and play. Some downtown residents pushed for the measure because they say the music keeps them up at night. From Ohio Public Radio station WKSU, Kevin Niedermier has more.

Currently, street performers can work from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. weekdays, and 9-to-11 Saturday and Sunday.

The legislation would change the hours to 9-to-9 Sunday through Thursday, and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Guests: N/A

Different racial and ethnic groups in the United States suffer disproportionality from health problems.

For example, African Americans have higher rates of heart disease, Asian Americans have higher rates of stomach cancer, and Latinos have higher rates of diabetes than whites. New research points to the role chronic stress may play in health disparities and some experts now consider systemic racism to be a social determinant of health.

Guests: N/A

by Nick Castele

The city of East Cleveland had a scare this week after its last working ambulance broke down, but the cash-strapped suburb is up and running now with an emergency donation from Oakwood Village.

The news came in a Facebook post from the East Cleveland firefighters' union: an ambulance the city received from Mayfield Heights had broken down. That meant this suburb in fiscal emergency would need to rely on its neighbors for certain 9-1-1 calls.

Response to the opiod epidemic by law enforcement is to save addcits with a counteracting drug and push for treatment over arrest. Contrast that with crack in the 80s, when addicts did hard time and the war on drugs raged on. What's different? Some say we've learned what doesn't work. Others see race playing a factor in the response: Crack was big in black neighborhoods; heroin today kills white suburban kids.

Guests: N/A

Starting next year, Cleveland Municipal Court judges will use a new risk assessment system to help determine whether to release or detain a criminal defendant.

The Public Safety Assessment or PSA system uses nine factors to determine the likelihood that a defendant will commit a crime while out on release and the likelihood they'll fail to return to court. The factors include age, prior criminal history, and the pending charge. The assessment does not consider factors such as race, drug use history, or income.

Guests: N/A

by Karen Kasler

The state parole board has voted 10-2 to recommend to Gov. Kasich that Ronald Phillips of Akron be put to death on schedule next month for the rape and murder of his girlfriend's toddler daughter in 1993.

The parole board's report notes the killing of a three-year-old is among the worst of the worst capital crimes, and that testimony they heard about the abusive home Ronald Phillips was raised in didn't indicate how much abuse he personally suffered.

We're about two months into the school year, and the thrill seen in those smiling 'first day of school' photos on Facebook might be wearing off. Going to school is second nature to many kids living in the US, something many take for granted and gripe about when morning rolls around. But imagine a scenario where kids 'beg' their parents to go to school every day but in this scene, add onto that the dangers that come with attending school as a female student in rural Afghanistan.

A cove on the South Shore of Lake Ontario near Rochester, N.Y., called Buck Pond is undergoing a transformation.

Brad Mudrzynski, a graduate student working in the cove, says, "One of the focus points of this project is to create northern pike spawning habitat."

His team and their other partners on the project are digging channels through the thick marsh to help pike get closer to shore and lay their eggs. Right now, they are inhibited by and invasive species of cattail.

by David C. Barnett

The Industrial Midwest is a key battleground in this year's presidential campaign, as both major parties pledge to bring jobs back to a once prosperous region, now known as the Rust Belt. Some area residents think that's an embarrassing term, evoking decay and failure. Others have embraced it as a description of grit and authenticity.

Guests: N/A

Today's American homes are dotted with Internet-connected devices that allow you to manage your home from your smart phone. You can open your front door when you're not home, adjust your thermostat while driving and see what your cats are up to -- anytime, anywhere. Smart meters send power to the grid from solar panels on the roof and EV chargers juice up your car overnight when electricity is cheap. But what does all this mean for the American way of life? Does the smart grid make us vulnerable to hackers and terrorist attacks? Does it endanger our personal privacy?

Millennial voters are tied with Baby Boomers as the largest single group of potential voters. The Pew Research Center says there are 69 million people between 18 and 39 – 31% of the voting population in America. But they're the least likely to vote.

An enthusiastic crowd packed a Columbus movie theater, eagerly waiting to watch the presidential debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump.

This crowd, which was heavy on the pro-Clinton side, treated the debate like a spectator sport.

They laughed.

They booed.

And they cheered.

Cuyahoga County and the city of Cleveland have agreed to an equal, three-way split of sin tax revenue to pay for upgrades to the city's three major sports facilities. The proposal is being introduced in Cuyahoga County Council tonight.

The so-called "sin tax," renewed by voters in 2014, is expected to raise about $260 million by 2035. This agreement between the city and county will allocate equal shares of that money for upgrades to Progressive Field, Quicken Loans Arena and FirstEnergy Stadium.

Segment Title: Intelligence Squared U.S.: CONSTITUTION: Should we call a convention to amend the Constitution?

Guests: N/A

Almost everyone can think of something they would like to change in the U.S. Constitution. Some would like to update it to fit new technologies and evolving social mores. Others think the Supreme Court has illegitimately “updated” it too much already, and would like to restore its original meaning. Either way, it is always tempting to invoke Article V to amend the Constitution—to “fix” it, or “restore”

Deep below downtown Akron, a series of explosions are being set off this month. The dynamite is preparation for a 27 foot diameter boring machine that will drill a mile long tunnel for wastewater.

Meanwhile, above ground, city officials are trying to shake up the design and life of the city core. Ideastream's Mark Urycki reports.

In a year long brain-storming effort, city officials are joining with dozens of government, business, educational, and foundation groups to formulate a Downtown Vision and Redevelopment Plan.

You may have heard of the Freshman 15, where college freshmen pack on pounds with campus meal plans. Here's something you might not know: A large number of college students can't afford nutritious food after paying college costs. On the Sound of Ideas, we'll look at the issue of food insecurity for college students. Then we'll get an update on Northeast Ohio's homeless population, and meet with those preparing to feed the needy on Thanksgiving Day.

Guests: N/A

by Tony Ganzer, ideastream

Ohio is often talked about as a microcosm of America, with its diverse regions and resources.

That microcosm also reflects some of the challenges our nation faces, like kinds of poverty and income inequality.

Here are some snapshots of what some Ohioans are going through:

Guests: N/A

There are an estimated 11 million undocumented immigrants in the United States, and the question of what to do with them has sparked years of fierce debate, but no significant action. In 2013, the bipartisan "Gang of Eight" managed to pass a comprehensive immigration reform bill in the Senate, only to get it dropped by the House. And in 2016, a deadlocked Supreme Court decision stalled President Obama's executive actions, DACA and DAPA, which would have saved 5 million from deportation. For voters, on this issue, the choice between presidential candidates could not be clearer.

As President-elect Donald Trump assembles his team of economic advisors, speculation has begun about how Northeast Ohio will fare under the new administration. The presence of a Federal Reserve Bank in Cleveland could give the city some input about those changes.

Cleveland joined the 12-member federal reserve system in 1914, when it was one of the country's largest cities. The continuing local presence of the Fed has always given Cleveland some influence in the U.S economy. Case Western Reserve University banking and finance professor William Mahnic expects that to continue.

Guests: N/A

For many, Obama's presidency will be defined by its accomplishments.

Taking out Osama bin Laden, disengaging from fights in the Middle East that America cannot win, defusing the threat of a nuclear Iran, and refocusing our attention and resources to Asia, where our greatest opportunities and biggest long-term challenges are located. But for others, it has been marked by missteps and retreat—pulling back where action and leadership was needed, and presiding over policies that strengthened our adversaries and disheartened our friends. Has Obama's foreign policy been a success?

It's a felony in Ohio for a voter to take a picture of a filled-out ballot and post it on social media. Two Republican lawmakers want to change that. Rep. Niraj Antani of Miamisburg is 25, and one of the youngest people ever elected to the legislature – and he thinks getting rid of a law banning selfies in the voting booth is a good idea.

“It takes this law off the books that we think is unconstitutional, and that just isn't being prosecuted. Laws should be for serious crimes, not for someone who wants to post a picture of their ballot because they're excited about it.”

Antani and his co-sponsor, Rep. Mike Duffey of Worthington, also say they feel the current law violates voters' free speech rights. The bill won't even be voted on till after the election, since lawmakers aren't set to come back to work until after the November vote.

Politicians are making one last push to get their message out to voters in the last weekend before Election Day. For many candidates, this is when they might be running on depleted resources. But there's one particular Ohio candidate that still has a well-stocked war chest. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

The U.S. Senate race between Republican Sen. Rob Portman and Democratic former Gov. Ted Strickland is one of the most expensive races in the country. The tally heading into the final weekend before the election has reached nearly $84 million, that's according to OpenSecrets.org. And a majority of that pot is filled by outside spending, way more for Portman than for Strickland. Portman has $5 million on hand while Strickland only has half a million. The Ohio Senate race is in the top five most expensive races in the country. At the top spot is Pennsylvania, where its Senate race has generated more than $161 million.

While Democrats have been pushing their voters to cast early ballots, the Republican nominee for president has been on the campaign trail urging people to consider changing their early votes. Donald Trump was in Wisconsin this week, saying voters who'd cast ballots for Hillary Clinton could switch their votes. But Ohio State University law professor Steven Huefner says not under Ohio's election laws.

"It's a more complicated election system if you choose to allow that kind of change. You have to make arrangements so that election workers can be confident that they're not counting one voter's vote multiple times."

Voters can change their early vote in six states, including Michigan, New York and the swing state of Pennsylvania, where both Trump and Clinton will be the day before Election Day. And in Wisconsin, voters can change their absentee ballot up to three times.

The story of a small town along the Ohio River being bought out by a large electric utility is now being told on the big screen. The documentary examines the buyout and the residents effected by pollution. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Most of the residents decided to move because of the air pollution problems created by the nearby coal plant.

Eve Morgenstern, the film's director, says those who moved and those who stayed all have important stories to tell.

Morgenstern: "They are the witnesses to what happened, they also suffered the terrible loss of their town. A town that people lived in for generations, a centuries old village."

Progressive Christian leaders are calling out the Republican nominee for president on an issue they think has become a very big problem in this presidential election. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Faith leaders from around the state believe Republican Presidential nominee Donald Trump should repent for what they believe to be misogynistic behavior and violent speech towards women.

Kate Shaner, a pastor at First Community Church in Columbus explains that, because Trump says he's a Christian, he should reevaluate the words he uses when he talks about women.

Shaner: "Speaking in those terms. Alienating 50% of God's people and God's creation is not what Jesus taught us."

Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton, hot off her second debate with Republican opponent Donald Trump, stopped by the swing state of Ohio to try and gain more ground after the fallout of Trump's leaked audio. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Clinton's main goal during her rally at the Ohio State University was to get out the vote and encourage people to register before the deadline. But she also addressed the latest Trump scandal, in which he talks about behavior even Republicans have said amounts to sexual assault. Clinton says he spent more time attacking her than apologizing.

Clinton: "We all heard on that tape, what he thinks of women and how he treats women. And last night he doubled down on his excuse that it's just well locker room banter."

The backers of a proposal to limit the amount the state pays for drugs for Medicaid, prisons and other state programs have won their fight to bring the plan to next year's ballot. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

Secretary of State Jon Husted's office has certified the petitions turned in by Ohioans for Fair Drug Prices, the group pushing the proposal that Ohio pay no more for drugs than the federal Department of Veterans Affairs does. In mid September, the group turned in more than 120,000 valid signatures gathered after a previous round of signatures was rejected. More legal action eventually brought the proposal back to the Ohio Supreme Court, which ordered Husted to certify the signatures. That puts the issue on track for the November 2017 ballot, and the group anticipates heavy opposition from the pharmaceutical industry, as it's facing with a similar plan in California.

Segment Title: Selfie bill to maintain teeth

It is currently a felony to take a picture of your ballot in Ohio. Some lawmakers plan to sponsor a bill to allow voters to take those pictures if they want. But there's a reason that law was put in place. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports.

It's been several years since the state's "ballot sharing" ban was changed. Attorney General Spokesman Dan Tierney says that ban, which includes taking pictures of ballots, was not meant to stifle free speech of voters.

"It was intended to protect voters who may try to intimidate them to vote a certain way."

Tierney explains Ohio's law goes back to the days of Tammany Hall, the famous political machine in New York. Members of that organization coerced and bribed people to vote a certain way. Republican Rep. Mike Duffey says not being allowed to take a picture of the ballot might have worked at that time, but it doesn't work now in the age of social media. Still, he says his bill won't take all of the teeth out of the original law.

"It also prohibits people from intimidating people and those kinds of things. And we are going to leave those provisions intact. We are also going to leave intact all of the provisions about bribery and voter fraud."

Duffey says people often break the current law by taking pictures of their ballots. In fact, he says his opponent did it. But he says having a law on the books that is not enforced or could be enforced unequally is not a good idea. He says lawmakers intend to take the bill up after this November's election.

Segment Title: Husted on rigged voting system

Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump has been talking a lot lately about voter fraud and the possibility of a rigged election. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles talked with the Republican in charge of Ohio's voting system to see what he thought of his party's standard bearer's assertions.

Secretary of State Jon Husted says there are very few cases of voter fraud in Ohio, and adds there are checks and balances to prevent the state's voting system from being rigged. Still, Husted says he'll still vote for Trump.

"I wish he would not do these kinds of things that I think undermine his campaign and his message."

Husted says Ohio's votes are counted in a transparent bipartisan way. He says each polling place is staffed by Republicans and Democrats. And there's a paper trail on votes that will serve as a backup if needed.

Segment Title: Husted lashes out at Christian Times

Ohio's top elections official is taking issue with a recent post on a conservative blog. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles has details.

Secretary of State Jon Husted says the Christian Times newspaper claimed tens of thousands of fraudulent votes for Democratic Presidential candidate Hillary Clinton were being housed in a Franklin County warehouse as part of an effort to rig the election. Husted says that's false and intentionally misleading. He says the photo was a doctored version of a photo used in a story last year about election results in the United Kingdom. Husted says, as a Christian himself, he takes offense to reading such unbelievable lies from a publication alleging Christian ties. And he says no one from the newspaper bothered to call his office, or the Franklin County Board of Elections, to verify any information. He ends his statement with two words – "enough already."

Segment Title: Medical Marijuana rules

Newly proposed rules from the Ohio Department of Commerce would limit the number of growing sites and set fees for growers of marijuana under the state's medical pot law. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports.

The proposal would allow 18 growing sites. Twelve larger sites would cost $200,000 in licenses and fees. Six smaller sites would be $20,000. The limited number of sites perplexes Aaron Marshall, a spokesman for a group that started and then ended its effort to put a ballot issue before voters after the legislature moved to take action on medical marijuana.

"So ten is a monopoly but 18 is fine, huh?"

Marshall says the proposed rules don't give smaller entrepreneurs enough opportunity to be involved, and he thinks they won't meet the needs of patients. The Ohio Department of Commerce says the rules were drafted after discussion with industry experts and allow for changes if they are necessary.

One of the most watched U.S. Senate races in the country is here in Ohio. But maybe not any more, with a new poll showing incumbent Republican Rob Portman with a commanding lead over Democratic Former Governor Ted Strickland. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports.

The latest Quinnipiac Swing State Poll shows Portman leading Strickland 55% to 38% among likely Ohio voters. That 17 point gap has grown from last month, when Quinnipiac showed Portman leading by 11 points. Nearly all Republicans say they prefer Portman, and while 8 in 10 Democrats back Strickland, 15% say they're not supporting their party's nominee. Portman leads with men and women, and he leads with independents by nearly 20 points. Poll Director Peter Brown says it would take a collapse of historic proportions for Portman to lose to Strickland. Portman has outraised Strickland, and groups that support Portman have outspent Strickland four to one in advertising.

Some Republican Party leaders have been denouncing Presidential candidate Donald Trump since a tape revealing his lewd talk about sexual assault came out this weekend. But as Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports, some of Trump's supporters are firing back.

Northeast Ohio Tea Party leader Tom Zawistowski has long been a backer of Trump in this presidential race, and says for him and for many other Tea Partiers, that hasn't changed.

"We never supported Donald Trump because we shared his values. We support Donald Trump because we share our issues."

Zawistowski says his group was ready to support Sen. Rob Portman until he pulled his support from Trump this weekend. Now, Zawistowski says his members plan to vote against Portman.

"If he won't support Donald Trump now, how will he support the changes demanded by us, the voters, through our support of Trump when he's back in Washington?"

A Quinnipiac Poll released last week shows Portman is 17 points ahead of his Democratic challenger, former Governor Ted Strickland.

Tomorrow/today (Tuesday 10/11/16) is the last day to register to vote in Ohio for this election. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports.

If you want to vote next month, check your registration now. Josh Eck, a spokesman for Ohio Secretary of State Jon Husted, says there's been an increase in the number of people signing up to vote lately.

"We always see a lot of registrations before presidential elections. We've seen that number ticking up in Ohio during the past couple of weeks."

It's especially important to check your registration at the office's website www.myohiovote.com If your name isn't there, your voter registration is in question. Some voters have been removed from the rolls as part of a cleanup process. Early voting for most voters begins tomorrow. Segment Title: Federal Court on removed voters

A federal court has ruled thousands of Ohioans who had been removed from the voter rolls must be allowed to vote in this election. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles has details.

The Court told Secretary of State Jon Husted to allow voters who have been removed from the voter rolls since 2011 to vote in this election. Mike Brickner is with the Ohio A.C.L.U.

"The vast majority of people who were illegally purged will be able to show up early, in person to vote or will be able to show up on Election Day, cast a provisional ballot and have that provisional ballot counted."

Husted said he had removed voters who had died, had incorrect addresses or who were deemed as inactive voters. He says he will comply with the judge's order to count votes of people who remain eligible in their original county. Cathy Harper Lee of Lancaster founded the Ohio Crime Victim Justice Center, and says the site was created for victims, family members and advocates.

"Between Ohio and federal, there are over 650 victims' rights, administrative codes, protocols, best practices that exist that most people don't know anything about."

Segment Title: First Portman Strickland Senate debate

The first of three debates between the two major party candidates for US Senate got heated very quickly, as Democratic challenger Ted Strickland, who trails Republican Sen. Rob Portman by double digits, went on the attack. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler has a recap.

The first question in the debate on WMFJ in Youngstown was about trade, and Portman used his answer as an opportunity to refute the blasts Strickland launched against him in his opening argument, saying the former governor doesn't want to talk about his record.

"I don't blame him. If I had his record, I wouldn't want to talk about it either. 350,000 jobs lost when he was governor. 48th in the country in job creation."

Strickland immediately fired back, saying Portman has had many chances to make a difference for Ohioans, especially the middle class.

"He always sided with the rich and the powerful to the detriment of the state of Ohio. That's his record." The candidates sparred over funding for anti-drug problems, health insurance, guns and the scandals involving their presidential candidates.

Segment Title: First weekend early voting done

Polls show the presidential race is close in Ohio – a key swing state that voted for President Obama in the last two elections. This weekend was the first of two weekend of early in person voting, and it had both major political parties working to turn out their voters. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

The numbers aren't in yet, but early in person voting tends to favor Democrats. Ohio Democratic Party chair David Pepper says he likes what he's seen so far.

"We're seeing a nice margin where our voters are out-voting their voters by a good amount both in person and by mail."

But Ohio Republican Party chair Matt Borges says he's feeling confident, and notes Mitt Romney won Election Day in Ohio in 2012.

"If we can continue to have increases in what we know we need to do in the early vote, then we can make sure that Election Day lead stands up."

Absentee voting is down for both Republicans and Democrats compared to 2012, though stats from the Secretary of State's office show the numbers before this weekend were down further in counties that President Obama won than those that went to Romney.

For nearly 2 years Akron based First Energy has lobbied for permission to increase fees on customer's bills to fund infrastructure improvements. Earlier this week the Ohio Public Utilities Commission said yes. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow explains the new fee is expected to raise $200 million dollars a year.

First Energy plans to use those fees to help boost the company's credit and allow them to borrow beyond the $200 million and modernize their network.

The company's Doug Colafella says this is a first step to start using new technology for power distribution.

Colafella: "We believe that the dollars we are requesting would really help provide the ability for us to obtain the financing we need to jumpstart smart grid modernization."

The plan, could cost ratepayers $1 billion over the course of five years. Several critics of the proposal say there's no enforcement mechanism to make sure FirstEnergy achieves grid modernization, and appeals to PUCO are possible.

Incumbent Republican Rob Portman and Democratic former Gov. Ted Strickland aren't the only ones running for US Senate in Ohio. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler talked to Green Party candidate Joe DeMare about his low-profile and low money campaign.

Joe DeMare doesn't just talk about being green – he talks about the blue collar work that he does as a machinist while part of one of the most expensive US Senate races in the country this year.

“It's time we sent someone directly from the shop floor to the Senate floor.”

DeMare says he's one of more than 250 Greens running for office across the country, pushing for a $15 minimum wage and opposing trade deals and Obamacare – which he wants replaced with a single payer system. And DeMare says he thinks it can start a movement if frustrated voters buy in.

“The main way to create an alternative party is to vote for that party.”

And DeMare says he expects to do better than the best performing Green Party candidate in Ohio history, Anita Rios, who got just over three percent of the vote when she ran for governor in 2014.

Segment Title: Kasich vs Faber on Green Energy Standards

One of the biggest fights waiting for lawmakers when they return to work after the elections will have to do with renewable energy in Ohio. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, the spat could come down between Gov. John Kasich and a leader in his own party.

Time is running out on a two-year freeze of the green energy standards that required utility companies in Ohio to use renewable energy and include energy efficiency.

Republican Senate President Keith Faber of Celina says the standards that were created in 2008 were unreasonable and arbitrary. As Faber explains, the Senate will likely try to change the standards but the exact plan is still up in the air.

Faber: "I think we need to continue the freeze. The question is for how long, and what does that mean? I think that's going to be where our discussion is going to be and where we land is still an open question."

Lawmakers land in several places on the issue. Some want a complete repeal of the standards and to let utility companies decide on their own whether or not green energy is a good investment. Some want to bring the standards back with changes and others, like Faber, want to continue the freeze.

Gov. John Kasich has said in the past that an indefinite freeze would be "unacceptable." He recently told a group of students at the University of Texas at Austin that he has already sent a strong message to lawmakers.

Kasich: "I've told the legislature the standards that were set were unrealistic but if you try and kill the standards whether it has to do with the renewables or whether it has to do with the issue of saving energy I'll veto the bill and go to the higher standards."

Pro-green energy groups say the standards create a better energy investment in resources like wind and solar power that will eventually lead to lower electric bills. But critics have said they're too costly.

The current freeze was set up to be temporary, so if the House and Senate do nothing with it during the lame duck session, then the standards come back at the beginning of 2017.

Time is running out on a two-year freeze of Ohio's green energy standards which require utilities to include renewable energy on the grid while also seeking energy efficiency. Now Gov. John Kasich and a top leader in his own party have laid out different ideas on where lawmakers should go with the issue. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Republican Senate President Keith Faber of Celina says he'd like to see the Legislature extend the freeze.

But Gov. John Kasich has said in the past that an indefinite freeze would be unacceptable. He has even stronger words for any attempt to repeal the standards.

Kasich: "I've told the legislature the standards that were set were unrealistic but if you try and kill the standards whether it has to do with the renewables or whether it has to do with the issue of saving energy I'll veto the bill and go to the higher standards."

With less than a week to go before Election Day, several polls show Donald Trump is closing in on Hillary Clinton nationwide and even leading in Ohio. This leaves many to wonder if the FBI's decision to reopen its investigation into Clinton is playing a role in the race. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Election analyst Kyle Kondik with the University of Virginia's Center for Politics notes that Clinton's lead has been shrinking. But he says "October surprises" like the FBI Director James Comey announcing another review of Clinton's emails don't usually decide elections, but...

Kondik: "I think that if Clinton were to lose after basically leading the whole race by a little of a lot at various times throughout the General Election I think we'd look back at the Comey letter as being a very historically important development."

Kondik says it's been difficult to get accurate polling data because of logistical factors and hard-to-predict turnout numbers.

The statewide organization that oversees doctors in Ohio is telling physicians to hold off on recommending medical marijuana for patients. In an interview with Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles, Reggie Fields with the Ohio State Medical Association explains why.

Fields: "We have advised them to, essentially, before they are to recommend medical marijuana, that they should wait until the rules and regulations surrounding the new law are put in place, drafted and promulgated in the state of Ohio and our understanding is that may not come to fruition until September of 2017.

Ingles: "So why are you recommending that?"

Fields: "We are merely just saying let's make sure those rule and regulations are in place so that physicians can be assured that whatever steps or provisions they are taking in recommending medical marijuana as part of a treatment plan for a patient that they are doing things according to what is allowable in the state of Ohio.

Ingles: "Some people would see this as a stall tactic, particularly those patients who already have used medical marijuana in other states and are wanting to get it here."

Fields: Yes, no I don't, I don't, first of all you should keep in mind that the law itself is a voluntary law for physicians so any physician could choose if they want to voluntarily use medical marijuana as part of their clinical treatment for a patient so certainly if a physician wanted to do that, they certainly could. But again, the law is very clear where it says that if you are going to recommend it, you have to follow these specific rules and regulations. The problem is that these specific rules and regulations have not yet been drafted and promulgated here in the state of Ohio.

For months U.S. Senator Rob Portman has admonished different controversial statements made by Republican Presidential Nominee Donald Trump. However, Portman stayed by his endorsement of Trump. There will be three debates between Republican U.S. Senator Rob Portman and his Democratic challenger, former Governor Ted Strickland, in the coming weeks. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports on what's at stake.

University of Cincinnati Political Science Professor David Niven says Portman's double-digit lead in recent polls is due largely to the estimated $50 million spent by groups that don't have to reveal their donors. But he says Portman could be challenged in the upcoming debates.

"He's stuck to mainstream issues instead of talking Republican talking points. He's stuck to his own personal campaign instead of running with the Republican ticket. So he's done as much as possible to both be an ever present candidate and the invisible man and thus far, it's worked for him."

Some observers feel Ohio's US Senate contest is all but over, with incumbent Rob Portman leading Democratic former Gov. Ted Strickland by around 15 points. But the candidates are continuing their tour of the state with three debates – the first was Friday in Youngstown, and last night they met in Columbus. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler watched the debate and has a recap.

The candidates were asked about their support for their party's controversial nominees, trade and immigration. Democrat Ted Strickland said the more than $40 million in outside money spent in this race has been a problem. "If we spent our own money and we didn't have the billionaires interfering and trying to buy this Senate seat, I think I would be ahead of this guy by 10 points."

The US Supreme Court has rejected an appeal from advocates for the homeless and the Ohio Democratic Party to ensure that more absentee and provisional ballots are counted. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports that settles the final lawsuit of the 2016 election over Ohio's election laws – for now.

At issue was whether to count provisional and absentee ballots when there are minor discrepancies between those ballots and the forms the voters initially filled out, such as differences in names or addresses. Secretary of State Jon Husted says only a few thousand ballots with those differences were tossed out in the last two years. But Subodh Chandra, who represented the groups filing the lawsuit, says there's no way to compare the last two years with this presidential election.

“You're going to have much higher turnout of minority populations, and you're going to have hundreds of thousands of voters that Husted wrongfully purged from the rolls, illegally purged from the rolls.”

Thousands of those voters can cast provisional ballots because of another lawsuit. Chandra says though the court denied the application for a stay for this election, the group plans to continue the fight.

State agencies are already looking past this election and months ahead – to the upcoming budget process. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler reports the governor's office is working up his final two year spending plan that he'll introduce in January.

Each of Gov. John Kasich's three budgets has included tax cuts. Republicans will still be in charge in the legislature after this fall's vote, so Office of Budget and Management Director Tim Keen says Kasich will likely propose more tax cuts.

"We have had success in moving tax cuts through the General Assembly several times, and I would expect that the Governor will have a tax reform proposal that will include personal income tax cuts in the budget you see in January."

But Keen says the first quarter of the year has been down in terms of tax revenue projections versus actual money brought in, so agencies have been asked what they would do in the event of spending cuts.

Just a few hours after Republican nominee Donald Trump spoke at a private event in Columbus, President Obama will be a few blocks down the street at the Ohio Democratic Party's annual state dinner. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles is there.

In a couple of hours, the ballroom here at the Columbus Convention Center will be full of Democrats who paid anywhere from $50 to $4000 to hear him speak. Obama will talk about his support for Democratic candidate Hillary Clinton, and will lead a rally for her tomorrow in Cleveland. Segment Title: Trump campaign vs Ohio GOP chair

The rift between the Trump campaign on the chair of the Ohio Republican Party blew up into what appears to be a full-blown war this weekend. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

It's no secret Matt Borges has had concerns about Donald Trump as the party's nominee. But Trump's Ohio campaign chair Bob Paduchik suggested this was personal in his letter to the Ohio Republican Party's state central committee. The letter blasted the chairman for promoting himself as a possible future head of the Republican National Committee with what Paduchik called "an apparently insatiable need for publicity". Borges responded to Paduchik's letter with a 10-point list of ways the state party is supporting Trump, and closed by saying he would never allow what he called "the bruised ego of a staffer" get in the way of his job as state party chair. This comes as Trump's running mate Mike Pence visits the Cincinnati area and Columbus today.

Segment Title: Trump Doubles Down on Refusal to Accept Results of Election

Republican Presidential nominee Donald Trump visited one of Ohio's most conservative counties to motivate his staunch supporters to go out and vote. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, Trump doubled down on what he said in last night's final presidential debate - that he wouldn't accept the results of the election outright.

Trump has been playing this issue up more than any other in the past week, claiming the elections could be rigged in Hillary Clinton's favor. In front of a big crowd in Delaware County, Trump added fuel to that fire.

Trump: "I will totally accept the results of this great and historic presidential election...if I win!"

Trump continued to build doubt by linking Clinton to other claims of corruption, such as rigging a town hall during the primaries.

Ohio's top elections official, who has said he will vote for Trump, has rebuked the idea of election rigging.

Segment Title: Trump speaks to millennial voters in Columbus

Donald Trump squeezed in a visit to Columbus in between rallies in Florida and Cincinnati. He spoke to an audience of mostly students – a group that typically doesn't turn out to vote, and when its members do, they often vote Democrat. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler talked to some of them about what drew them to Donald Trump.

The crowd of a few hundred, mostly young adult college students, erupted in applause several times, including when the candidate approvingly singled out a man wearing a "Hillary for Prison" t-shirt. Trump talked about jobs, student debt, college costs and taxes and blasted Hillary Clinton. 23-year-old Christian Franceschi is a student at Ohio State, and said he likes that Trump is, using his word, "real".

"I know a lot of the people who want to support Trump and are probably going to vote for him – they just don't publicly show it because it's not a popular idea."

20-year-old Sarah Dougherty from Cleveland is a student at Ohio University, and said she's aware of the controversy involving his graphic description of possibly illegal conduct with women.

"Sometimes his words are vulgar, but I know he has a good intent for helping our country out, and I know that he's honest."

Anna Gillette is an 18-year-old student from Wright State in Dayton, and was in the front row to see Trump. She said she's not too concerned about her candidate's comments.

"I'm sure a lot of guys say stuff like that, and it was 10 years ago. And he obviously didn't know he was going to president 10 years ago, so I don't know. He apologized for it and he regrets saying it."

Some students said they plan to vote Republican because they're fiscally conservative but socially liberal. But not all of them. 18-year-old Joe Bralley of Newark is a high school student. He said he would prefer if Trump were more conservative, but that he likes that he's blunt.

"I feel like a lot of it is a bit unjust and twisting of his words, but other parts of it –
"He's a smart man. He's hardly put as many ads out as Hillary has, but Trump is a household name now." While many at the event were decked out with Trump paraphernalia and appeared to be in enthusiastic support, others said they weren't happy with either major party choice, but that for them Trump is the best choice.

Segment Title: Trump Supporters Disappointed with Ohio GOP

Donald Trump's supporters in Ohio are being forced to take sides after the presidential nominee cut ties with the chair of the Ohio Republican Party. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, this fracture could have lasting impact after the votes are counted.

The first major Trump campaign event in Ohio following the split with the Ohio GOP came with a sense of awkwardness.

As supporters filed into the Greater Columbus Convention Center to see Republican vice presidential nominee Mike Pence, they admitted that they're disappointed with state party leaders.

That includes Cindy Novak of Thornville.

Novak: "I have to admire the Democrats. They get behind whoever it is, they don't split. But Republicans go in a circular firing squad and shoot each other we need to stop it we just need to stop it."

Trump supporters added that they're less likely to vote for more traditional Republican candidates like Gov. John Kasich in the future because of this fracture.

A national group is making a big push in Ohio, trying to get supporters of minor and third party candidates to trade their votes. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports it's an organized effort to keep Donald Trump from winning swing states like Ohio.

Craig Clawson of central Ohio is a supporter of Green Party candidate Jill Stein. He doesn't want Trump to win, so through the site TrumpTraders.org, he connected with a Clinton supporter in South Carolina, a state Clinton will likely lose. Clawson will now cast his swing state ballot for Clinton and that South Carolina voter will support Stein.

Clawson: "I can have someone by proxy vote my conscious and not necessarily put us in a position where Trump would benefit from that."

TrumpTraders.org is backed by Clinton supporters.

Mike Brickner with the American Civil Liberties Union of Ohio says there might be legal observers in polling places but adds they've been registered and gone through a process to insure they won't intimidate voters.

"Polling place observers are not allowed to interact with voters. They are not allowed to campaign in the polling place. They are not allowed to harass or intimidate voters."

This weekend brought out a tape of Republican nominee Donald Trump making lewd and potentially criminal allegations about interactions with women and a Wikileaks dump of Wall Street speeches by Democratic nominee Hillary Clinton. When US Sen. Rob Portman said he won't vote Trump for president, he said he'd write in Trump's running mate Mike Pence. Secretary of State spokesman Josh Eck has some advice for anyone considering writing in their presidential vote.

"If you write in a name that isn't actually a filed write-in candidate, then your vote in that race won't count. But the rest of your ballot will still count."

With the clock ticking down to Election Day and early voting already underway, voters in Ohio have a lot of questions about casting their ballots, especially when it comes to provisional ballots. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Josh Eck, with the Ohio Secretary of State's Office, says provisional ballots are mostly used when a voter doesn't bring their ID or if they aren't in the book as registered.

He dispelled the notion that provisional ballots are only counted if the race is close.

Eck: "Your board of elections is going to go through every single ballot and they're going to go through it meticulously to see if you're an eligible and registered voter and if you are then the board of elections will vote in an open public meeting and they'll determine which ones are supposed to be counted and which ones weren't."

If a voter used a provisional ballot because they didn't have their ID then Eck says they have 7 days to verify and take ID to their county board of elections.

More than 208,000 provisional ballots were cast in 2012 -- just over 83 percent were counted.

Segment Title: Ohio Republican and Democratic parties have differing views

Tuesday's election has polarized many people. As Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles reports, the chairs of the Ohio Republican and Democratic parties have differing views on why the polarization is a good thing.

Thousands of people throughout the country have taken to the streets, protesting the election of Republican Donald Trump as President. Democratic Party Chairman David Pepper says he understands the division.

"I'm really worried where we are."

Pepper explains some voters who are gay, minorities, undocumented citizens, women or others who feel insulted by Trump or threatened by him are troubled that their friends and neighbors chose to support Trump with their votes.

"The people who he was attacking the whole year and a half thought, 'My gosh, this guy is running for President by saying we are other people and we need to be treated differently' and so now we have millions of people in this country after Tuesday thinking 'it wasn't just polls, it wasn't just the candidate, now the country has just verified' and so it may not be interpreted that way by some people but the people who have been targeted by all of this, that's the way they see it."

"If the Democrats' takeaway was that this was a racial thing or this was an anger thing or whatever, good."

That's Matt Borges, the chair of the Ohio Republican Party. He says Trump spoke for many people who didn't have a voice before.

"I think there are a lot of voters out there who didn't think Donald Trump's message was negative at all. I think what they thought was 'somebody actually hears me. Somebody is giving me a voice for the first time in a long time.' I've been told by the establishment...a term he uses, the politicians, a term he used...he was using these terms on purpose. They feel like those people have held them back and don't listen to them. And why is it a bad thing that they now feel like they have a voice?"

Trump beat Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton by nine points in Ohio.

But the state's casino control commission has seen an increase in so-called "skill game" parlors popping up around Ohio.

Morrison: "With this licensing scheme it gives the state powers that it hasn't had the entire time that these purported skill game operators have been operating in order to target them and get them out of the state."

These establishments claim to be conducting games that take skill but they're essentially slot machines.

A year and a half of stump speeches, debates and Twitter wars all come down to this, the last day of campaigning before Election Day. And the polls in Ohio are very tight between Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton. Ohio Public Radio's Statehouse News Bureau caught up with the Clinton and Trump campaigns to find out how they're handling the last minute push.

Susan: "If you don't mind knocking on some doors that's what we're doing."

Dozens of volunteers cycled through a central Ohio campaign office for Hillary Clinton. They dropped in. Grabbed their clipboards. Got their marching orders. Then went back out into the community for one last round of canvassing.

Susan: "The campaign's goal is to knock on the door of every Democrat twice."

Sheldon Gleisser, a self-proclaimed lazy person, says he forced himself to get off the couch and stump for Clinton because he believes she'll make a good leader. But Gleisser says he's also motivated by his distaste for Donald Trump.

Gleisser: "In that office you can be not very bright, or you can be crazy but you can't be both and to come out here and do this it's like no I don't like doing this I don't like knocking on doors and saying high would you like to...but it's got to be done."

As Clinton's Ohio spokesperson Laura Zapata explains, there's a high level of excitement among the volunteers as they make their final push. Zapata says it's all about reaching out and connecting to those who are still undecided.

Zapata: "Making sure that they know that their neighbors – who their neighbors are and why they're voting for Hillary Clinton and sharing their personal story."

Volunteers say the number one question they get from people when they open their doors is about Clinton's email server controversy, but the Clinton supporters say they talk about how the investigations haven't resulted in any charges or indictments.

It turns out Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Clinton may have won one more county in Ohio than originally reported. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler has details.

Lorain County was a close one in the presidential race – as in most parts of the state, Clinton won the urban cores, but Republican Donald Trump’s big wins in the suburbs and rural areas propelled him to an overall victory. Election night totals showed Trump won Lorain County by 388 votes. But final results from the board of elections with all ballots counted, including provisionals, show Clinton actually edged out Trump by 131 votes. That brings to eight the number of Ohio counties Clinton carried, compared to 17 won by President Obama four years ago. All official county results are still not yet certified by the Secretary of State, but since Trump won Ohio by 8.5 points, the final outcome won’t change.

In the wake of Monday's attack, students from the Ohio State University are adding a unique perspective to a bill that would lift the automatic concealed weapons ban on college campuses. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

An incident at Ohio State University has left one suspect dead and nine others hospitalized as a result. But as Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports, Ohio's Governor says it could have been so much worse.

Gov. John Kasich talked about his memories of being a student at Ohio State, and said the violence took a piece out of everyone at OSU, because many were shocked that an incident like this could have happened at the state's largest university.

"But we are a strong, tough resilient community."

Kasich said the tragedy could have been so much worse, and he and university leaders credit first responders for controlling the situation quickly.

The leader of Ohio's Democrats is speaking out about the losses his party suffered at the ballot box this week. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles has details.

Ohio Democratic Party Chairman David Pepper says presidential nominee Hillary Clinton's loss was devastating.

"What we saw was a tidal wave that was far bigger than Ohio."

Clinton lost in ten counties that President Obama won in 2012. And her losses in some counties were staggering. For instance, she only got 30% of the vote in Pike County, a county that Obama lost by only one vote in 2012. And Montgomery County, which Obama won, voted Republican for the first time in 28 years.

The GOP gained a seat in the Senate this fall, so there will be 24 Republicans and nine Democrats in the 33-member chamber. And when the new session of the General Assembly starts in January, it will have some new leadership. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports.

Republican Senator Larry Obhof will lead the Senate next year as term limited President Keith Faber takes a seat in the Ohio House. Obhof, who has been in the Senate since 2011, will be the first Senator from Medina County to lead the chamber since the 1860s. Senator Bob Peterson of Washington Court House will be President Pro Tempore, Randy Gardner of Bowling Green will be the Majority Floor Leader and Gayle Manning of North Ridgeville has been reelected as Majority Whip. Backers of a bill that would allow for expanded use of in-car breathalyzers for those convicted of drunk driving are hoping state senators will take action on the measure soon. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports.

Annie Rooney of Ross County was killed by a repeat drunk driver in 2013. Her brother Walt has been asking Ohio senators to pass what's been called "Annie's Law", which provides incentives for requiring drunk drivers to install the devices.

"It would act like a probation officer every time they try to start their vehicle. If they do blow alcohol into it after they are convicted, it would not start the vehicle."

The bill passed the House easily, but Republican Senator Jay Hottinger says he's not sure there's time to pass it in the Senate.

"The difficulty I think right now is the process of whether or not we can have enough committee hearings to be able to weigh the bill and in short order, get it through."

If the Senate doesn't pass it, the bill will die and the process would have to start over with the next General Assembly in January.

More Ohioans voted early this year than ever before. But there are still long lines forming at local polling locations. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow talked to Ohio Secretary of State Jon Husted to get an Election Day update.

The secretary of state says his office received no reports of major problems. But Jon Husted has heard about long lines during the morning hours. He says that's the normal before-work-traffic, and that he's sticking to his forecast that the turnout this year will not break Ohio records.

Husted: "There's just no reason to believe based on what we've seen so far that this is an abnormal presidential election we're seeing steady turnout across the state but nothing spectacular."

Anyone in line when the polls close at 7:30 will be able to vote. And, if you still have an absentee ballot at home you can fill it out and personally deliver it to your county board of elections.

Nearly 5 and a half million Ohioans cast ballots in the November presidential election, making the turnout in 2016 slightly higher than it was four years ago. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler has some highlights from election results, just made official by the Secretary of State.

More than 1.87 million Ohioans voted early absentee, more than in any other election in state history. And the state logged the fewest number of provisional ballots since 2004. Polls showed the major party presidential candidates were unpopular, but turnout was more than 71%, more than a half a point higher than in 2012. Donald Trump beat Hillary Clinton by nearly 447-thousand votes or a little more than 8 percent. Clinton won eight counties, but Trump won 80 – and won 30 counties by more than 70%. Trump improved on Mitt Romney's losing performance in Ohio in 2012 while Clinton lagged behind President Obama. Trump did better than Romney in 83 of 88 Ohio counties, while Clinton did better than Obama in just 2.

Segment Title: Electoral College explanation in less than a minute

Republican President-Elect Donald Trump won more than the 270 electoral votes needed to put him in the White House. But backers of Democrat Hillary Clinton are questioning whether the Electoral College should change since she won more votes overall. Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles explains.

It would take a constitutional amendment to abolish the Electoral College, but some have suggested it, including Donald Trump a few years ago. As far the suggestion that some electors should change their votes based on the popular vote, which now favors Clinton, Josh Eck with the Secretary of State's office says electors in Ohio can't.

“In Ohio, as in many states, the members of the electoral college are actually bound by the popular vote within their state, so the members of the Electoral College that are representing Donald Trump, they were the ones who were elected on Election Day so when they show up for the Electoral College, they'll be required to vote for Donald Trump.”

About 160 electors in 15 states are not bound by their states' votes. The Electoral College meets December 19th but most pundits think it's a long shot that Clinton's supporters could get enough electors to change their votes to make a difference in the outcome.

Thousands of people stood in huge lines at boards of elections offices in the state's biggest counties. At the Franklin County Board of Elections, the line on Saturday was an eighth of a mile long. But Franklin County Board Director David Payne says no one waited more than 45 minutes, because of a little advance planning.

The state's top leaders are squaring off on a bill to change Ohio's green energy policies, and the clock is ticking – a two year freeze on the state's renewable energy standards for electric utilities expires in a few weeks. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Ohio's green energy standards spell out how much renewable energy utilities must be using year-by-year and the same goes for energy efficiency.

Senate Republicans have a bill to keep that benchmark at its current level and delay required state standards for five years.

As Republican House Speaker Cliff Rosenberger explains, the House bill would make these standards an option as well.

Rosenberger: "You're gonna look at maybe some shifts from mandates to goals. Some reduction in the energy efficiency numbers and then more conversation – mercantile opt-out I think maybe will be a part of it."

If lawmakers don't pass anything by the end of the year, the original standards will come back next year.

The House and Senate are working on bills that could essentially continue a freeze on the state's renewable energy requirements, something Gov. John Kasich says he's against. But there are lawmakers who say soon, the threat of the governor's veto will not be as powerful as it used to be. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Opponents fear a Senate bill that delays the state's green energy requirements for utilities until 2020 is essentially another freeze.

Gov. John Kasich has said he's against an indefinite freeze and has threatened to veto anything that he feels guts the requirements.

But the bill's sponsor, Republican Sen. Bill Seitz of Cincinnati, says the House and Senate will have more power next year.

Seitz: "Both chambers will have veto-proof majorities so you know then we might take a tactic less to the governor's liking next year if he vetoes it this year."

States around the country are working on crafting new education policies to align with the federal plan known as the “Every Student Succeeds Act”. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, a group delivered a report to the state board of education on what it discovered through several public hearings.

The “Every Student Succeeds Act” replaces the “No Child Left Behind Act”. It required states find out what challenges communities face in educating kids.

Suzanne Allen of the coalition Philanthropy Ohio says it held 10 public hearings and heard from 1,500 people. She says ESSA offers the chance to pinpoint the needs of Ohio’s schools.

Allen: “When you look at the amount of money that is put into this system it really becomes a huge opportunity to take a look at what some of the education needs are and the community needs.”

The consensus from the meetings was that the biggest challenge schools face is poverty. There was also strong support in investing in more early childhood education.

Segment Title: Guns Everywhere Bill Update

A bill that allows people to carry guns into more areas such as daycares and college campuses is moving through the Legislature as the clock runs out on this year's session. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

There's a list of places that where people are automatically banned from carrying concealed weapons. That includes daycares, airport terminals and government buildings. But a bill moving closer to becoming a law would cross those three places off the list, with some exceptions.

That bill would also lift the concealed carry ban on college campuses, allowing boards of trustees to make that decision. Republican Sen. Bill Coley of Cincinnati says this kind of local control is important to have for schools in smaller towns.

Coley: "When you get into rural Ohio, law enforcements can be at least 15 minutes away and someone with a weapon can wreak a lot of havoc on unarmed people."

But there's strong disagreement with the assertion in Coley's scenario that allowing people on campus to be armed would help.

Doll: "It's a myth to think that someone who has concealed carry would take down that attacker."

Barbara Doll is part of the group Moms Demand Action for Common Sense, which calls for the exact opposite of this bill. They want to keep guns out of what they call "sensitive areas", which include daycares and college campuses.

Doll says her group isn't for gun control but what she calls strong regulation that includes universal background checks and training.

The legislation under consideration would also downgrade the penalty for someone who illegally carries a concealed weapon onto a college campus. The violation is currently a first degree misdemeanor but the bill would drop it to a minor misdemeanor as long as the offender has a concealed carry license.

The bill seemed to be going nowhere after it passed the Ohio House a year ago. However, it started to pick up momentum last week with rumbles of it possibly moving through the Senate.

A documentary filmmaker opened a pop-up chicken restaurant in Columbus this weekend that claims to feature “fast food with integrity”. It’ll be open for two more days, to get customer feedback. But Ohio Public Radio’s Karen Kasler reports it’s unclear whether it is what it seems.

At Holy Chicken near Westerville, the line is out the door. But on the walls and tables, there are messages about how the chickens, though more humanely raised, isn’t really healthy and the paint colors and décor can be manipulative. Morgan Spurlock, the filmmaker who made “Super-Size Me”, insists it’s a real restaurant, but with a real message.

Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

O'Donnell conceded the race to Fischer, who had a 24 thousand vote lead over O'Donnell. The state's highest court says internet retailers which have no offices or employees in Ohio but sell products to Ohio residents still have to pay a tax that nearly all Ohio businesses pay. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports the decision deals with about $1.7 billion in revenue each year.

Online retailers Newegg, Crutchfield and Mason Shoe Companies argued they don't have offices in Ohio, so they shouldn't have to pay the CAT. In the 5-2 decision, the majority said a company needs to have Ohio offices for the state to collect sales taxes, but not for the collection of the CAT, often called a "privilege of doing business" tax. The state's Daniel Fausey told the court in May that the US Supreme Court agrees.

"The Supreme Court has already said that states may ask for their fair share from companies doing business in the state. And that's what the CAT does. This isn't, as it's been presented, an overreach to grab out-of-staters."

Segment Title: Petricoff Resigns After Senate Rejects Kasich Nomination

A top utilities watchdog, nominated to that spot by Gov. John Kasich, has stepped down after the Senate rejected that appointment. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Republican Senate President Keith Faber says Howard Petricoff acted as an activist for other energy groups and would have too many conflicts of interest as a member of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

That's why the Senate says it rejected Petricoff's appointment to the PUCO, made by Kasich.

After Petricoff resigned from his post, Kasich's office put out a statement saying he disagrees with the Senate's decision and will set out again to find a qualified replacement.

PUCO Chair Asim Haque didn't mince words in his statement saying he was disappointed in the Senate and hopes it doesn't scare away other talented people from looking to serve Ohio.

Segment Title: Phillips' clemency and execution future

The first man scheduled to be put to death in Ohio since a problematic execution almost three years ago is asking for life without parole. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler was at the clemency hearing for Ronald Phillips.

43-year-old Ronald Phillips of Akron was sentenced to die for the rape and murder of his girlfriend's three-year-old daughter Sheila Marie Evans in 1993, when he was 19. Attorneys for Phillips say the jury that convicted him never heard details of the horrible abuse he suffered growing up. But the Summit County Prosecutor's Office said this is another delay tactic, and that he deserves to die for his terrible crime. The parole board's recommendation will go to the governor on December 9. But it might not matter, since the state announced last month it wants to use a never before tried three drug combination for executions. The legal battle over that new protocol is just beginning, and unlikely to conclude in time for that scheduled execution date the second week of next month.

Now that the election is over, lawmakers will be coming back to work at the Statehouse for the lame duck session. But the presidential race is likely to come up in what they discuss. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler reports.

Republican Donald Trump may have won Ohio by 454,000 votes, but Hillary Clinton is leading in the popular vote by more than 2 million ballots. Rep. David Leland of Columbus, who's the former head of the Ohio Democratic Party, says that shouldn't happen.

"I'll be sponsoring legislation in the General Assembly to promote the National Popular Vote Compact, so that the people in the United States, the majority of the people who vote for a presidential candidate are the ones that get listened to."

That compact has passed in 10 states and the District of Columbia, which all lean Democratic and have a total of 165 electoral votes – it would take effect if states with a total of 270 votes approve it, and if Congress approves it.

Ohio's U.S. Senate race was touted as two political heavyweights between incumbent Republican Rob Portman and Democratic former Gov. Ted Strickland. But in the end Portman followed a very specific plan to victory. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

A celebration like this may have seemed out of reach 15 months ago when Portman was trailing Strickland by 9 points in the polls and had very low name recognition. But Portman was a technician with his message and rarely strayed away from his talking points.

Portman called for unity after an election that showed, in his opinion that people were fed up with an inefficient government.

Portman: "They expect better, we are capable of better and with a fresh start there will never be a better moment than now to rise above the disfunction in Washington, DC and find that common ground."

A huge piece to Portman's win was campaign fundraising, with more than $36 million coming in from outside spending.

Ohio's newly, re-elected Senator Rob Portman will return to Capitol Hill with a Republican-controlled Congress and White House. But Portman says he's still ready to enforce checks and balances with President-elect Donald Trump. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Portman says he doesn't have the concerns about a Trump presidency that he had when he decided not to vote for the Republican nominee.

However, Portman did say he's prepared to keep the executive office in check if he ever thinks the president-elect goes too far.

Portman: "I view myself as an independent voice for Ohio and if I disagree with something from the Trump administration just as what would've been the case from the Clinton administration I will of course stand up and I assume others will as well."

Portman wouldn't say where he stands on Trump's proposal for a wall along the Mexican border, instead he says general immigration reform could act as a "virtual wall."

It hasn't even been a month since the 2016 vote, but the speculation has been going for months on who will be running in 2018 for the top five statewide offices, which will all be open. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler talked with a Democrat who says he's ready to run for governor.

Senate Minority Leader Joe Schiavoni says he's reached out to all 88 county chairs, to union members and other Democratic leaders. He says he'll be focused on schools, crime and the opioid epidemic – what he calls working class issues that voters in his Youngstown area district were so concerned about, they voted for the Republican candidate for president.

“Those folks that crossed over for Trump are hard-working people that felt that they were neglected by Hillary Clinton's campaign and the Democratic Party for years, and I think that I'll be able to bring them back.”

The state's auditor is sending a message to all of Ohio's school districts to beware of the pitfalls that can come with open enrollment, which can cost schools up to $1 million. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

When a student decides to leave one school district and enroll in another, state funding follows the student to the new district.

But state auditor Dave Yost says his office found that some districts over- extend their open enrollment by taking in too many students and therefore needing to invest in more resources.

Yost: "When open enrollment first came in it was like 'well let's get these other people in and the state is gonna send us a check for more kids' and that's true up to a point but you gotta watch that tipping point very closely."

For example, Yost says Coventry Local School District (where?) could save $1.6 million by reducing open enrollment, which right now makes up 37% of its roster.

Segment Title: Senate Rejects Kasich Nomination to PUCO

There seems to be friction among the Republican Party's top leaders as the Senate rejects a major appointment by Gov. John Kasich. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Republican Senate President Keith Faber, of Celina, said Howard Petricoff would have too many conflicts of interest as a commissioner because of his time advocating for different energy groups.

Faber insists the decision is nothing personal.

Faber "This isn't about the relationship between Keith Faber and John Kasich, it's not the relationship between the Senate and the governor, it's not even about the relationship between the Senate and Howard Petricoff. This is about the constitutional process and this transcends personal issues."

There have been suggestions that the friction stems from Kasich's veto of a Senate elections bill just days before he announced Petricoff's nomination.

A new report suggests a high school graduation crisis could be coming in Ohio - more than a third of the state's high schoolers have not yet scored what they need to in order to get their diploma. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports education leaders and teachers believe the clock is ticking down to that potential disaster, and are begging for help.

A new report from the Ohio Department of Education shows that about 35% of the state's high school juniors are not on track to meet the standards needed to graduate.

This is based on the new standard where students must accumulate a certain score from 7 different tests.

Scott DiMauro with the Ohio Education Association says that's a policy that needs to be changed. "We're confronting the reality that we've got a whole lot of students through no fault of their own who are at risk of not graduating next year because of a policy decision that wasn't very well thought through."

State Board of Education members have started discussing the idea of bringing down the standard so more students from the class of 2018 can graduate.

It was a bad night for many Ohio Democrats. Here's Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler.

Only about 15 of the Ohio House 99 races were considered competitive. Four had no incumbent, and the Republican caucus picked up another member as Jay Edwards won the seat left open by term limited Democrat Debbie Phillips of Athens. That means there will be 66 Republicans and 33 Democrats in the House when the next session of the General Assembly convenes in January. Senate Republicans also added a seat to their 23 member dominance of that chamber as Frank Hoagland beat incumbent Lou Gentile of Steubenville. And in the clash of two well-known northeast Ohio names, Republican Matt Dolan – of the family that owns the Cleveland Indians – beat Democrat Emily Hagan, the niece of former lawmaker Bob Hagan and 2002 candidate for governor Tim Hagan.

Many County Board of Elections officials say the early in-person voter turnout in this year's election has been breaking records. The reporters of the Statehouse News Bureau talked to voters in two counties in Central Ohio - one run by Republican and one dominated by Democrats.

The final weekend before Election Day was extremely busy for the Franklin County Early Voting Center. Anne Leonard Palmer of Columbus was like many voters in saying she'd rather get it out of the way over the weekend rather than fight the lines during Election Day.

Leonard-Palmer: "We're trying to reduce the amount of stress at the polls on Tuesday morning and it's important to me to vote because it's our right and it's incredibly important to have the country to go in the direction I hope it will."

Though Franklin County saw a single day record on Friday with more than 6,800 in person voters, officials say 60% of the overall voter turnout is still expected for Election Day.

Democrats say they'll appeal a decision announced yesterday in a case involving activities planned near polling places on Tuesday by Donald Trump's campaign. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler reports.

The decision overturns a Friday afternoon ruling from a federal judge in Cleveland, who issued a restraining order against the Trump campaign to stop conduct that the Democrats feared could harass or intimidate voters on Election Day. Democrats have filed similar suits in other key swing states, saying action is needed to protect voters from an aggressive presence by Trump supporters at polling places that could intimidate them. The Trump campaign had appealed the Friday restraining order on First Amendment grounds. In overturning that order Sunday, a three judge panel from the appeals court said the Democrats' case was unlikely to win on its merits, and that they would not hold a hearing. Ohio Democratic Party chair David Pepper says the party will appeal to the US Supreme Court.

It's coming down to the wire for lawmakers to reach agreement on a hot-button bill – how to shore up the fund that pays jobless benefits to unemployed workers. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, several advocacy groups are still not happy with the proposal to change unemployment compensation funding.

A laid off worker would be able to get unemployment checks could slide between 26 weeks to 20 weeks based on a new bill proposed in the House and Senate. That's up from a previous bill that cut the time to 12 weeks.

The bill would also require more businesses to pay more into the fund. But opponents including Lisa Hamler-Fugitt with the Ohio Association of Foodbanks say workers are still taking on too much of the burden.

Hamler-Fugitt: "There is no argument that something has to be done to move our unemployment compensation trust fund to solvency but doing it in the waning days of the lame duck is not the way to do it for long-term sustainability."

Supporters of the bill, which has been in the works since last November, say this plan will make Ohio's unemployment insurance solvent.

Things are not always as they seem, and in the past couple of years that's been the case for both Republican and Democratic nominees. Sometimes a candidate doesn't live up to his or her potential or misleads the party in some way. Former party leaders say that could come down to the vetting process or the lack of one. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Democrat Ed FitzGerald's race for governor in 2014 started spinning out of control when the public found out he had gone for years without a driver's license.

And on Election Night this year, Republican House nominee Cassandra McDonald announced that she was actually a Democrat at heart.

Former Ohio Republican Party chair Kevin DeWine says there's not as much vetting of candidates behind the scenes as people might think.

DeWine: "While our job as party chairmen is to identify the best candidates most likely to win who are going to stand up for the principles and ideals of our party it doesn't mean you can convince somebody to not run who maybe doesn't fit that mold."

DeWine says most of the vetting comes from the local voters when these leaders get their start running for lower offices.

The Ohio Legislature has passed the second abortion bill this week. It bans abortion at 20 weeks of gestation. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports.

The ban, which is thought to prevent abortion at the point when a fetus could feel pain, isn't as unique as the heartbeat bill passed earlier this week. Former Ohio Supreme Court Justice and current Republican house member Bob Cupp says there are no questions about its constitutionality.

"In my judgement, it is not improbable that the U.S. Supreme Court will, in fact, uphold the 20 week limitations on abortions once it gets the case."

That 20-week ban has been pushed by Ohio Right to Life. And unlike the Heartbeat Bill, Gov. Kasich will almost certainly sign it into law. And if that happens, regardless of the future of the Heartbeat Bill ban, Ohio will have increased abortion restrictions at the end of this Lam Duck session.

The chair of the Ohio Republican Party is facing a challenge to his leadership at the state party's meeting next month, after a public feud with the Donald Trump campaign during the presidential race. Borges ended up backing Trump, but the lack of full throated support bothered some in the party. Gov. John Kasich made a surprise appearance on the floor of the Ohio House yesterday, to tell lawmakers to expect a tough budget because Ohio is on "the verge of a recession". But Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler says a report from his budget office doesn't back up that claim.

Ohio's unemployment rate is near the national average and economic growth has been up slightly – the opposite of recession conditions. But income tax revenue is coming in about three percent lower than projections. A report from the state budget office says lower revenues are due to rate cuts and a small business tax cut. But that office's director Tim Keen says tax cuts have helped Ohio.

"Our policies that make us a more competitive place – not withstanding the soft patch that we seem to be seeing and the risks that the Governor's concerned about – have improved our circumstances relative to what might have been."

State lawmakers are back home after a long week of passing dozens of bills out of the House and Senate. But as Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, the chambers are now waiting for the governor's next move and any possible vetoes.

Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

Rep. Andrew Brenner of Powell says his plan would centralize school funding by banning local tax levies and funding each student equally through state funds and lottery profits. That money would follow students, who could attend any Ohio school they want. Brenner says he assumes some districts would gain funding and some would lose, but says he doesn’t have a breakdown.

“However, with the state taking over the bonds for all the local school districts, they wouldn’t have to worry about that. It’s like giving them a clean slate.”

Charter schools would be funded the same way, though eschools would get less money. Brenner says the idea is a conversion starter, but could go to voters in 2018.

The House passed a bill that would stop the government from enforcing an increased use of green energy for three years. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Supporters say the bill still requires energy companies to increase the use of alternative resources it just doesn't mandate yearly increases.

But opponents say this plan keeps kicking the can down the road on policies that they say helped progress the state's green energy industry.

That includes Republican Representative Mike Duffey of Worthington. Duffey: "We can do energy efficiency and renewables without making the mandates for Ohioans, without giving control to utilities and without planning such large incentives that utilities have turned these programs into profit centers."

There's been a flurry of activity at the Statehouse, as the Senate and House move through many pieces of legislation before the year ends. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow takes a look at the dozens of bills that could be up for a vote on this final day of lame duck session.

The Legislature seems poised to move on another abortion bill. This one would ban abortion 20 weeks into a pregnancy. They're also likely to pass a stopgap plan towards fixing Ohio's unemployment compensation fund and a bill to roll back green energy standards.

Republican Senate President Keith Faber says, with all that's happening, there are still many bills that'll be left on the table.

Faber: "Our question that we've been asking routinely is is it something that is unique in nature, urgent, and if it is then we'll have a conversation about it but otherwise a lot of stuff can wait till next year."

Faber says lawmakers are ready to reconvene if, for example, they would want to overturn a possible veto from Gov. John Kasich.

The Ohio House and Senate finished their work as the 131st General Assembly with back-to-back-to-back marathon sessions -- passing a flurry of bills. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports some were mundane, while others made headlines.

Different bills and amendments were batted back and forth across the Statehouse Rotunda between the House and Senate chambers till well past midnight.

The most contentious measures passed were the 20-week abortion ban along with the bill to pause the state's green energy standards again.

The chambers agreed to pass an unemployment compensation stopgap, a symbolic first step towards overhauling the system.

The House decided to toss the legislation that designated gun owners as a protected class, but lawmakers passed a bill to allow concealed carry on college campuses and daycares.

And a bill creating an early intervention truancy process to is also heading to the governor's desk.

Segment Title: Husted tells state lawmakers his office doesn't need money to operate

Ohio Secretary of State Jon Husted is telling the Ohio Legislature his office won't need operational funds in the next two-year state budget. In an interview with Ohio Public Radio's Jo Ingles, Husted explains he wants a 100% cut in taxpayer funding.

Husted "We have cut the size of the staff in my office by a third and by using technology, we have been able to improve our services and cut costs. We've even reduced the fees we charge to start a new business from $125 down to $99 so we are the lowest cost state in the Midwest to form and operate a business. So what we have been doing is we have just been creating efficiencies. Like what's happening in the private sector, we are doing this in government. And you can do this. This is not something that is impossible. If you want to cut the size of government and you want to become more efficient, if you want to save money, you can do it. And the bottom line is that we are not going to need any tax dollars to operate our office for the next two years.

Ingles "You know this sounds like someone who might be wanting to run for Governor at some point in the future."

Husted "Well, I do want to lead by example in the sense that, let's face it, if I had asked for an inflationary increase, everyone would have said 'well, that's just fine, go ahead, it's just same old, same old.' Well we are not going to do the same old, same old. We are trying to act responsibly. We are trying to act differently. This comes as the Governor has recently said that the budget is going to be tight and that everybody is going to have to tighten their belts. Well, we are doing more than tightening our belts. We are eliminating the need altogether for the taxpayers to fund our office for the next two years.

Ingles "So if the legislature approves this, how much will it save taxpayers?"

Husted "Well, we have saved 14 and a half million dollars over that time period. We went from there being a $4 million surplus to a $19 million surplus and it will save several million dollars a year over the next two years in the operation of my office. And I'm confident that this is an example that (.....I hope other people will follow.) 2:00

The state's top watchdog says he wants some clarification on when state agencies can pay employees for denied vacation time. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler reports.

Inspector General Randy Meyer was investigating a complaint from Gov. John Kasich's office, that several state agencies were paying out too much accrued vacation time that had been denied them. Those payouts are limited by law to 80 hours in a fiscal year.

"What we found is there were 17 employees across eight agencies that received more than 80 hours, which added up to just over $47,000."

Meyer says he thinks some agencies aren't aware of the law, and it can cause problems in tight budgets. So he wants a statewide policy on payouts of denied vacation time developed and sent out to all state agencies, boards and commissions, so they're all on the same page.

With the long lame duck session still in the rearview mirror, groups are starting to look ahead at next year's big budget bills. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, several groups see this as an opportunity to increase money and access to public transportation.

A coalition of environmental, disability and other groups from around the state are calling on lawmakers and Gov. John Kasich to increase funding to public transportation. That means more sidewalks, bike paths and mass transit.

Katie Frederick with Ohio's American Council of the Blind says access for those with disabilities is also important to keep in mind.

Frederick: "It's important to make something accessible at the forefront and if you do it right from the beginning then you don't have extra costs in the end when you have people come back in the end and say that's not accessible."

The current transportation budget allots 1% to public transit, the coalition would like to see that pot grow to 10%.

Many are gathering this weekend to pay their respects to an American icon John Glenn in memorial services. One of Glenn's last major public appearances was in July at a ceremony renaming Port Columbus International Airport for him. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow looks back at Glenn's comments that day and the message he wanted to share.

The first American to orbit the Earth told the crowd that he was captivated by aviation at a young age.

When he was a boy visiting Columbus, Glenn said he'd ask his parents to stop by the airport on the way home to New Concord.

Glenn: "It was to stop over here at the what is still the old tower that is still sitting over in the southeast corner of the field and stand along the fence there and watch the airplanes. There weren't as many then as there are now and it was something though that I was fascinated with."

Glenn said that day he continued to fly until five years before, when he reached 90. He added that he hoped the airport could inspire the next generation of young minds to create and innovate in aviation.

Fighter pilot, astronaut and former US Senator John Glenn has passed away. Ohio Public Radio's Karen Kasler has this report.

Godspeed

Those words launched Ohio born John Glenn into orbit, and into legend. Glenn went from the navy to NASA to politics, winning a US Senate seat from Democrat Howard Metzenbaum in 1974. He ran for president ten years later, but a savings and loan scandal scuttled his campaign. He served four terms in the Senate, and then stayed active in politics and education. The first American to orbit the earth said he accepted honors like the law declaring Friendship Seven Day in Ohio to inspire others.

A Dayton area federal magistrate has delayed the next three scheduled executions until a challenge to the state's new three-drug lethal injection method is settled. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler has more.

Magistrate Judge Michael R. Merz is halting the upcoming executions of Ronald Phillips in January, Raymond Tibbetts in February and Gary Otte in March. He ordered the delay until a decision in a case filed by death row inmates who have asked the state for information about the drugs it intends to use for lethal injection. Abe Bonowitz with Ohioans to Stop Executions says this is just one decision of many. "We've got 28 executions scheduled going into 2020."

Ohio's last execution was in January 2014, when Dennis McGuire appeared to gasp and choke during his two-drug lethal injection. The prisons department says that execution was performed humanely, but the state is now planning on using a different three drug mixture that's never been tried before.

A recent report showed Ohio leading the nation in opioid overdose deaths. Now there are big changes on the way for how Ohio deals with powerful painkillers and drug addiction treatment. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Gov. John Kasich's newly approved opiate addiction initiative requires pharmacy technicians to register and get background checks. It requires doctors, veterinarians and dentists who possess controlled substances to get a license from the state pharmacy board.

Republican Representative Robert Sprague of Findlay says the bill also expands access to naloxone, the overdose reversing drug, and caps how long a prescription supply can last.

Sprague: "I think that this bill, at the end of the day, will be another arrow in the quiver as we begin to get a hold of the heroin in our state."

Ohio's tax revenue has fallen short of estimates in the past few months. And recently Gov. John Kasich has brought up the "R" word -- recession. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, Kasich is now using another term that's become taboo on capital square.

Kasich says Ohio and about 20 other states are seeing a drop in spending, leading to less state revenue. And he says that means this budget will be tough. Kasich even hinted for the first time that the state might turn to its savings account.

Gov. John Kasich has signed one abortion ban, but vetoed another one. Statehouse correspondent Jo Ingles reports.

But he left the child abuse bill that ban was attached to intact. If the heartbeat bill had become law, it would be the strictest abortion ban in the country, and many critics said it was unconstitutional. The Ohio Supreme Court has sharply split over whether the 112-year sentence for a teenager convicted of kidnapping and raping a Youngstown State student in 2001 is constitutional. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports the court ended up ruling against what is, basically, a life sentence.

The sentence for 15-year-old Brandon Moore means he wouldn't be eligible for parole until he's 92. In the majority opinion, Justice Paul Pfeifer pointed to a US Supreme Court ruling that a juvenile not convicted of murder who's demonstrated maturity and rehabilitation must be given a meaningful opportunity for release. Moore's attorney Rachel Bloomekatz argued before the court in February 2015 that a judge can't decide at the outset that a juvenile is never fit to re-enter society.

"And he can't do that by giving a sentence that's so long that it'll ensure the juvenile dies in prison." But in the minority opinion, Justice Sharon Kennedy said that US Supreme Court ruling was only for juveniles sentenced to life without parole, which wasn't the case here.

The state parole board has voted 10-2 to recommend to Gov. Kasich that Ronald Phillips of Akron be put to death on schedule next month for the rape and murder of his girlfriend's toddler daughter in 1993. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

The parole board's report notes the killing of a three-year-old is among the worst of the worst capital crimes, and that testimony they heard about the abusive home Ronald Phillips was raised in didn't indicate how much abuse he personally suffered. Among the flood of bills that passed this week in the lame duck legislature is a controversial proposal that would require state agencies to be abolished unless lawmakers approve their continued existence. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

Republican Lou Blessing III of Cincinnati admits it's a divisive proposal – lawmakers will review 25 state agencies every four years to make sure they're still doing the work they were created to do.

“That is the key here – we have to actually act in order for these departments to remain in existence.” But Democrat Kathleen Clyde of Kent says this dangerous bill would create most extreme and radical sunset system in the country.

“Brinkmanship is a bad way to govern. People and systems can't function well under constant threat and constant uncertainty.”

Democrats who made up most of the opposition to the bill are calling on Republican Gov. John Kasich to veto it, since it would directly affect departments and directors in his cabinet.

Segment Title: The Ohio Supreme Court says no exception for child sex victims in caps on jury awards

The Ohio Supreme Court says a state law capping damages in certain cases is constitutional. That means a 15-year-old Delaware County girl raped by her pastor in 2008 will get a quarter of a million dollars – not the $3.5 million the jury awarded her family. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

The girl's lawyer had argued the $250,000 cap is unconstitutional, especially when it comes to underage victims of sex crimes. But a majority of the court agreed those caps on non-injury cases passed by state lawmakers in 2005 are constitutional. In her majority opinion, Justice Judith French wrote evidence showed the girl played sports, had good grades and hasn't sought mental health treatment. So she wrote in this case the non-injury cap applies. In their pointed dissents, Justice Paul Pfeifer wrote that tort reform has ensured child rapists will not have to pay the full measure of damages, and Bill O'Neill wrote – quoting here – “Shame on the General Assembly”. The pastor, 54 year old Brian Williams, just finished serving an eight year sentence for sexual battery.

Two think tanks that are normally on opposite sides are very pleased with a bill passed in the lame duck legislature which would require a review of billions of tax breaks and loopholes. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports.

Greg Lawson with the conservative Buckeye Institute says he's thrilled lawmakers passed the bill forcing them to study $ 8 billion in tax expenditures, credits, and other breaks – though he says it's not enough.

“We even suggested there be an auto sunset for tax expenditures. And this bill didn't go quite as far as that, but it's definitely a big step in the right direction.”

Zach Schiller with the left leaning Policy Matters also wanted a requirement that tax breaks and loopholes disappear under certain circumstances, but he's happy too.

“Even with those things that could be improved, this is really a step forward for transparency and accountability for Ohio's tax system.”

But the two sides also agree that they have very different ideas where the tax savings should go.

Segment Title: Tea Party leader backs Timken

Ohio Republican Party chairman Matt Borges and Jane Timken, the Stark County Republican who wants to unseat him, are lining up their supporters as they go into the party's leadership vote next month. Statehouse correspondent Karen Kasler reports one conservative leader who opposed Borges before is firmly behind the challenger.

Portage County Tea Party leader Tom Zawistowski tried and failed to beat Borges for the party's chairman position in 2013, getting support from a small but vocal wing of the party. Zawistowski doesn't get a vote, but says he supports Jane Timken because he thinks the feud between Borges and Donald Trump's Ohio campaign manager Bob Paduchik that went public earlier this year will be a problem.

"Now with Paduchik getting a spot at the RNC, not having a good relationship with the RNC, that's just bad."

Gov. John Kasich – who helped Borges become the party's chair – has said backs Borges. Borges has told the committee that will vote for chair he has in his corner the leaders of the Ohio House and Senate as well as several members of Congress. Timken says she has Trump's support.

Segment Title: Trump Campaign Director Wants to Boot Borges

Insiders are saying that President-elect Donald Trump wants new leadership at the top of the Ohio Republican Party. As Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports, Trump's top ally in Ohio is leading the effort to unseat current GOP chair Matt Borges.

The rift between Borges and the Trump campaign was well-known. At times he wavered in his support of Republican presidential nominee Donald Trump. That includes when a leaked video caught Trump talking about his ability to sexually assault women if he wanted to.

Now Trump's Ohio campaign director Bob Paduchik is doing what he can to help Stark County GOP vice-chair Jane Timken unseat Borges

Paduchik: "It's important to have leadership that brings the committee together. That's able to work with the county chairs."

Borges has been state party chair for three years. Less than a month before the election, the Trump campaign broke ties with Borges citing what they believed to be a lack of support.

Segment Title: Unemployment Compensation Bill Pulled From Committee

There's been a battle to change what employers pay into - and what benefits workers get out of - the state's unemployment compensation fund. Now the bill to deal with that seems to be stalled at the Statehouse. Correspondent Andy Chow reports.

Republican leaders in the House and Senate have gone back and forth on the bill. A legislative review of the latest proposal found that it would increase employer taxes by just under 2%, but it would decrease worker benefits by more than 17%.

The bill was expected to get a vote out of committee but at the last minute it was pulled. Here's Republican Committee Chair Louis Blessing III.

Blessing: "House Bill 620 has been taken off the agenda today and will not appear for the rest of the week so for those of you who are opponents Merry Christmas and Happy New Year."

That comment seems to suggest the end for the bill which many leaders wanted to pass before the end of lame duck session. However, the Senate version is still scheduled for a committee hearing.

Segment Title: Unemployment Compensation Stopgap Plan

The House is calling for a stopgap for the state's unemployment compensation fund with the hopes of coming back to pass a larger reform bill next year. Statehouse correspondent Andy Chow reports.

The new plan would freeze increases to employee benefits for two years and slightly hike up taxes for employers.

Republican House Speaker Cliff Rosenberger calls this a stopgap and a show of good faith that all parties are willing to make some sacrifices in order to overhaul the system.

Rosenberger: "Both sides are gonna have to feel a little bit here if we're getting to a solvency plan and they both realize that and I think that's what their commitment is to show what they're willing to do."

This move scraps an earlier bill which, according to a nonpartisan legislative report, cut employee benefits by 17% and raised taxes on employers but just under 2%.

No official word yet on if the Senate is on board with the House' proposal. Andy Chow at the
