Topic: California mountain fire burns to the suburbs of Los Angeles

Southern California has been hit by heat waves in recent days. The temperature in Los Angeles last Friday was as high as 47.5 ° which caused the recent wildfire to spread to the suburb of Santa Barbara. The local government immediately issued a mandatory evacuation order requiring nearly 2,500 people to evacuate their homes. The County Fire Department Chief Peterson thanked the residents for their cooperation and evacuation. "If there is no evacuation operation last night, there will be people who will be killed." California Governor Brown issued a state of emergency order in the county, dispatched hundreds of firefighters to fight the fire, and two firefighters were injured in the operation. Audiences called in to share their concerns, discussed protocol, etc.
