American Legacy Television, hosted by Tim Reid will take you on a journey where you will meet some of the most fascinating people in American history. From the pages of the critically acclaimed magazine American Legacy, this historical series explores a unique view of people and events that up to now, mainstream history has forgotten.

American Legacy – a series of annual television specials that will raise the bar of traditional programming for Americans of color. Discover fascinating and provocative tales, accomplishments, tragedies and the greatness behind some of the most unique African-Americans that shaped our country. Meet African-Americans who changed the outcome of world wars, settled the west, fueled scientific discoveries, and helped map the globe playing an essential role in shaping the destiny of mankind. American Legacy is entertainment for anyone who suspects that many of life's tales and mysteries have yet to be fully explored.

WINDOW: SATURDAY, JANUARY 15, 2005 THROUGH SUNDAY MARCH 6, 2005

The First Independent Black Political Party in the Americas SEGMENT ONE

After Cuba gained its independence following the Spanish-American War, the first Independent Black political party was formed. Shortly after in 1912, an outbreak of political violence occurred over a three month period in which over 6,000 Afro-Cubans were massacred. Witness Cuba's Untold Story of Race and Rage.

Oscar Micheaux

SEGMENT TWO

The most prolific independent - filmmaker in American cinema, Oscar Micheaux wrote, produced and directed forty-four feature-length films between 1919 and 1948. The fifth child in a family of thirteen, Micheaux worked as a shoeshine boy, farm laborer and Pullman porter. In his early twenties, he was self-confident to the point that he invested his savings in farmland in an all-white community in faraway South Dakota. Within nine years, he had expanded his holdings to 500 acres while writing, publishing and distributing his first semi-autobiographical novel, The Conquest (1913). He popularized it by selling it door to door to the farmers of South Dakota. In 1918, Micheaux founded his own production company.
