LOCAL POLITICS AND CITY HALL

ACTION NEWS 4PM, MAY 6, 2019, 1:00 MIN., LOCAL

It's going to be more difficult for some businesses to get a liquor license in Fresno. In a unanimous vote, the City Council just approved the "Responsible Neighborhood Market Act." Under the plan, any new business that wants to sell beer, wine, or liquor will have to buy an existing license. This only impacts grocery stores, gas stations, and liquor stores. The idea is, as the city grows, the number of licenses will stay the same. Council members say in most places in California, there's a liquor store for about every 2,500 people. But in the city of Fresno there's one liquor store for every thousand residents. We will have a live report from City Hall with the timeline on how fast this could happen.

ACTION NEWS 4PM, MAY 16, 2019, 1:00 MIN., LOCAL

Fresno Mayor Lee Brand vetoed a city council resolution that would have displaced two staff members employed by the City Manager's office. The fight is over office space and parking stalls. Mayor Brand said he was "backed into a corner" by the city council, forcing him to veto the resolution that called for the offices of two city manager employees to be relocated to other parts of City Hall. The resolution would also require seven other staff members to park in a lot much further away from the building in order to accommodate councilmembers' council assistants. This is Mayor Brand's first veto since taking office in 2017.

ACTION NEWS AM LIVE, JUNE 4, 2019, 1:00 MIN., LOCAL

Mayor Lee Brand will present his new spending plan for the City of Fresno before the city council today. The mayor is proposing a budget of $1.187 billion that includes $346 million in the general fund for the 2020 fiscal year. He also says the general fund reserve is on target to end this fiscal year at $34 million, which is the highest reserve in the city's history. The reserve is roughly ten percent of the city's general fund, which is the money they can actually spend. The new budget proposes a 4 percent increase in parks funding, and calls for a new fire station. It also proposes creating a new department of neighborhood services to handle code violations and other complaints, but only adds 3 positions. The mayor intends to present his budget plan this morning around 9:30 at City Hall.

ACTION NEWS LIVE AT 4PM, 5/20/2019, :30 SEC., LOCAL

The race for Fresno's mayor is heating up after Lee Brand announced today he will not be seeking a second term. Brand said he wants to spend more time with his family and travel. The 70-year-old also said he plans to explore new business opportunities. Almost immediately after the mayor made his decision public, Fresno's retiring police chief, Jerry Dyer, says he's strongly considering a run. Dyer just sold his Fresno County home and is moving into the city.

ACTION NEWS MIDDAY, 5/21/2019, :20 SEC, LOCAL

Fresno Police Chief Jerry Dyer tells Action News: "What's next is me making sure, absolutely in my heart that I should be the mayor of this city. And I feel the calling -- it's just a matter of me affirming that calling." Meanwhile, the Fresno Police Chief already has the blessing of his wife and children to seek the job overseeing the fifth largest city in the state. Now he's just talking with close friends to make sure it's a good fit. Prosecutor Andrew Janz, who ran unsuccessfully against Congressman Devin Nunes, is also running for mayor, saying Fresno needs a change and a new vision. Also in the running is councilmember Luis Chavez, who made his announcement to run on Monday. Dyer has sold his countryside home in Fresno County to move into Fresno. He plans to make a final announcement in the upcoming weeks.

ACTION NEWS 6PM, 5/30/2019, :25 SEC., LOCAL

Fresno Police Chief Jerry Dyer is officially a candidate in the race for Mayor. The Chief made the announcement yesterday at Manchester Center. Not everyone who showed up for Dyer's announcement supported his decision. The planned outdoor gathering was moved indoors after protesters voiced their opposition. Touting his 40 years of experience, Dyer says he's uniquely qualified to make the tough decisions and wants to focus on job creation, homelessness and public safety.

ACTION NEWS AM LIVE, 6/4/2019, :51 SEC., LOCAL

A Democratic candidate in the race for the 2020 Presidential election made his case to valley voters for why he should be in the White House. Pete Buttigieg attended a special town hall event at Fresno State yesterday. During that hour, the South Bend, Indiana, mayor called tariffs a tax on the people, discussed the need for more renewable energy, and called on more gun licensing. Prior to the town hall, Buttigieg held a meet and greet in Downtown Fresno. If elected, Buttigieg would be the youngest and first openly gay president. At one point during the town hall, Buttigieg discussed President Trump.

ACTION NEWS AM LIVE, 4/20/2019, :46 SEC, LOCAL

Valley Democrat Andrew Janz has filed papers to challenge Fresno Mayor Lee Brand in next year's election. Janz is the Fresno County prosecutor who challenged Congressman Devin Nunes in one of the most expensive Central Valley races of the 2018 general election. Janz filed his candidate intention statement on Friday afternoon. Brand is in the middle of his first term as mayor. By the end of 2018, the Republican incumbent had already raised close to $500,000 for his 2020 reelection campaign.

HOMELESSNESS/HOUSING IN THE CENTRAL VALLEY

AM LIVE SATURDAY (6AM), 4/11/2019, 1:54 MIN., LOCAL

Most of these homes in progress in Livingston aren't even close to being finished yet; many of them have sold before the concrete even has time to set. Despite a statewide housing shortage, the city of Livingston is seeing tremendous growth with new home construction, and there's four new developments in progress around the city. These are dozens of new homes underway in a neighborhood east of town. Livingston's city manager, Jose Ramirez, says with the construction comes nearly a thousand new residents. He says the homes are a little pricier than the surrounding area at an average of about $300,000. Ramirez is hoping with all this new growth, comes a new platform for transportation. City officials say it's a great sight to see after not having much construction since the recession. But now there's a new problem: Livingston is now running out of space to build. Mayor Gural Samra says he's hoping to reach a tax-sharing agreement with Merced County to be able to annex land in the future.

ACTION NEWS AM LIVE, 4/3/2019, 1:51 MIN., LOCAL

Over the years, faith-based shelter, The Fresno Rescue Mission, has strived to help the less fortunate in the Central Valley. For the last 70 years, they've sheltered, fed and healed countless people who've walked through their doors. Last year alone, they served a quarter of a million meals and helped many through their services and programs. Their operations were originally much smaller when they opened in 1949. Eventually they grew into three campuses to meet demand. One on G Street, their Rescue the Children and their thrift store and training site. Rescue Mission CEO Matthew Dildine says they owe a lot to the community. Over the years the Mission has seen many changes and has been met with challenges. One of the biggest was the high-speed rail. Construction forced them to relocate their G Street location across the street. Currently they have a temporary facility. Portable units house all their services. They're not sure how long this will be the norm, since it's unclear when and how the high speed rail will continue to affect G Street.

AM LIVE SATURDAY, (6AM), 4/13/2019, 1:00 MIN., LOCAL

Governor Newsom is proposing a possible solution to California's housing crisis by forming a partnership with several cities, including Fresno. The plan includes building homes on unused state-owned land. Newsom expects to release at least three requests for proposals for new housing construction within a year. He hopes to get the building ball rolling by September.

ACTION NEWS SPECIAL EDITION, 4/25/2019, 8:30PM, 1:33 MIN., LOCAL

Abandoned for nearly 40 years, Hotel Fresno will soon get a makeover. A developer has plans to turn the historic downtown building into apartments. Fresno City leaders Thursday unanimously approved the plan that will allow APEC International to begin construction next month. The renovation will create 79 single family units for low-income residents with work slated to be completed by late 2020. Money for the $20 million project will not come from the City; instead, tax credits and tax exempt bonds will be used.

ACTION NEWS 6PM, 5/16/2019, 1:46 MIN., LOCAL

The motels along Motel Drive along Highway 99 both north and south of downtown have become havens for prostitution and drug dealing. Charlie Ruyle has lived here since 1951, before the motels were built. He says things are worse now than ever. But families with children also live in these buildings, paying from $50 to $80 a night. For many folks, these motels are the only places they can rent. Homeless are also relocated here. The city council has given unanimous approval to a plan to begin inspecting the motels, requiring them to meet health and safety codes of other rentals. Arias says some owners are eager to sell, and he hopes the city can persuade developers to come in. The council will hold a series of public hearings and work to get funding for the building inspections and enforcement in the next city budget. It's expected to take about 6 months for the changes to take effect.

Mike Murphy, the mayor of Merced, says homeownership is the cornerstone of the American dream. It was in the past and it is today. Being able to put a family into a home that they own that they're making payments on in a way that's affordable to them is important. It revitalizes the downtown, and everyone in the city benefits. Renovation work will begin for volunteers in the next few weeks, including a special day for youth to get involved. For more information, head to Habitat.org. There will be a groundbreaking for a Habitat for Humanity project at 1:30 p.m. today at 241 E. Main St. in Merced. The property was purchased with funds from the Neighborhood Stabilization Program by the City of Merced Housing Division. The property was then sold to Habitat for Humanity Stanislaus County to be remodeled as part of the sweat equity program for an eligible household. They are looking for volunteers at least one day where the youth can come out and get involved.

So far this year, the count found more than 1,400 people are homeless in the City of Fresno and 645 in the County. That's higher than last year. In 2018, there were 1,279 homeless in the city of Fresno and 555 in the county when dealing with people who want housing and services. But there aren't the resources to help people who want housing yet.

Churches and community members looking to get involved in the growing issue of homelessness in our Valley gathered for a free training seminar today. "Sacred Streets" is hosted by Fresno Pacific University and organized with Mayor Lee Brand's faith-based partnership cabinet. Discussions focused on how to approach people experiencing homelessness and how to reach out to local organizations for help. Participants also learned about creating neighborhood "repair teams" to help deal with vandalism and other clean-up issues that often plague parts of Fresno.

HEALTH CARE RELATED ISSUES IN THE VALLEY

ACTION NEWS 6PM, ALL WEEK LONG, 4/28-5/3, 2019, LOCAL

A little over four years ago, the world was introduced to a Fresno firefighter through a piece of heart-stopping video. It showed Captain Pete Dern on the roof of a garage when suddenly he dropped out of sight into a cloud of black smoke. Since then, we've only gotten a few glimpses of Captain Dern. For the first time since 2015, we hear from Captain Dern. In an exclusive interview, he describes in detail what happened that spring day. Captain Dern ended up with catastrophic burns. Many have wondered how he and his family are doing now. Action News anchor Liz Harrison sat down recently for an exclusive interview with Pete and his wife Kelly. This week featured several stories on the fire captain's healing journey.

Plans to increase the numbers of doctors and other health professionals in the Central Valley were discussed today. The California Future Health Workforce Commission outlined their ambitious ten-year plan to add nearly 50,000 health care workers statewide. The plan has a long list of priorities, including boosting scholarships to medical schools to bring in more doctors, and recruiting them to work in underserved areas like the Central Valley.

Encouraging news tonight for Valley residents who live in areas where health care services are limited. Fresno State's "Community Health Mobile Unit" just got a big boost. The clinic on wheels received a $250,000 dollar donation today from Saint Agnes Medical Center. The mobile unit travels to different valley cities, providing free health services. It was stationed today at the Holy Cross Center for Women in downtown Fresno. Since its Fall 2015 launch, services from the mobile unit have benefited more than 5,000 people throughout the region. The clinic also gives nursing students a chance to develop practical clinical skills.

In the South Valley, Tulare Regional Medical Center is now officially back open under a new name. Adventist Health Tulare reopened its hospital doors about six months ago, but it officially took on the new name yesterday. The hospital says it was waiting for the California Department of Public Health to approve the name. So far, it's seen more than 13,000 patients and performed 140 surgeries. Two years ago, Tulare Regional Medical Center declared bankruptcy and voluntarily closed its doors. The move forced patients to get care elsewhere and left hundreds of employees out of work.

Valley Children's Hospital and Adventist Health have teamed up to open a new medical facility in Fowler in Fresno County. They are offering services catered to families. A pediatrics center is offering several services including primary care, general plastic surgery, neurology, and more. For adults, they are offering many of the same services as well as vascular surgery, and they even have a wing dedicated to maternal-fetal medicine. The new clinic also offers dental, pharmacy, and laboratory services. The clinic is now accepting patients.

Creating a medical school in the Valley brought dozens of leaders to UCSF Fresno. The San Joaquin Valley has roughly 150 doctors per 100,000 residents. In contrast, San Francisco has 411 per 100,000 residents. You can see the dramatic difference that exists. This is one of the most underserved medical regions in the country. Assembly member Adam Gray of Merced helped lead the first San Joaquin Valley Coalition for Medical Education. He's currently working on AB 1606 -- which would fund the school by not allowing people to write off their gambling losses on their taxes and using those dollars. The program would likely need $500 million to get started. At Friday's meeting, leaders spoke about combining facilities and programs to jumpstart the school. UCSF Fresno and UC Merced would combine forces to educate students.

Students will not be accepted into Fresno State's School of Nursing Master's program this fall. That's after the university announced yesterday it's losing its accreditation because of a documentation shortfall. Fresno State says this will not affect any graduates in the program right now, including those who received degrees last month. Other accredited programs in the School of Nursing are also protected. The commission on Collegiate Nursing Education determined the program failed to adequately document or provide sufficient data for how it assesses student outcomes and clinical experiences. It found the university had plans in place to address the issues but failed to do so. Fresno State says the commission will review the Master's nursing program and consider reinstating accreditation in September.

Action News reporter Reuben Contreras shares more about the program and the clinic, open to anyone. At the Clinical Skills Lab for Fresno City College, the dental hygiene program has 30 students who perform dental work on thousands of patients each year, with a dentist on site. They treat patients from 5 years old to 105 years old and offer services such as dental cleanings, deep-scale cleanings, and fluoride treatments. To obtain an Associate of Science degree, students must put in 1,600 hours of work during the two-year program on real people with real dental problems. Once students graduate, they can apply for a clinical board license to practice in the dental industry. The Fresno City College program has been around since 1974.

May is National Bike Month, and cyclists gathered in Fresno to celebrate and get a little exercise. Action News reporter Reuben Contreras tells us about the ride they hope will create awareness on the road. Cyclists from all over the Fresno area gathered at Manchester Center for the annual "Mall to Hall Ride" Wednesday morning. SkyView30 was there when the 3.5-mile ride began on Blackstone Avenue. The ride finished at City Hall in Downtown Fresno. This is the 18th year for the annual ride organized by the Fresno County Bicycle Coalition. Fresno Police provided an escort for the cyclists. But all agree this event brings awareness for drivers to share the road with cyclists and vice versa, making it safer for cyclists, and awareness to the drivers that cyclists are out there. Wednesday's ride is just one of several this month. Another is the "Million Mile Challenge." Riders can log their miles with other riders.

The Central Valley Alzheimer's Caregiver & Wellness Conference was recently held in downtown Fresno and was geared toward Latino families. Information was provided about Alzheimer's disease and dementia and what kinds of things families can do to help their loved ones who have this disease -- how to care for them and how to implement some great techniques about how to manage their care. 35% of caregivers don't outlive their patients because they neglect themselves. So that's why we have the caregiver conference. For those who are caregiving in their home, or if they're needy, may be options to bring someone in to provide respite care, giving them a break. Sometimes caregivers don't sleep because their loved one may be wandering. Particularly the Latino population, the Hispanic population, are at higher risk of developing dementia as well, simply because they have a lot of different factors like diabetes, cardiovascular disease, and things like that, which are high in our community, and those are risk factors for dementia, as well.

CRIME AND GANGS IN THE CENTRAL VALLEY

ACTION NEWS AM LIVE, 6/19/2019, 1:00 MIN., LOCAL

The Fresno City Council will vote tomorrow on a plan that would give gang members a chance to put down their guns and give up the gang life. The proposal looks to provide $200,000 dollars to help fund the Advance Peace Program. It is part of the budget options the council will be considering. The program offers job training and other assistance to gang members who have used guns. Fresno Police have identified 138 gun-toting gang members in the city. Police Chief Jerry Dyer says arresting them all is impossible because few witnesses are willing to testify against them. Dyer and a majority of council members appear to support the program. He believes offering gang members a chance to get away from crime will pay off.

Federal court documents unsealed yesterday charged 21 defendants with connection to Pleasant Valley with conspiracy to sell and possess the drugs. According to an affidavit from FBI Special Agent, the gang used contraband cell phones to extend the reach of their drug trafficking activity from the prison to the streets of Kings, Kern, Tulare, and Fresno counties.

Developing in the South Valley, the Kings County Sheriff's Office is expected to release more information later today about a shooting where a deputy opened fire on two people. Investigators are piecing together clues to determine if that incident is connected to another shooting in Corcoran as well as a South Valley gang sweep. Around 5:45 yesterday morning, a Kings County Sheriff's deputy pulled over a red sedan on Highway 43 near Jackson Avenue. The deputy opened fire on two people inside the car, hitting them both. One was shot in the back twice. The other person got hit 10 times and is in critical condition. The deputy wasn't hurt and is currently on paid administrative leave. Two hours earlier in Corcoran, police responded to a shooting that happened during a home invasion on Hale Avenue. It's unclear if the resident or suspect was hit. This comes as a gang sweep operation is also underway in several Valley counties.

Segment #1:

Everybody loves a handmade tortilla. A new Mexican restaurant in southeast Fresno is serving them up. Tipzy's Tacos & Beer recently opened its doors, and we had a chance to check out the menu. At Tipzy's Tacos & Beer, a good meal starts with a handmade tortilla. Making sure that the texture is good so when they roll them out, they'll cook fast. Everything owner Claudia Moreno and her staff make in the kitchen is from scratch and made to order, every recipe passed down from her mother. And the difference of having fresh-made tortillas is a world of a difference.

Segment #2:

Today we're focused on local nonprofits making a difference in our community, helping survivors of violent crime. Learn how a cultural perspective can change outcomes. Plus, the local conference designed to help families caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's -- and it's in Spanish. And, Latino peace officers are ready to tee up for a great cause. We began with a look at helping survivors of crime.

Segment #3:

Bust out the golf clubs and get ready to take a swing for a good cause. The Fresno County chapter of the National Latino Peace Officers Association is planning a fun golf tournament. Guests were Armando Hindman and Ruben Diaz from the NLPOA in Fresno. The golfers are scheduled to tee off on May 17 at the Madera Municipal Golf Course at 8:00AM.

Segment #1:

If you like good food, music, and culture, you're not going to want to miss this year's Juneteenth celebration in southwest Fresno. We were joined by Kina McFadden, the entertainment coordinator for this year's Juneteenth celebration, and Janice Sumler, the event director. This is our 41st year celebrating here in Fresno, and it is a celebration of the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863. This year's celebration is themed Fresno or Welcome to Freskanda -- it's just all about uniting the families together.

Segment #3:

We have some really fun events to share with you and a few lessons on culture. We learned about East Indian traditions, from the celebration of spring to amazing weddings and men modeling purses. It's all for a great cause. Plus, where you can find great food, crafts, and celebrate Juneteenth right here in the Central Valley. It's an event called Power of the Purse. We were joined by Rosemary Caso, Executive Director of the United Way of Tulare County, and Kendra Carson, who is event chair of the Power of the Purse. This is an annual fundraiser that United Way of Tulare County has put on. Proceeds go to benefit United Way and what they do in Tulare County.

Segment #4:

May is Asian Pacific American Heritage Month, and ABC30 is highlighting the East Indian community today. We were joined by Kiran Brar, she is the founder of the Central Valley Kitty and the owner of the Hidden Wealth Academy, and Raman Gill. We learned about the customs, the culture, and the contributions. They shared the tradition of clothing worn on today's show. They're two different types of Indian tradition. A saree, which is probably the most common dress throughout India. This happens to be a more formal saree that we would wear to elaborate celebrations, wedding receptions, etc. Raman is wearing a suit.

Downtown Fresno was thriving with fun entertainment with a Chicano flair. The band Cisco Kid performed at Chukchansi Park last weekend, and attendees were also treated to some tricked-out cars on display. Check out these impressive lowriders. The event was all part of a Fresno Grizzlies promotion to embrace this part of Latino culture. The Grizzlies played as the Fresno Lowriders. A former convict is proving that sometimes you can change. Segment #2

Women are getting ready for one of the most exciting events of the year – the Central California Women's Conference. Tyra Banks will be the Key Note Speaker. Find out who will be there inspiring thousands of women at the largest conference of its kind in the Valley, plus the sessions that you don't want to miss. We were joined by conference-board president Nené Casares and one of the session moderators, Dora Westerlund, founder of the Fresno Area Hispanic Foundation. The conference is September the 17.

Segment #3:

A local artist is putting new work to canvas after undergoing surgery. Artist Aileen Imperatrice became a living organ donor, and her experience has inspired some of her latest work, plus she hopes to inspire others to save lives. The whole idea about the paired-exchange program is that when you put your information in, they put you through a whole bunch of tests, and when they find out information on your kidneys and your ability to donate, then they can put it into a software program that they have that matches across the country, and they're able to find a possible better match for the people who need the kidneys.

Segment #4:

It is one of the findings of the Central Valley Alzheimer's Caregiver & Wellness Conference, recently held in downtown Fresno and geared toward Latino families. Information was provided about Alzheimer's disease and dementia and what kinds of things families can do to help their loved ones who have this disease -- how to care for them and how to implement some great techniques about how to manage their care. 35% of caregivers don't outlive their patients because they neglect themselves. So that's why we have the caregiver conference. And for those who are caregiving in their home, or if they're needy, may be options to bring someone in to provide respite care, meaning giving them a break. Sometimes caregivers don't sleep because their loved one may be wandering. Particularly the Latino population, the Hispanic population, are at higher risk of developing dementia as well, simply because they have a lot of different factors like diabetes, cardiovascular disease, and things like that are high in the Latino community, and those are risk factors for dementia, as well.
