The Ongoing Genocide of Nigerian Christians Amid the clear and escalating slaughtering of Christians in the nation, the faithful grow.

Islamic militants in Nigeria carried out targeted attacks on Christians on Christmas Eve. Up to 200 are confirmed dead and about 300. Islamic militants have carried out similar Christmas attacks for at least the last four years.

The population of Nigeria is almost evenly divided between Muslims and Christians

What has happened to Nigerian Christians over the past decade and more meets the established international standards for the label genocide.

We must continue to lobby our government on their behalf, asking our officials to put pressure on Nigeria to take more decisive action against Boko Haram and the Fulani herdsmen.

Motherhood Myth Busting - Why second and third wave feminism has caused millennial women to dread having children, and God's beautiful path to parenthood.

Today, the question of whether to have kids generates anxiety far more intense than your garden-variety ambivalence. For too many, it inspires dread.

At least part of the dynamic at work here is cultural. Technology and evolving social norms have created the impression that the choice to become parents is simply one among many lifestyle "choices" we make, such as whether to buy or rent, or whether or not to get a dog. And like those choices, we make the choice to have children or not based on convenience, enjoyment, and personal fulfillment.

The American Family Survey regularly finds that married moms are among the happiest people in the country, reporting vastly higher rates of satisfaction and much lower rates of loneliness.

Is AI Just Another Tool, or Something Else? We must ask how the technology fits into the Creation story lest it takes away from meaningful work and connection.

It's not uncommon to hear artificial intelligence described as a new "tool" that extends and expands our technological capabilities. Already there are thousands of ways people are utilizing artificial intelligence. All tools help accomplish a task more easily or efficiently. Some tools, however, have the potential to change the task at a fundamental level.

This is among the challenges presented by AI. If in the end it is not clear what AI is helping us to achieve more efficiently, this emerging technology will be easily abused. AI's potential impact on education is a prime example.

In a recent article at The Hill, English professor Mark Massaro described a “wave” of chatbot cheating now making it nearly impossible to grade assignments or to know whether students even complete them.

Consider also the recent flood of fake news produced by AI. In an article in The Washington Post, Pranshu Verma reported that “since May, websites hosting AI-created false articles have increased by more than 1,000 percent.” According to one AI researcher, “Some of these sites are generating hundreds if not thousands of articles a day. ... This is why we call it the next great misinformation super spreader.”

Of course, there's no sense in trying to put the AI genie back in a bottle. For better or worse, the technology is here to stay. We must develop an ability to evaluate its legitimate uses from its illegitimate uses. In other words, we must know what AI is for, before experimenting with what it can do.

Why Does The Washington Post Hate Home Schooling? What scare stories reveal and conceal.

A Washington Post analysis found late last year, home schooling is America's fastest growing form of education. Around 2.7 million students are home-schooled in America today, up by about a million since before the pandemic. For Washington Post reporters, this is scary.

A school board member from Florida echoed their concern: “Many of these parents don't have any understanding of education. The price will be very big to us, and to society. But that won't show up for a few years.”

These articles reveal not only the biases of Washington Post reporters and their willingness to use scare stories in place of data, but they also expose crucial questions they are unwilling to ask, as well as assumptions about the role of parents and the state when it comes to education.

To simultaneously note how home schooling has exploded in popularity but, in almost every article, refuse to ask why the popularity, is at best, a stunning lack of curiosity.

Ultimately, The Washington Post's breathless attacks on home schooling reveal an unquestioned assumption that children belong primarily to the state and not to parents. The rise in home schooling, Christian schooling, parent-run charter schools, and other innovations show that more and more families are rejecting that assumption.

The 'Gender Revolution,' - The contagion that is putting women in a worse place year after year.

As child psychiatrist Miriam Grossman, author of Lost in Trans Nation, explains, the number of teen girls “with recent-onset discomfort with their sex is up 4,000 percent [emphasis added].” Especially vulnerable are girls with comorbidities, like autism, an association that even one of the National Geographic articles acknowledged. People who are autistic are three to six times more likely to not identify with their birth sex. Child psychiatrist Dr. Steven Grcevich, the founder and president of a ministry for families with hidden disabilities, called this “the scandal that nobody is talking about ... the vulnerability of kids with pre-existing medical conditions and autism and other developmental disabilities to this gender ideology.”

According to Dr. Grossman, this social contagion has been especially driven by social media, which has become a virtual “assembly line” for challenging girls to question their sense of self. Medical professionals jumped in, resulting in a trail of mutilated bodies, sterilization, bone-density loss, and other irreversible damage done.

And yet, there are clear signs that this revolution is slowing. Finland, Sweden, the United Kingdom, and Norway have all drawn back from providing so-called “gender-affirming care” to young people because the science is not settled. In states such as Missouri and Ohio, lawmakers are taking definitive steps to protect children.

The Life and Legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. - King's urging that 'unjust laws degrade human beings' have relevance today on all social issues misaligned from our Creator.

In 1955, after only a year of pastoring a church in Montgomery, Alabama, Dr. King was selected to lead an organization that boycotted public transportation. This was in response to the arrest of Rosa Parks, who refused to give up her seat for a white passenger on a bus. With a remarkable speaking ability and his advocacy of peaceful protest, Dr. King became a primary voice of the Civil Rights Movement.

During his Birmingham civil rights campaign, Dr. King required every participant to sign a pledge committing to do ten things. The first was to “meditate daily on the teachings and life of Jesus.” Others included the expectation that all participants would “walk and talk in the manner of love, for God is love” and “pray daily to be used by God in order that all men might be free.”

Writing from a jail cell, King declared that the code of justice is not man's law: It is God's law. How does one determine whether the law is just or unjust? A just law, King wrote, “squares with the moral law or the law of God. An unjust law ... is out of harmony with the moral law.”

Why Abortion is a (the?) Priority Issue for the Political Left - Typical progressive issues have liabilities these days, but abortion, with its connection to 'limitless autonomy,' is proving to be a winning campaign focus for Biden and his party.

According to Politico, President Biden's pro-choice agenda is “the strongest abortion rights platform of any general election candidate.

Judging by the string of pro-life legislative defeats, most recently in the otherwise red Ohio and Virginia, many Americans agree with the president. One Politico analysis concluded, “When abortion rights are on the ballot, they win with voters across the political spectrum—though they don't always boost Democratic candidates on ballots advocating for them.” In an imminent presidential election that promises to be especially contentious, the received wisdom among progressive candidates is this: Vow to preserve, at all costs, the so-called “right to choose,” and it’s likely that voters will choose me.

Still, abortion is heavily restricted or banned in 24 states, mostly as a direct result of the Supreme Court overturning Roe v. Wade, and there are a few hopeful signs that the public hasn’t fully bought the logic of the extreme activists.

Ultimately, the pro-life argument remains unchanged. The preborn are innocent human beings, made in God’s image, and no one should be able to take their lives without cause. In fact, the most basic purpose of government is to protect its citizens’ right to life, and if the government fails to do this, it is failing in the most basic way.

Would the Discovery of Alien Life Disprove Christianity? Why the Christian view does not need to exclude or assume life on other planets.

Among the unexpected stories of 2023 was a renewed interest in all things extraterrestrial. The public interest in whether there’s anything out there is as high as ever. Many people assume that if any evidence were to be discovered for extraterrestrial life, it would be devastating to the Christian worldview. However, according to my colleague, Shane Morris “even if intelligent life were found elsewhere in the universe, it wouldn’t necessarily present a problem for Christianity.” Shane states that “the Bible teaches that there are other beings in the universe, but they’re not what materialists expect, and they do not always come in peace.”

The Growing Political Divide of Men and Women. The widening wedge between the way the sexes vote can be attributed to the targeted dissolution of marriage and family.

Citing polling data from Gallup, Brad Wilcox of the Institute for Family Studies recently pointed out that the percentage of young men ages 18 to 29 who identify as Republican has risen by double digits in the last decade.

Gen Z is different. Women are more liberal than the men and this includes personal morality as well.

A Detransitioner's Story - A warning to a society too eager to pull the trigger on transitioning.

Sascha Bailey became convinced that he was a woman. All would be better if he would transition to a woman. Today, Bailey regrets this flirtation with disaster. Though he still thinks some people may be born in the wrong body, he is now calling out the transgender industry for its false promises and the wider society for pressuring people into confusion.

“I feel there's a huge problem with over-diagnosis of gender dysphoria. ... I think there are a lot of people who, like me, aren't actually trans, they're just incredibly unhappy and transitioning is a way of making themselves into a new person, which they believe will fix everything.”

Sascha Bailey's final thoughts in the article are prophetic:

I think we're going to look back on this time and be shocked at how quickly we ran away with all this stuff. We need to allow people space and time to talk and explore their feelings before we rush them down the medical route.

Doctors Admit Puberty Blockers Aren't "Reversible" - More proof that 'gender-affirming care' does not follow the science but instead follows ideology, even to its undoing.

A common claim by those who advocate for so-called “gender-affirming care” is that the effects of the treatments, especially puberty blockers, are reversible.

According to WPATH-certified pediatric endocrinologist Dr. Daniel Metzger, puberty-blocking drugs aren't as reversible or noninvasive as advocates claim. In fact, they interrupt teens' physical development in ways that cannot be reversed. Despite the growing evidence about puberty blockers' irreversible effects, the gaps in medical research, and the dangers for children, the lie that puberty blockers are “fully reversible” will continue.

Thankfully, there are signs that the tide is turning.

Is Abortion Pill Reversal Safe and Effective? Despite progressive states trying to ban APR, the treatment is proving to be safe for moms and lifesaving for babies.

Chemical abortion involves two pills, Mifepristone and Misoprostol.

The chemical abortion process can be reversed before Misoprostol is taken, thanks to a commonly understood chemical process called Reversible Competitive Inhibition.

Despite all this, states like Colorado are trying to ban APR.

Gender Ideology Threatens the Most Vulnerable Kids - Getting the stats right so parents can get the right kind of help.

Over the past decade, the idea that a person can be born in the wrong body has caused significant harm to many, most of all young people and their families. Now we are learning just how much this idea, whether caught online, in school, or at a counselor's office, has preyed on the most vulnerable populations.

Sadly, the disproportionate impact of the gender revolution on the communities of disability is not unique to the United States

Montana Removes Teen Daughter from Parents - Parents are forced to fight for their daughter in the public sphere while an anti-sex-change law for minors waits in limbo.

Montana Child and Family Services (CFS) has removed a 14-year-old daughter, who goes by the pseudonym "Jennifer," from the custody of her father and stepmother. Todd and Krista Kolstad refused to affirm Jennifer's self-professed transgender identity.

Parents need the support and help, not the disdain and opposition, of communities, educators, politicians, doctors, and case workers. Together, they should be standing up against harmful ideas. In fact, in 2023, Montana passed the "Youth Health Protection Act," whose stated purpose is "to enhance the protection of minors and their families ... from any form of pressure to receive harmful, experimental puberty blockers and cross-sex hormones and to undergo irreversible, life-altering surgical procedures prior to attaining the age of majority." However, a judge issued an injunction against it, preventing the law from becoming active.

Big Tech, Families, and the Role of Government - When darkness seeps into self-government, state regulation can be a good thing.

In a rare moment of bipartisanship, senators on both sides of the aisle have agreed that social media is not safe for teens, and that it's time for the government to do something about it. Public concern about social media's ill effects, especially on the mental health of teenagers, has been growing for years.

Of course, too many parents have failed to govern themselves and their homes when it comes to social media and the internet.

Given the potential harm for all involved, state regulation is more than justified. At the same time, families simply cannot wait for the government or tech companies to act.

The Promises and Perils of Artificial Intelligence - Understanding the implications of being both created in the image of God and being heirs of Adam's sin.

According to the authors of The Techno-Optimist Manifesto, "We believe Artificial Intelligence is our alchemy, our Philosopher's Stone – we are literally making sand think. ... We believe any deceleration of AI will cost lives.

Though many predictions about AI are still more science-fiction than fact, it is advancing faster than many expected. Today, it is nearly impossible to identify things produced by programs such as ChatGPT.

And yet, the promises of AI are amazing. An algorithm can pick out our music, movies, and groceries with incredible accuracy, even if it is a bit creepy. The labor- and time-saving potential of AI will save humanity hours of mindless tasks. And, we've not even begun to imagine the potential for technical and medical advances.

However, potentials are not actuals, and history is full of the unintended applications and consequences of human technologies. The only way forward in these possible futures is with a clear-eyed perspective on human exceptionalism and human fallenness.

Leaked Files Reveal What Doctors Knew about “Gender-Affirming Medicine” for Kids - It turns out the science isn't settled and suffering families have been lied to all along.

Earlier this week, internal files leaked from the World Professional Association of Transgender Health (WPATH), the leading medical association pushing for the chemical and surgical “gender transition” of minors, were made public by journalist and thought leader Michael Shellenberger. For years, clinical, political, and pop culture activists have cited WPATH to claim that the science is “settled” on “gender-affirming care,” and that social, chemical, and surgical “transition” interventions are safe, reversible, and life-saving. WPATH leaders even claimed that young children and minors with autism can meaningfully consent to such “care.”

The leaked “WPATH Files,” however, reveal a different, more damning story. Far from being settled science, “transitioning” can lead to painful complications, regret, and even life-threatening conditions such as cancer, especially for vulnerable populations. Even more, the leaked files revealed that WPATH personnel knew this and yet continued to actively mislead patients and the public.

Ultimately, these leaked documents confirm that so-called “gender-affirming care” is a pseudoscience built on an unproven ideology that endangers the most vulnerable, especially children. Even worse, these documents reveal that WPATH and its gender activist allies are neither ignorant nor simply ideological. They have intentionally deceived the public and destroyed the bodies of young people.

Transgender to Transformed: the Story of Laura Perry Smalts - Detransitioner tells why the Source of all reality is Jesus Christ.

The evidence that “gender-affirming care” harms young people has been widely available for years. However, it has been widely suppressed by policymakers, medical professionals, and media outlets. That is now changing, largely because the stories of those harmed by these dangerous ideas are being told.

Know Your Tax Preparer

UNDERSTANDING THE PROFESSIONAL LANDSCAPE:

Tax preparers are typically CPAs (Certified Public Accountants), Enrolled Agents, or specialized attorneys. CPAs have more stringent requirements than Enrolled Agents. There's a shortage of CPAs and Enrolled Agents, leading to firms hiring high school interns at competitive rates to encourage CPA careers. Due to professional shortages, there's a risk of encountering unscrupulous tax preparers, potentially leading to scams like refund fraud and identity theft.

When To Take Social Security With Eddie Holland

What should folks consider when making this decision?

People should consider the following when deciding when to take Social Security benefits:

Understanding that if they take benefits before full retirement age, they will be subject to a reduction; Delaying past full retirement age means receiving an annual increase of 8% called a delayed retirement credit; Cash flow needs if retiring and replacing income; Paying down debt; Increasing charitable giving; Health and longevity in the family (impacting how long benefits may need to last); Legacy goals and inheritance, as Social Security benefits can't typically be passed on while portfolio assets can be; and Income taxes, as Social Security could be subject to tax depending on other income.

Innocent Deception

Why are so many people out to influence the minds of our children? Is it for power or greed?

Have our academic institutions and public school systems become more like indoctrination camps than just a place to get an education? Does it seem our kids are being propagandized with ideas that attack their faith and the traditional family; make them question their own gender, meaning, and purpose, or with many other trends and concepts that undergird junior's emotional, psychological, and spiritual health.

If public school is your only option, you can do the research and help expose the truth to your kids. The internet is full of helpful resources to counter these dangerous ideas. A great resource I'd like to recommend is the documentary film called "In His Image," which exposes the fallacies of the LGBT+ movement. So check out the website and the movie with your child to learn the rest of the story.

Bullying has been around since the beginning of time, and has been announced foremost in the press in recent years, especially since the invention of social media. Social media has helped to create a new form of bullying.

Many adults, and even our kids, now experience this other form of bullying. One that is socially acceptable. It is the bullying of political correctness from our local public schools, universities, and even organizations like the American Humanist Association, the American Civil Liberties Union, along with others.

We need to inform our kids to be aware of this kind of bullying to help them see another side and get the big picture. Doing so could help give them insight to stay safe in a world that wants to control their every thought.

Reading, writing, arithmetic and LGBT. Your kids are likely to be indoctrinated with pro-LGBT propaganda if they are in a public school.

There is a danger with what young kids are exposed to before their brains are fully developed. We all know that. Some say it is easy to indoctrinate them when they are little to believe almost anything from racism to religion. Their worldview can be formed at a very early age.

What should we, or will we allow our kids to be indoctrinated with? It's not the right of the public school system to undermine the moral standards that God fearing Christian parents try to instill in their children. From Failure to Success

Is it okay to fail? Of course it is, and we should teach this to our kids.

Every failure, when handled correctly, can be a step toward success. If at first you don't succeed... We need to let our kids know it is okay to fail and bring it to their attention when they do. It's a simple matter of learning from their failures, because until they truly know where they truly are, they can't truly get to where they truly want to be.

Having it All

Most kids today have the fear of missing out, or FOMO (FOMO is the acronym for Fear of Missing Out) because of what their peers are doing.

Even with all this socialization, sadly, this is the most unhappy, ungrateful, and unsatisfied generation in history. We can help them choose and set limits on the number of activities they get involved in or pursue this year. Let them know that it is okay, and impossible to know and do everything and be everywhere with everyone all the time.

LICENSE TO PARENT WEEKEND (28:30)

License to Parent (28:30) airs Saturdays at 11:32 am and Sunday, 3:02 pm.

Due to a serious family medical diagnosis, radio production was discontinued 2/26/24 with last program airing 3/3/24.

Saturday, January 6 and Sunday, January 7, 2024

Exploring Residential Care

It may seem like you've explored every resource for your troubled teen, but there may still be options. Consider residential care.

Episode Highlights:

Awareness about the existence of long-term treatment programs for parents. The emotional struggles parents face when seeking external support. Guidance on choosing residential care through specific language or phrases. The importance of avoiding blame in such situations and focusing on solutions instead.

Gen Z and the Gallup Poll- Part 1

A recent Gallup poll reported that 20% of the Gen Z population now identify as LGBTQ+. That's one in every five with an alarming number of those being young women pursuing bisexual relationships. As Christian parents, whether children ever choose this path or not, we need to help them understand the fuller scope of this issue.

Episode Highlights:

- Why does the LGBTQ+ society seem to be increasing?
- Can what we do in the privacy of our bedroom hurt others?
- Do the members of Gen Z feel peer pressure to join the LGBTQ+ community?

Jordan Whitmer for Zoomers

In the past, Jesus has been presented to Generation Z in so many different, and even weird ways. This has made them hungry for the truth of the Gospel message, and they want authenticity. They are looking to make their faith their own, and are open to joining the conversation to learn what is real.

The Gen Z generation, those aged between 11 and 26, are reportedly leaving the church at a higher rate than previous generations. The reasons for this are complex, but some suggest it may be due to a lack of discipleship and the influence of secular agendas.

Episode Highlights:

What is causing Gen Z's to leave the church?
Learn Jordan's heart for evangelism to young people.
What is the common makeup of Gen Z?
Are Gen Z's looking for truth more than other generations?
Is Gen Z giving up on their millennial aged parents?

Brad Griffin on Fuller Youth Groups

Our guest today is going to help us sort out questions many youth leaders and pastors are asking. Am I really making a difference? Are we doing the things in youth group that really matter? What does it take to change kids' lives to impact their character in a way that's going to stick with them far beyond any sort of program time we spend together.

Episode Highlights:

Can parents be a stumbling block for youth leaders trying to disciple youth group participants?

Think about your own child's youth group.

Can youth groups be harmful to your child's faith?

What does the ideal youth group look like?

Does effective discipleship always include entertainment?

Emotional Safety with Dr. Joshua Straub

One of the most fundamental roles we play as effective parents is that of protector. Of course, protecting our kids physically is important, but protecting their emotional and spiritual health is even more important. Dr. Joshua Straub emphasizes that parents should prioritize their own emotional health to better support their children.

Episode Highlights:

With risks all around us, how do we keep our kids safe?

God's standards never fall short.

Is there safety without boundaries or exploration?

What is effective parenting without grace?

How do messed up parents turn out some really good kids?

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

Parenting Today's Teens air Saturdays at 12:05 pm.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6

WHEN YOUR TEEN TURNS TO POT TO DEAL WITH LIFE

Teens need a way to escape from the craziness of their day-to-day lives. If parents don't provide an outlet, teens will find something on their own—and that something just might be marijuana. Mark Gregston talks to parents about what to do when they suspect their teen is using pot to cope and what they can do about it.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13

GRANDPARENTS HAVE AN ADVANTAGE

Getting older has its downsides, but grandparents have an incredible advantage. They can provide something very important—something teens need very much—and that is perspective. Mark Gregston offers some encouragement and a reminder that while grandparents may see things differently, they have a lot to offer their grandkids.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, JANUARY 20

TEENS WITH SUICIDAL THOUGHTS

When teens feel hopeless and think they have nowhere left to turn, they might start to believe suicide is the only option to end their pain. Mark Gregston talks about warning signs and explains how you can walk alongside your teen in the midst of their pain.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, JANUARY 27

BOUNDARIES FOR ANGER

Are you tiptoeing around landmines and triggers at home with your teen? Do you have a teen who is lashing out in anger? If so, then it's time to set up boundaries for your teen. Mark Gregston gives practical tips for parents on how to train teens to manage their anger well.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3

ACTING ON WHAT YOU BELIEVE

Most parents want to pass on their beliefs to the next generation. But how should parents respond when teens overstep the family's values? Or when teens want Mom and Dad to support them, even while they're acting against what the family believes? Mark Gregston talks to parents about how to set rules and requirements that reinforce what they believe.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 10

TEEN DEPRESSION AND ITS CONSEQUENCES

The teen years can feel like an emotional roller coaster. Sometimes your teens are friendly and outgoing, and other times they're quiet and withdrawn. How can parents know if their teen is seriously depressed or just feeling sad? Mark Gregston outlines what depression looks like in teens and how to know when it's time to get help.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 17

STOP A TEEN'S FOOLISHNESS AND PROMOTE WISDOM

Teens don't come equipped with life experience. If your teen is acting foolishly, it may be time to pour some hard-won wisdom into their lives. But how can parents do that?

Mark Gregston tells parents how to stop their teen's inappropriate behavior and help them learn from their mistakes to get to a better place.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 24

RESPONDING TO A TEEN'S SUBSTANCE ABUSE

The shock of discovering that your teen is using drugs or alcohol can leave parents feeling helpless and hopeless. But there are steps that parents can and should take to help their teens address and overcome addiction and rebuild relationships. Mark Gregston gives practical guidance to parents dealing with teen substance abuse.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, MARCH 2

PARENTS AS LISTENERS

What's preventing you from having a meaningful conversation with your teen? Teens may choose inconvenient times, express strange or controversial opinions, or be reluctant to share what they're really thinking, making it hard for parents to listen well. Mark Gregston gives parents practical ways to listen and build up their relationship with their teen.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, MARCH 9

4 THINGS TO KNOW AS YOUR TEEN STARTS DATING

Is your teen ready to date? Have they been dating awhile? No matter what stage you're at with your teen, most parents need help navigating the teenage dating scene. Mark Gregston answers questions about dating during the teen years and how parents can communicate their expectations

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, MARCH 16

MY KID DOESN'T SMILE ANYMORE

It seems like overnight your happy-go-lucky child is transformed into a moody, brooding teenager. So is it "normal" for teens to be angry all the time and shut themselves up in their rooms all by themselves? Mark Gregston helps parents look past the locked door to uncover the real reason for their strange behavior and help teens find their smiles again.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, MARCH 23

3 TYPES OF PARENTING THAT'LL PUSH TEENS AWAY

Is your teen avoiding home? Does he try to wriggle out of family time? If your teen is missing in action, you might be the reason he's staying away. Mark Gregston identifies three common mistakes in parenting that push teens away. And you may be doing one or all of them without even knowing it.

PARENTING TODAY'S TEENS WEEKEND (25:00)

SATURDAY, MARCH 30

3 TYPES OF PARENTING THAT'LL PUSH TEENS AWAY

Parents these days are on the go all day. But if you're not making time to talk to your teen one-on-one, you may cause strain or even lose your relationship with your teen as he becomes an adult. Mark Gregston encourages parents to schedule regular "dates" with their teens in order to build a great relationship. And he'll show you how!
