

Well. It won't be a white Christmas this year in the Four States' region, but it will be a wet one – at least on Christmas Eve, that is. Chances of rain are 100 percent this coming Sunday – which may slow travel, and if you have any last minute Christmas shopping to do that day, take a rain jacket or umbrella.

Davyon Hill is a lead forecaster with the National Weather Service in Shreveport he spoke with KTXK's Sabrina McCormick for our Christmas weekend weather update.

WEATHER 12 22 23 (4:15)

You can stay up to date on the weather forecast by logging on to the National Weather Service Shreveport Facebook page or visiting their website at weather dot gov forward slash S H V