Steve: This is FM 90.1 KZFR Chico, listener-supported community radio for the Sacramento Valley, the foothills, and beyond.

And you are listening to Ecotopia, a weekly program exploring ecosystems—environmental, social, and technological. I'm Stephen Tchudi.

Susan: And I'm Susan Tchudi. This week we're talking about a topic that's getting increasing attention, thanks, in part, to the efforts of our guests tonight.

Steve: Lyme disease affects thousands of people a year. Our guests tonight know firsthand what that is like. With us in the studio tonight are Lisa Sun: President of the Lyme Center; Shelly Mariposa: Vice President of The Lyme Center; Nick Farrar : Lyme Center Board Member.

Susan: Also with us tonight is Mitch Hoggard : pharmacist, researcher, lecturer and board member of national and international Lyme Disease organizations.

Steve: And we'll learn about a fundraiser coming up this weekend that will support the efforts to learn more about Lyme disease and get that information out to the world.

Susan: Underwriters

Our guests in the studio tonight are Lisa Sun: President of the Lyme Center; Shelly Mariposa: Vice President of The Lyme Center; Nick Farrar : Lyme Center Board Member; Mitch Hoggard : pharmacist, researcher, lecturer and board member of national and international Lyme Disease organizations.

Tonight we're talking about Lyme disease, how it's contracted, what its symptoms are, how it's diagnosed, how it's treated, and what the progress has been in research in diagnosis and treatment. But first we want to give you a sense of how severe and scary this disease can be. Let's start with you, Lisa Sun.

1. Lisa, please take us back four (or five or more?) when you started having unaccountable physical problems.

(so, Lisa, tell that story. What was wrong? How you felt. What you did. Treatments you tried before diagnosis. How you got the diagnosis. What the treatments were then. How it's gone. Your current struggle.)

2. Shelly, if you're there: In what ways your struggle has been the same, in what ways has it been different?

3. How do people get lyme disease? Are there populations or places where people are more likely to get lyme disease? Can we prevent lyme disease?

4. How prevalent is lyme disease? Are there places or parts of the world that have greater rates of infection?

5. What are the symptoms? What is the range of sickness that is found with lyme disease sufferers? When do they show up? How do they show up?

*Blood

6. How do doctors diagnose it? Why is it hard to diagnose? What are the misdiagnoses? What is it mistaken for?

8. What is the progress of current research into lyme disease? How has attention to lyme disease changed over the past few years? What needs to happen with lyme disease research?
9. Are there local support systems that have been developed for people with lyme disease? What resources do you have for dealing with your illness?
10. Tell us about local efforts to raise awareness of lyme disease. How has this been developing?
11. Tell us about your event coming up this Saturday, May 16 at the 1078 Gallery. What is the purpose of the event? What will be happening there? Who do you want to come to the event?
12. What do you want listeners to know about lyme disease that you haven't already had a chance to talk about.

Steve: And I'm Stephen Tchudi. Tonight our topic is Water. In the first half of the show we'll be talking with Walker Foley, Southern California Organizer of Food & Water Watch. He'll give us the Food and Water Watch take on what's happening with Jerry Brown's new 25% reduction of water use—and who will experience that?

Susan: We'll also be talking with Barbara Vlamis and Jim Brobeck about Water. Last night the California Water Commission held a public meeting in Chico to "provide information on the Water Storage Investment Program," being proposed in response to Proposition 1, passed by Chico voters last November. What's planned and what should we be doing?

You are listening to Ecotopia on KZFR 90.1 Chico.

With us by phone from Southern California is Walker Foley, Southern California Organizer of Food & Water Watch

1. Please tell us about Food and Water Watch. It's a national organization, but California seems to have a strong group. What are some of the major campaigns you're engaged in here in California?
2. A week or two ago, Governor Jerry Brown ordered mandatory water restrictions statewide for California. What are those restrictions?
3. Who will be affected most by the water restrictions? Who will be affected least?
