The Here's Help Show

Sundays 6:00am/1hour

10/4/2015

Guest's name and title: Ana Bueno/ Founder Paws to Care Coalition

Segment 1:

Paws to Care Coalition was founded ten years ago. It was started when Ana visited a pet store and saw that a dog had been returned. She adopted that animal and since then has received unconditional love from her pet and wanted to give other animals the same fate. She developed this foster program to save animals from torturous situations, free services developed into a non-profit. She received a building with a yard that was perfect for housing the animals until they found foster care and hopefully a permanent home. Paws to Care can house 25-30 dogs at a time and have a very high success rate.

Guest's name and title: Steven Ferrante/ Gambler's Anonymous

Segment 2:

Stephen Ferrante works to help people get help with their gambling addictions. He primarily works with senior citizens who have lost their way. He is able to find housing for them when they have lost their homes due to their problems with addiction. He also helps them find transportation to and from the doctors and hospitals because they have neglected their health and well-being. He also talked about the fact that there is a much higher percentage that people with gambling addictions will develop substance abuse issues. He said he also helps find treatment facilities. One of the latest ways to help people quit gambling is to offer in-home therapists. This seems to be very effective especially for people that can't leave their homes.

Guest's name and title: Nicole Krauss/Community Relations at Publix Supermarkets

Segments 1 and 2

Nicole Krauss, from Publix was on the show today. We taped both segments with her because she told us about a few projects Publix is currently launching. We spoke first and foremost about the 20 plus years of support Publix has given to Here's Help. They have supported us from the Wing Ding Days, to Bubbles and Bones, the Badia Spices/Publix Culinary School and the golf tournaments. The relationship between Footy and several executives at Publix has been very strong for many years. Nicole told us that Publix was founded after George Jenkins went to speak to the head of Piggly Wiggly as a young man and found their customer service skills to be deplorable. He then went home and purchased the lot next to Piggly Wiggly with the initiative that he could build a better supermarket. PW went out of business soon after and Publix continues to thrive.

Publix is very involved in giving back to the community. They are involved in Food for Sharing, which any customer can donate to when they go to checkout. They are involved in Tools for Schools, the Special Olympics and many more. They will be having over 600 BOGO's for the holiday season, which allows a customer to buy one item and get the other one for free. They also started a program to aid Habitat for Humanity and over 600 of their associates will help to build over 500 homes this year.
