

North Texas Poison Center Warns Against Dangers Of Bleach After Reports Of Ingestion, Overexposure

KERA | By Sam Baker

Shutterstock

The North Texas Poison Control center is seeing an increase in bleach ingestion or overexposure reports among people 30 or older. Usually the bulk of these reports involve children 5 years old or younger.

The North Texas Poison Center's received regional reports of at least 46 cases of ingestion or overexposure to bleach since Aug. 1. A few involved attempts to avoid or stop COVID-19.

The numbers were similar to the same time period a year ago. However, Cristina Holloway, Public Health Education Manager for the center, said there were shifts in the ages involved.