SEASONS OF LIFE "Late Adulthood"

THE CLIMATE OF LIFE'S FINAL SEASON HAS CHANGED MORE THAN ANY OTHER. IN THIS CENTURY, THERE HAS BEEN A 25-YEAR INCREASE IN LIFE EXPECTANCY AND THE CREATION OF AN ENTIRELY NEW PHASE OF LIFE--RETIREMENT. THE RANKS OF THE ELDERLY ARE SWELLING WITH VIGOROUS "YOUNG OLDS." THE RESULT IS A SEASON OF GREAT DIVERSITY. IF THEY ARE HEALTHY AND HAVE THE FINANCIAL RESOURCES, SOME OLDER ADULTS EXTEND THE ACTIVITIES OF MIDDLE AGE INTO THEIR 70S. OTHERS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THEIR NEWFOUND LEISURE TO CHANGE THEIR LIFESTYLE COMPLETELY. THE PSYCHOLOGICAL CLOCK CONTINUES ITS DOMINANCE, AND AGE ALONE BECOMES A POOR PREDICTOR OF WHAT PEOPLE ACTUALLY DO. THE BIOLOGICAL CLOCK EVENTUALLY RUNS DOWN, AND AS THE END OF LIFE COMES INTO VIEW, INDIVIDUALS WORK TO ACHIEVE A SENSE OF DIGNITY.

GROWING OLD IN A NEW AGE "Myths and Realities of Aging"

This introductory-level gerontology tele-course provided an understanding of the aging process, old age as a stage of life, and the impact of aging on society. This episode was divided into three segments. In the first part, gerontology experts and older people shared their views on aging, with many older adults reporting positive aspects to the process. The second segment presented information on the increasing numbers of older people in the country and the world, and how these demographic changes would continue to affect all aspects of society. The third segment identified and debunked common myths of old age, and discussed the impact of ageism. Some of the myths are: The elderly cannot engage in sex; aging brings mental and physical deterioration; older family members need to be taken care of; older people can't or won't learn new things, especially new technology; the elderly are politically conservative and suspicious of new ideas. The elderly who were interviewed for this program refuted these myths, offered positive affirmations of growing older, and emphasized the importance of combating society's entrenched negative attitude toward aging.

September 3, 02:00-02:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Living with Earth (Pt. 2)"

This episode, the last in the series, summarized the importance of geology in the modern world, and showed how geological science can be employed in the search for petroleum as well alternative energy sources and also water.

September 3, 02:30-03:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Down to Earth"

This introductory episode discussed various issues and phenomena which were to be covered throughout the program. It focused on the earth's "heat engines," based in the multiple layers of the planet; earthquakes; volcanoes; landslides, and the essential functions and characteristics of water and soil.

September 3, 03:00-03:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "The Restless Planet"

This episode focused on the ever-changing nature of the planet. It discusses Earth as an engine, and traces its functions back to the planet's formation. Asteroids, water, and plate tectonics all played important roles in the creation of such a friendly environment, and the balance of each is crucial to the continuation of life.

September 3, 03:30-04:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Earth's Interior"

This program examined the interior of the earth, including its iron core, the molten rock mantle, and the crust on which we live. It focused on the dynamics of gravity and heat, as well as seismic waves and magnetism, and showed how scientists measure these forces to learn more about the planet.

September 3, 04:00-04:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "The Birth of a Theory"

This episode focused on the theory of a supercontinent and subsequent continental drift. Proponents of this theory maintain, for example, that South America was at one time part of Africa. To support their belief, they point to the fact that rocks, minerals, and fossils on both continents match each very well if the two land masses are placed side-by-side.

September 3, 04:30-05:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Plate Dynamics"

This episode dealt with plate dynamics. The earth's crust is made of twelve large plates which are constantly shifting. When enough pressure builds up that the plates slide against one another, earthquakes result. This program explained the process of subduction, as well as the convection motion in the mantle layer.

September 10, 02:00-02:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Mountain Building and the Growth of Continents"

This episode focused on the formation of continents. It introduced geologist James Hutton and his theories about the formation of mountains and continents. Mountains occur around the coasts of continent, as accretion takes place; that is, when other masses of land fuse with a continent, they force the fringes of that continent up into mountains. This program also examined metamorphic and sedimentary rock.

September 10, 02:30-03:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Earth's Structures"

This episode examined the process by which the earth continuously creates and destroys its surface; explained Nicholas Steno's discovery that layers in rock were caused by sediment and could be used to date rocks; and showed how viscous rocks form folds. It also explained how faults occur between land masses; showed how scientists measure their strike and dip to predict how they moved; and demonstrated the difference between stress and strain.

September 10, 03:00-03:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Earthquakes"

This episode took a detailed look at the phenomenon of earthquakes. It explained their causes; the means by which seismologists measure earthquakes; the difference between p-waves and s-waves; and scientists' efforts to improve their record of earthquake prediction.

September 10, 03:30-04:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Geologic Time"

This episode examined efforts to determine the age of the Earth. It examined James Hutton's study of rock layers and the process by which they were formed; the value of measuring radioactive decay; and the wide variations in the planet's estimated age.

September 10, 04:00-04:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Evolution Through Time"

This episode focused on what geology can tell us about the progression of life on Earth. It examined the study of fossils, both the actual remains of animals and the molds animals leave behind; chronicled efforts to explain the sudden extinction of dinosaurs; surveyed the vast wealth of fossils at the LaBrea tar pits; and studied the implications on Darwin's theory of evolution.

September 10, 04:30-05:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Minerals: The Materials of Earth"

This episode focused on minerals. It examined their formation and structure; discussed the formation of crystals, such as quartz and table salt; demonstrated various uses of minerals; and showed how they help to preserve life.

September 17, 02:00-02:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Volcanism"

This episode focused on the causes and effects of volcanoes. Crucially important to the continuation of life on earth, they create landscape and add important elements to the atmosphere. It also examined the zones where volcanoes appear, called "hot spots," and included discussion on composite volcanoes and rift zones.

September 17, 02:30-03:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Intrusive Igneous Rocks"

This program looked at what igneous rocks tell geologists about the Earth's development. Magma, or liquid rock, fills in spaces between rocks, and heats them. By looking at what type of crystals form in the rock, scientists can determine the temperatures to which the rock has been exposed and thus develop a time line of the rock's development. Mafic and Felsic minerals, and where they are found in rock, are another indication.

September 17, 03:00-03:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Weathering and Soils"

This program focused on weathering and soil. It defined weathering as the process of destruction of the component rock of the earth's surface; examined mechanical and chemical weathering; demonstrated the crucial importance of soil; and took a detailed look at various techniques of soil management.

September 17, 03:30-04:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Mass Wasting"

This episode examined "mass wasting": the process by which earthen materials slide down slopes. It focused on severe forms of land and mud slides, as well as the more subtle forms of creep and slump; and chronicled engineers' efforts to build structures able to withstand mass wasting.

September 17, 04:00-04:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Sedimentary Rocks: The Key to Past Environments"

This episode examined sedimentary rock, which is formed through a process called lithification compaction, in which sediment builds up on itself and the weight compresses the sediment into rock. This type of rock is very valuable, because in a place like the Grand Canyon, researchers can study the development of rock through time and gain valuable insight into natural history. The program also focused on sedimentary rock in lakes and rivers.

September 17, 04:30-05:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Metamorphic Rocks"

This episode focused on metamorphic rocks. It examined the processes by which they can be created; compared and contrasted them to igneous rocks, and showed examples, such as spiral garnets found in New England.

September 17, 09:00-11:00 p.m.

NOVA "Dawn of Humanity"

The astounding discovery of ancient fossil human ancestors in a South African cave is highlighted.

September 23, 09:00-10:00 p.m.

GORONGOSA PARK - REBIRTH OF PARADISE "Lion Mystery/Elephant Whisperer"

Bob Poole and scientist Paola Bouley investigate why Gorongosa's lion population isn't growing.

September 24, 02:00-02:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Running Water: Erosion and Deposition"

Rivers comprise a very small portion of all the earth's water, but in many ways, they are the most important part. They carry their bedload, which consists of soil, sediment, and particles of rock, and redistribute it. In times of flood, they effectively fertilize and irrigate the soil. Meandering rivers are particularly susceptible to flooding. Using the Mississippi River as an example, the program looked at the problems of river management.

September 24, 02:30-03:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Running Water: Landform Evolution"

This episode chronicled the process by which running water forms the landscape. The first major work on this subject was done by William Morris Davis, who theorized that rivers and streams wear down mountains and turn them into plains. The Grand Canyon in Arizona is an example of the way that water works through erosion to change the face of the land. Also used as an example is the Army Corps of Engineers' constant battle to control the course of the Mississippi.

September 24, 03:00-03:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Groundwater"

This episode focused on ground water. Found even under the driest desert, ground water collects as water filters through the soil and settles underneath the earth. As land shifts, wells and caverns form. This program also examined open and closed aquifers.

September 24, 03:30-04:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Wind, Dust and Deserts"

While everyone seems to have a general picture of a desert as a place formed of sand dunes and not much else, deserts actually take many different forms. This episode examined the factors that form deserts, including cold sea currents, mountain ranges, polar regions, and plate tectonics. It also explored the process by which running water and wind form desert landscapes, and showed how a lack of tree and plant cover facilitates the sculpting power of the wind.

September 24, 04:00-04:30 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Glaciers"

This episode focused on glaciers. It demonstrated how they form, and traced their history in North America. It also profiled Swiss scientist Louis Agassiz, who in 1836 began investigating glaciers, including the process of "plastic deformation," by which they move.

September 24, 04:30-05:00 a.m.

EARTH REVEALED: INTRODUCTORY GEOLOGY "Waves, Beaches and Coasts"

This episode focused on the motion of water and its effect on beaches and coasts. It examined the movement of waves, and showed how they even out the shore through the process of refraction on uneven coastlines; explained the forces governing tides; and showed how undersea earthquakes can cause tsunamis, or tidal waves, which have wiped out entire coastal communities.
