Environmental Issues with Mercury and Toxic Air Pollution	Florida Exclusivo	On Wednesday, March 25, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear arguments in a critical case involving mercury and other toxic air pollution from coal-fired power plants. In this Supreme Court case, industry claims that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) cannot decide whether to protect the public and the environment from toxic air pollution without first considering the effect on the industry's bottom line. Last year, the D.C. Circuit Court rejected this argument. Industry, in a last attempt to overturn protections, appealed, and the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear this case.	Lisa Garcia Vice President of Litigation for Healthy Communities	3/28/2015	1 hr.
