*20 Gulf Power says their stance on Amendment 1 is simple. "Being pro solar, we're for this amendment." But Dan Gardner, Vice President of Business Development with Compass Solar Energy assured Channel 3's Meg McNamara he is also pro solar but very much opposed to Amendment 1. Gardner insisted Amendment 1 is not about expanding solar energy but rather eliminating competition. Gulf Power agrees that competition is good but insists Amendment 1 is about protecting individuals. Rick Delahaya tell us Amendment 1 was created in response to another petition that didn't get enough support and was pulled off of the November ballot. But Gardner said amendment one solidifies Gulf Power as a monopoly. Amendment 4 also deals with solar energy. Right now solar energy tax exemptions only apply to businesses. Amendment 4 would expand tax exemptions to individuals. Both Gulf Power and Compass Solar Energy are for this amendment.

*21 The League of Women Voters are lobbying for stricter gun laws throughout the state. In a small room at the Tryon Branch Library, men and women sit and listen to Patti Brigham, the first Vice President of the League of Women Voters as she explains what she believes Florida can do to be a 'Smarter Gun State.' "We believe in educating the voters. If you have the knowledge, if you're armed with the facts, they're going to make better choices. When you vote, for example on amendments, when you vote for candidates, so we believe in educating in gun safety," Brigham said. Brigham touched upon this summer's deadly shooting at Pulse Night Club in Orlando, as a big reason behind this current push. "We are going to work on expanded background checks and a ban on semi-automatic assault weapons here in Florida." Brigham said. The League of Women Voters have been strongly involved in gun safety for several years. They have fought, and won, against a number of bills for the state. The league wants to close gun show loopholes and ban semi-automatic assault weapons. The group plans on fighting against the NRA's bills for open carry and campus carry in the state next year.

*23 Santa Rosa County voters will decide whether or not to increase the sales tax in two separate referendums. If both are passed, people will be paying a penny more on every dollar spent. Both referendums ask for a half-cent increase and would last five years and generate an estimated $70 million collectively. One would help pay for the new courthouse in downtown Milton; the other would buy equipment for law enforcement and fire departments, and could also be used on county safety projects and improvements to public facilities.

*29 How much difference does a debate make? A local expert says this one could have a huge impact. Channel Three's Laura Hussey spoke to professor Douglas Mock at Pensacola State College about why the big buildup may be justified. Mock said it's so big because Donald Trump is an unknown quantity. Typically, a successful candidate has a long political career, or is a military hero. Trump is a wild card. Mock said that makes the bar lower for him tonight. Soha Bamberg is a first-time voter in Pensacola. She knows plenty of people aren't crazy about either candidate. She understands, but with the economy hanging in the balance, she can't sit on the sidelines. The debate is a chance for Trump and Clinton to reach voters like Bamberg; leaning, but not locked in. She will be watching, hoping both candidates show her something to believe in.
