

Eureka Election 1

AB/MEH/KUAF 8/31 (Mon AM)

An initiative to abolish the Eureka Springs Historic District Commission has gained enough signatures to appear on the November ballot. The commission was created 40 years ago to regulate renovations, repairs and construction in the northwest Arkansas town. But resident Paul Minze (min-zee) argues the commission wields too much power. After initially falling short of the needed number of signatures, he was given more time and recently learned his proposal make it to the ballot.

News16 0:17 “...our little city.”

Opponents of the initiative say doing away with the commission puts the charm of Eureka Springs is at grave risk.

Eureka Election 2

AB/MEH/ KUAF 8/31 (Mon AM)

Voters in Eureka Springs will asked to decide in November whether to abolish the city’s Historic District Commission. It was created 40 years ago to regulate renovations, repairs, demolition and new construction. Paul Minze (min-zee), a resident of the northwest Arkansas city, began the campaign after experiencing frustration during his experiences the commission. He says others agree the commission wields too much power.

News17 0:13 “...how they operate”

But opponents of the initiative argue doing away with the commission puts the charm of Eureka Springs at risk.

Eureka Election FE

KUAF/MEH

8/31 (Mon AM – 7:45)

In Eureka Springs, a proposal to abolish the north Arkansas town's Historic District Commission will be on the November ballot. Reporter Jacqueline Froelich with KUAF has more on the controversial initiative:

News15 4:03 "...I'm Jacqueline Froelich."