ASTRONAUT JOSE HERNANDEZ

Former NASA astronaut Jose Hernandez is a hero to many. Raised by migrant farmworker parents, the Mexican-American engineer went on to become one of only a handful of Latinos to travel to outer space. He's now an in-demand motivational speaker and runs an engineering consulting firm in Northern California, Tierra Luna Engineering. Jose is also a spokesperson for First 5 California, promoting early childhood development. Vista LA's Patricia Lopez caught up with Hernandez at Loyola Marymount University, where he shared his story with his daughter's classmates.

SUPER MAMA'S PODCAST

Sisters Bricia and Paulina Lopez are the creators of Super Mamás Podcast and Co-Owners of the popular Guelaguetza restaurant. As fairly new moms, they saw a need for a judgement-free space for mothers, specifically Latina moms, to express their cultural experiences, share tips and discuss the ups-and-downs of motherhood. In addition to the podcast, Bricia and Paulina also run their longtime family restaurant, Guelaguetza, a temple of authentic Oaxacan food and culture. Last year, Guelaguetza won the coveted James Beard Classics Award becoming the first traditional Mexican restaurant to win the honor!

LOTTO WINNERS TO PHILANTHROPISTS

Jacki and Gilbert Cisneros went from lotto winners to hometown heroes. They're using their winnings to advocate for education and boost college degree attainment by students in the City of Pico Rivera and beyond. They're big supporters of the Hispanic Scholarship Fund and they founded Generation First Degree Pico Rivera. Vista LA's Alysha Del Valle met up with the couple at the restaurant where they purchased the winning lottery ticket that changed their lives forever.

MAKE IN L.A.

Noramay Cadena overcame major personal obstacles to become a leader in technology. She now uses her experience in technology and engineering to empower others to create and achieve their dreams. She co-founded Make in LA, a four-month accelerator program that assists technology innovators to develop their products and get them ready for commercial success. The San Fernando native also co-founded the Latinas in STEM Foundation, which encourages young women to pursue careers in Science, Technology, Engineering and Math.

GREAT WOLF LODGE

Swim, splash and slide! Great Wolf Lodge Southern California is the perfect family destination to make unforgettable memories. Located in Garden Grove, Great Wolf's massive 105,000 square foot waterpark has designated areas for kids of all ages including kiddie slides, ponds, a lazy river and a 6-story raft ride. It's the only indoor water park in California, and one of the largest in the country!
