American Inequality: Another study, "The Spirit Level" by Richard Wilkinson and Kate Pickett, shows that the U.S. has the greatest income inequality among the major developed countries. Get the stats and read an interview with the authors. Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander: In the months before his death, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had expanded his focus on racial justice to include reducing economic inequality. On this week's 42nd anniversary of King's assassination, Bill Moyers sits down with attorneys Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander to discuss how far we've really come as a country, how poor and working class Americans have been falling behind and what America must do to fulfill Dr. King's vision. Moyers on Inequality: A Bill Moyers essay. Reflections on King's Dreams: Revisit Dr. King's evolving theories of social and economic justice through his speeches. Plus, a Bill Moyers essay. U.S. Prisons and Drug Laws: The U.S. has five percent of the world's population and 25 percent of the world's prisoners -- how did we get here?

Awakenings (1954-1956): Individual acts of courage inspire black Southerners to fight for their rights: Mose Wright testifies against the white men who murdered young Emmett Till, and Rosa Parks refuses to give up her bus seat to a white man in Montgomery, Alabama; Fighting Back (1957-1962): States' rights loyalists and federal authorities collide in the 1957 battle to integrate Little Rock's Central High School, and again in James Meredith's 1962 challenge to segregation at the University of Mississippi. Both times, a Southern governor squares off with a U.S. president, violence erupts -- and integration is carried out.

Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 01:56:45

Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961): Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel; No Easy Walk (1961-1963): The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

Mississippi: Is This America? (1963-1964): Mississippi's grass-roots civil rights movement becomes an American concern when college students travel south to help register black voters and three activists are murdered. The Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party challenges the regular Mississippi delegation at the Democratic Convention in Atlantic City; Bridge to Freedom (1965): A decade of lessons is applied in the climactic and bloody march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama. A major victory is won when the federal Voting Rights Bill passes, but civil rights leaders know they have new challenges ahead.

Ginghamsburg Church and Darfur: As national elections approach in the fragile African country of Sudan, one church's commitment to its education, agriculture, water, and micro-enterprise projects there remains steadfast. Stephen Ministry: "That old Lutheran concept of the priesthood of all believers--Stephen Ministry helps you live that out, says Rev. David Sloop. Bearing One Another's Burdens: Stephen Ministry affirms the tremendous value of the laity in doing the work of congregational care, writes pastoral theology professor Tonya Armstrong. Mezuzah: "It's affixed and not movable, because that's like God is--our rock, always there, always affixed to our hearts," says Rabbi Tamara Miller.

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

A Town Revitalized? Can one of America's most unorthodox mayors revitalize a town on the verge of collapse? The national economic disaster hit the city of Braddock Pennsylvania like a wrecking ball. But Braddock Mayor John Fetterman--dubbed "America's Coolest Mayor" by The New York Times--is taking very unconventional approaches to reinventing the town and re-inspiring its residents. Home to the nation's first A&P supermarket and Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, Braddock is being revitalized with new youth and art programs, renovations of abandoned real estate, and bold plans to attract artists and green industries. This week, NOW sits down with Mayor Fetterman to learn how the 6'8" 370-pound political novice is trying to turn his town around, and if other devastated communities can and should follow his large footsteps.

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said,

"The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Two and a half millennia ago, a new religion was born in northern India, generated from the ideas of a single man, the Buddha, a mysterious Indian sage who famously gained enlightenment while he sat under a large, shapely fig tree. The Buddha never claimed to be God or his emissary on earth. He said only that he was a human being who, in a world of unavoidable pain and suffering, had found a kind of serenity that others could find too. This documentary by award-winning filmmaker David Grubin tells the story of his life, a journey especially relevant in our own bewildering times of violent change and spiritual confusion. Richard Gere narrates.

A Town Revitalized? Can one of America's most unorthodox mayors revitalize a town on the verge of collapse? The national economic disaster hit the city of Braddock Pennsylvania like a wrecking ball. But Braddock Mayor John Fetterman--dubbed "America's Coolest Mayor" by The New York Times--is taking very unconventional approaches to reinventing the town and re-inspiring its residents. Home to the nation's first A&P supermarket and Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, Braddock is being revitalized with new youth and art programs, renovations of abandoned real estate, and bold plans to attract artists and green industries. This week, NOW sits down with Mayor Fetterman to learn how the 6'8" 370-pound political novice is trying to turn his town around, and if other devastated communities can and should follow his large footsteps.

Awakenings (1954-1956): Individual acts of courage inspire black Southerners to fight for their rights: Mose Wright testifies against the white men who murdered young Emmett Till, and Rosa Parks refuses to give up her bus seat to a white man in Montgomery, Alabama; Fighting Back (1957-1962): States' rights loyalists and federal authorities collide in the 1957 battle to integrate Little Rock's Central High School, and again in James Meredith's 1962 challenge to segregation at the University of Mississippi. Both times, a Southern governor squares off with a U.S. president, violence erupts -- and integration is carried out.

Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961): Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel; No Easy Walk (1961-1963): The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

This documentary tells the story of the nation's best high school basketball coach, Bob Hurley, Sr. In his 36 years at St. Anthony's, he's won 23 state titles, three national championships with 957 career wins. The film reveals the coach's life-long struggle to inspire and motivate those around him to keep the doors open of a poor, inner-city Catholic High School in Jersey City, New Jersey. This is also the story about the teenage athletes fighting their way out of the poverty and desolation that surrounds them armed with little more than a basketball and the hard wisdom of a fierce, demanding coach.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

On January 12, 2010, Haiti was leveled by one of the most devastating earthquakes in recorded history. Those responsible for handling the catastrophe, including the Haitian state and the United Nations, were crippled by the magnitude of the disaster and struggled to respond. In the confused aftermath, survivors were left without food, water or shelter. FRONTLINE correspondent Martin Smith and team arrived in Port-au-Prince within days, and in this powerful report, bears witness to the disaster and the ill-coordinated relief efforts in the poorest country in the Western hemisphere. Drawing on interviews with key officials and humanitarian experts from Port-au-Prince to New York, The Quake asks, can the world do better? And how?

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and

Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Ain't Scared of Your Jails (1960-1961): Black college students take a leadership role in the civil rights movement as lunch counter sit-ins spread across the South. "Freedom Riders" also try to desegregate interstate buses, but they are brutally attacked as they travel; No Easy Walk (1961-1963): The civil rights movement discovers the power of mass demonstrations as the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. emerges as its most visible leader. Some demonstrations succeed; others fail. But the triumphant March on Washington, D.C., under King's leadership, shows a mounting national support for civil rights. President John F. Kennedy proposes the Civil Rights Act.

Health care reform was the first big policy deal taken on by the Obama administration. Many say the young president has bet the mid-term elections, possibly his presidency, on the outcome. In a new investigation FRONTLINE goes behind closed doors at the White House, in Congress and the boardrooms of the giant health-care lobby to examine the political battles and costly compromises that defined Barack Obama's endeavor. From early positive efforts, through the bitter battles with the Tea Party, the elation of apparent success at Christmas, to the crushing failure in the Massachusetts Senatorial election, FRONTLINE follows the story and reveals the first in-depth look at how the Obama administration operates. In Obama's Deal, FRONTLINE veteran producer Michael Kirk (Bush's War, Dreams of Obama, Inside the Meltdown, The Warning) provides a sobering expose of the realities of American politics, the power of special interest groups, and the role of money in policy making.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Get the stats and read an interview with the authors. Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander: In the months before his death, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had expanded his focus on racial justice to include reducing economic inequality. On this week's 42nd anniversary of King's assassination, Bill Moyers sits down with attorneys Bryan Stevenson and Michelle Alexander to discuss how far we've really come as a country, how poor and working class Americans have been falling behind and what America must do to fulfill Dr. King's vision. Moyers on Inequality: A Bill Moyers essay. Reflections on King's Dreams: Revisit Dr. King's evolving theories of social and economic justice through his speeches. Plus, a Bill Moyers essay. U.S. Prisons and Drug Laws: The U.S. has five percent of the world's population and 25 percent of the world's prisoners -- how did we get here?

Two and a half millennia ago, a new religion was born in northern India, generated from the ideas of a single man, the Buddha, a mysterious Indian sage who famously gained enlightenment while he sat under a large, shapely fig tree. The Buddha never claimed to be God or his emissary on earth. He said only that he was a human being who, in a world of unavoidable pain and suffering, had found a kind of serenity that others could find too. This documentary by award-winning filmmaker David Grubin tells the story of his life, a journey especially relevant in our own bewildering times of violent change and spiritual confusion. Richard Gere narrates.

Maximum Capacity. Saving tax dollars--can an innovative program make big cuts in America's prison population? The number of inmates in American prisons is outpacing the system's ability to hold them all. In one startling example, California prisons hold well over 50,000 more inmates than they're designed for, even though the state has built a dozen new prisons in the last 15 years. One of the biggest reasons is rampant recidivism. This week, NOW goes inside an Illinois prison that may have the answer to California's problems. With its innovative plan to keep released inmates from coming back, the Sheridan Correctional Center is trying to redefine "tough on crime" by being the largest fully dedicated drug prison in the country. The approach involves aggressive counseling, job training, and following the convicts after they get out. Can their novel approach keep convicts out of jail for good?

A Town Revitalized? Can one of America's most unorthodox mayors revitalize a town on the verge of collapse? The national economic disaster hit the city of Braddock Pennsylvania like a wrecking ball. But Braddock Mayor John Fetterman--dubbed "America's Coolest Mayor" by The New York Times--is taking very unconventional approaches to reinventing the town and re-inspiring its residents. Home to the nation's first A&P supermarket and Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, Braddock is being revitalized with new youth and art programs, renovations of abandoned real estate, and bold plans to attract artists and green industries. This week, NOW sits down with Mayor Fetterman to learn how the 6'8" 370-pound political novice is trying to turn his town around, and if other devastated communities can and should follow his large footsteps.

Did any Arabs save Jews during the Holocaust? Seeking a hopeful response to the plague of Holocaust denial in the Arab world and, in the wake of 9/11, Rob Satloff, head of a Washington policy center, set out on what would become an eight-year journey to find an Arab hero whose story would change the way Arabs view Jews, themselves and their own history. Along the way, Satloff found not only the Arab heroes for whom he started his quest but a vast, lost history of what actually happened to the half-million Jews of the Arab lands of North Africa under Nazi, Vichy and Fascist rule.

Drilling for energy and for support on health care, shaking hands with the troops on a surprise trip overseas, and uncovering a possible threat to domestic security, tonight on Washington Week. The president rallies for support of the health care law as new poll numbers show low marks for him and Congress. The president says, give it a chance. President Barack Obama said, "The polls haven't changed yet. Well, yes, it just happened last week." Looking to expand the energy sources, the administration takes the first steps in allowing more oil and gas drilling offshore. Sec. Ken Salazar said, "This is a good balance between conservation and development that gives us the energy security that we need." But how much energy would it actually produce at how much risk to the environment? Half a world away, a reminder of the struggles in Afghanistan and Iraq, as the president visits American troops. President Obama said, "We did not choose this war. This was not an act of America wanting to expand its influence." But did he make any headway with the government in Afghanistan plagued by corruption? And the FBI rounds up nine members of a militia style group in Michigan charged with plotting violence against police. FBI Agent: They could kill a lot of people just by themselves. What does it tell us about the threat of domestic terrorism? Those stories this week from the reporters who covered them: Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and Michael Duffy of Time Magazine.

Just when you thought the news might slow down, we have a new Supreme Court vacancy, that plus nukes, Karzai, Steele, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. After nearly 90 years on the planet and 34 years on the bench, Justice John Paul Stevens steps aside. We look at his past and the court's future. Just as consequential, two old Cold War foes agree to limit nuclear weapons. President Barack Obama said, "A nuclear weapon in the hands of a terrorist is a danger to people everywhere." While the U.S. wrestles with a newly troubled partnership. President Hamid Karzai said, "Afghanistan is the home of Afghans and we own this place and our partners are here to help in a cause that's all of us." A White House Reporter asked, "Is Karzai our ally?" Robert Gibbs replied, "Karzai is the democratically elected leader of Afghanistan." And at home, the Republican Party searches for a way to crowd its activists. Sarah Palin said, "Don't retreat, reload. And that is not a call for violence." And its party chairman. Michael Steele said, "I hear the leadership. We're taking steps to make sure that we're even more, how should we say, fiscally conservative in our spending." Covering the week: Joan Biskupic of USA Today, David Sanger of the New York Times, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Arguably the oldest black neighborhood in America and the birthplace of jazz, Faubourg Tremé was home to the largest community of free black people in the Deep South during slavery and a hotbed of political ferment. Here, black and white, free and enslaved, rich and poor cohabitated, collaborated and clashed to create America's first civil rights movement and a unique American culture. FAUBOURG TREMÉ: THE UNTOLD STORY OF BLACK NEW ORLEANS is a tale of heartbreak, hope and resiliency - all set to a soundtrack of fabulous New Orleans music.

Segment Length: 00:56:46

Lolis Eric Elie, a New Orleans newspaperman, takes viewers on a tour of the city in what becomes a reflection on the relevance of history folded into a love letter to his storied neighborhood, Faubourg Tremé. Arguably the oldest black neighborhood in America and the birthplace of jazz, Faubourg Tremé was home to the largest community of free black people in the Deep South during slavery and a hotbed of political ferment. Here, black and white, free and enslaved, rich and poor cohabitated, collaborated and clashed to create America's first civil rights movement and a unique American culture. FAUBOURG TREMÉ: THE UNTOLD STORY OF BLACK NEW ORLEANS is a tale of heartbreak, hope and resiliency - all set to a soundtrack of fabulous New Orleans music.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Arguably the oldest black neighborhood in America and the birthplace of jazz, Faubourg Tremé was home to the largest community of free black people in the Deep South during slavery and a hotbed of political ferment. Here, black and white, free and enslaved, rich and poor cohabitated, collaborated and clashed to create America's first civil rights movement and a unique American culture. FAUBOURG TREMÉ: THE UNTOLD STORY OF BLACK NEW ORLEANS is a tale of heartbreak, hope and resiliency - all set to a soundtrack of fabulous New Orleans music.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

It's under our feet and under our fingernails, but what is it? And how did it get there? Inspired by William Bryant Logan's acclaimed book "Dirt: The Ecstatic Skin of the Earth," find out how industrial farming, mining and urban development have led us toward cataclysmic droughts, starvation, floods and climate change. Dirt is a part of everything we eat, drink and breathe. Which is why we should stop treating it like, well, dirt. An INDEPENDENT LENS acquisition.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

Frogs have been hopping the planet for more than 350 million years. They've evolved into some of the most wondrous, diverse and beloved animals on earth.

Suddenly, they're slipping away. We've already lost one-third of our amphibians and more are disappearing each day. Some say it's the greatest extinction since the dinosaurs. Ecosystems are beginning to unravel, important medical cures are vanishing and we're losing a dear old friend. It's a global crisis, mobilizing scientists around the world to stem the tide - before the next frog crosses the thin green line.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

"Roosevelt's America" is a cinema verite profile of the struggles of a Lieberman refugee to build a new life in America. After being tortured and narrowly escaping execution during Liberia's civil war, Roosevelt Henderson makes his way to America with three of his children, but is forced to leave his pregnant wife behind. He works as a janitor, airport van driver and assembly line worker in order to support his family and help his wife flee their war-torn country. After two year of juggling low wage jobs, Roosevelt's perseverance pays off and he is reunited with his wife, Frances, and his baby daughter. By witnessing Roosevelt's day-to-day struggles, frustrations and achievements, viewers come to appreciate the distance he has traveled during his harrowing journey from torture and desperation in his native Liberia to security and stability in his newly adopted Hamlin. Ultimately "Roosevelt's America" becomes an inspiring story of quiet determination and dignity under duress.

In Food, Inc., filmmaker Robert Kenner lifts the veil on our nation's food industry, exposing the highly mechanized underbelly that's been hidden from the American consumer with the consent of our government's regulatory agencies, USDA and FDA. Our nation's food supply is now controlled by a handful of corporations that often put profit ahead of consumer health, the livelihood of the American farmer, the safety of workers and our own environment. We have bigger-breasted chickens, the perfect pork chop, insecticide-resistant soybean seeds, even tomatoes that won't go bad, but we also have new strains of E. coli--the harmful bacteria that causes illness for an estimated 73,000 Americans annually. We are riddled with widespread obesity, particularly among children, and an epidemic level of diabetes among adults.

The next big fight: will the government be able to impose strict new controls on the big banks? We talk about that, nuclear politics, Supreme Court politics, and tea party politics, tonight on Washington Week. Sen. Harry Reid (D-NV) said, "Wall Street took advantage of America. It's now our turn to look at Wall Street, have them contribute to a better America." Sounds simple enough, but a bank regulation bill that seemed like a slam dunk only a short time ago has run into a partisan buzzsaw on Capitol Hill. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said, "I think we're very, very close." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "This bill wouldn't solve the problems that led to the financial crisis. It would make them worse." Might the same thing happen to President Obama's eventual Supreme Court nominee or to the plan embraced by global leaders this week to reduce nuclear weapons -- buzzsaws everywhere, much of it building under the tea party flag. Ms. Sarah Palin said, "I'm not calling anyone un-American, but the unintended consequences of these actions, the results are un-American." Covering the week: David Wessel of the Wall Street Journal, Gloria Borger of CNN, Peter Baker of the New York Times, and John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

This was the week when the best laid plans went awry--on energy and immigration policy, on the Wall Street crackdown and Florida politics. We'll explain the hows and the whys tonight on Washington Week. Janet Napolitano, Secretary of Homeland Security said, "This is a spill of national significance." Hundreds of thousands of gallons of crude oil, threatening a huge natural disaster in the Gulf. President Barack Obama said, "Local economies and livelihoods of the people of the Gulf Coast, as well as the ecology of the region is at stake." Wind power, nuclear, clean coal, off shore oil drilling--do the risks outweigh the benefits? And thanks to a tough new Arizona law, will energy reform also be knocked off-course by a renewed debate over immigration? Gov. Jan Brewer (R-AZ) said, "Decades of federal inaction and misguided policy have created a dangerous and unacceptable situation." In Florida, one rising Republican star gets knocked off course and out of his party by another. Gov. Charlie Crist (Independent-FL) said, "My decision to run for the United States Senate as a candidate without party affiliation in many ways says more about our nation and our state than it does about me." Marco Rubio, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate - Florida said, "I know this campaign is not about me, it's about what I'm running for and what I'm running on." And a proposed Wall Street crackdown gets knocked back on course after a dramatic Capitol Hill showdown. Covering the week, Margaret Kriz Hobson of National Journal; Naftali Bendavid of the Wall Street Journal; Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post; and Eamon Javers of Politico.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

Arnold Schwarzenegger is betting on green. He wants to roll California's greenhouse gas emissions back to their 1990 levels, and he's promising Californians that their lifestyles and their pocketbooks won't feel the pinch. But is Schwarzenegger gambling with his state's economy? With help from eco-celebrities like Ed Begley, Jr. and Bill Nye "The Science Guy," NOVA examines California's aggressive pursuit of a sustainable energy future. From San Francisco's Luscious Garage, where mechanics create custom plug-in hybrids for customers like Google, to the Tehachapi Valley, where thousands of wind turbines are spinning out electricity, NOVA visits the places where green energy is already becoming a reality. Yet some critics fear that, as the nation struggles through an economic meltdown, the state's new policies are inviting dire consequences. Will California be a role model for the rest of the country or a cautionary tale?

In the aftermath of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression, "Mind Over Money" explores why mainstream economists failed to predict the crash of 2008 and why we so often make irrational financial decisions. It reveals surprising, hidden money drives in us all and explores controversial new arguments about the world of finance. Before the current crash, most Wall Street analysts believed that markets are "efficient" -- that investors are reasonable and always operate in their own self-interest. Most of the time, these assumptions of classical economics work well enough. But in extreme situations, people panic and conventional theories collapse. In the face of the recent crash, can a new science that aims to incorporate human psychology into finance--behavioral economics--do better? We'll see how the brains and bodies of Wall Street traders respond as they buy and sell stocks. We'll watch as an ingenious experiment reveals how too many spending choices and the way they're framed can overwhelm consumers' ability to make rational decisions. Through these real-life experiments, NOVA showed how mood, decision-making, and economic activity are all tightly interwoven. By delivering unexpected insights from leading analysts and powerful experiments, "Mind Over Money" exposes the mysterious and surprising nature of the two most powerful forces on our planet: the human mind and money.

Fixing Wall Street, why it's not like fixing health care, plus auto bailouts and climate controversy, tonight on Washington Week. Down to the wire or yet another big reform bill. President Barack Obama said, "What's not legitimate is to suggest that somehow the legislation being proposed is going to encourage future taxpayer bailouts, as some have claimed. That makes for a good sound bite, but it's not factually accurate. It is not true." Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) said, "The administration has said it wants to end bailouts. I say to them, prove it." But this time, both sides say there is hope for bipartisanship. As election year fire is focused instead at financial institutions once deemed too big to fail. At the same time, General Motors, which also receives government rescue help, begins to bounce back. Mr. Edward Whitacre, "I am very pleased to announce that, as of today, General Motors has repaid in full and with interest. Worth clapping about." But there is always another big debate just around the corner, next stop, energy reform. Covering the week, John Harwood of CNBC and the New York Times, Janet Hook of the Los Angeles Times, David Shepardson of the Detroit News, and Jeanne Cummings of Politico.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots-some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6-and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

For two centuries, American whale oil lit the world - powering the start of the industrial revolution and laying the groundwork for a truly global economy. From its stunning rise as an economic force in the 18th century to its precipitous decline in the decades following the Civil War, the whaling industry mapped millions of miles of uncharted ocean, opened new seaways and markets, employed the world's most multi-cultural workforce and shrunk the globe by bringing once remote reaches of the Earth into contact as never before -- all the while capturing the American imagination. As Americans now see fortunes rise and fall on the global energy and consumer markets, the rapid commoditization of whales and the sharp decline of the whaling industry serve as a stark reminder of the volatility of the global marketplace.

The creative chemistry of four brilliant artists--drummer John Densmore, guitarist Robby Krieger, keyboardist Ray Manzarek and singer Jim Morrison--made The Doors one of America's most iconic and influential, theatrical and mysterious, thrilling and sometime frightening rock bands. Narrated by Johnny Depp, American Masters: When You're Strange is the first feature documentary about The Doors. The film tells their story using only original footage--much of it previously unseen -- shot between their formation in 1965 and Morrison's death in 1971. From the outset I decided to use only original footage of this astonishing band, says Tom DiCillo, director and writer of When You're Strange. To me, there is nothing more powerful and riveting than seeing Robby Krieger, Ray Manzarek, John Densmore and Jim Morrison leap into life on the screen.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Spring 1946: Ten months after the end of World War II, an explosion rocks the Pacific off the coast of Hawaii. America has just destroyed one of Japan's most advanced weapons systems -- the I-401 aircraft carrier submarine. But this was no belated attack against the defeated Japanese. Bound by an agreement to share any discoveries with the Soviets, but feeling the pressure of the looming Cold War, it was a calculated decision to keep the technology out of Soviet hands. The Japanese had built their sub to take the war to U.S. shores. Merging the stealth and tactical advantages of sea and sky, the revolutionary submarine carried three specially designed Seiran attack bombers, which could be launched from the deck of the sub within seven minutes of its reaching the surface. With missions to attack U.S. cities and blow up the Panama Canal, the aircraft carrier submarine had the potential to change the course of the war in the Pacific. But fortunately for America, its secret weapon -- the atom bomb -- was put into action first. "Japanese SuperSub's" investigates Japan's efforts to take submarine technology where it had never gone before, and reveals how close the Japanese came to using the sub for an attack on the U.S.

The creative chemistry of four brilliant artists--drummer John Densmore, guitarist Robby Krieger, keyboardist Ray Manzarek and singer Jim Morrison--made The Doors one of America's most iconic and influential, theatrical and mysterious, thrilling and sometime frightening rock bands. Narrated by Johnny Depp, American Masters: When You're Strange is the first feature documentary about The Doors. The film tells their story using only original footage--much of it previously unseen -- shot between their formation in 1965 and Morrison's death in 1971. From the outset I decided to use only original footage of this astonishing band, says Tom DiCillo, director and writer of When You're Strange. To me, there is nothing more powerful and riveting than seeing Robby Krieger, Ray Manzarek, John Densmore and Jim Morrison leap into life on the screen.

For two centuries, American whale oil lit the world - powering the start of the industrial revolution and laying the groundwork for a truly global economy. From its stunning rise as an economic force in the 18th century to its precipitous decline in the decades following the Civil War, the whaling industry mapped millions of miles of uncharted ocean, opened new seaways and markets, employed the world's most multi-cultural workforce and shrunk the globe by bringing once remote reaches of the Earth into contact as never before -- all the while capturing the American imagination. As Americans now see fortunes rise and fall on the global energy and consumer markets, the rapid commoditization of whales and the sharp decline of the whaling industry serve as a stark reminder of the volatility of the global marketplace.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

For two centuries, American whale oil lit the world - powering the start of the industrial revolution and laying the groundwork for a truly global economy. From its stunning rise as an economic force in the 18th century to its precipitous decline in the decades following the Civil War, the whaling industry mapped millions of miles of uncharted ocean, opened new seaways and markets, employed the world's most multi-cultural workforce and shrunk the globe by bringing once remote reaches of the Earth into contact as never before -- all the while capturing the American imagination. As Americans now see fortunes rise and fall on the global energy and consumer markets, the rapid commoditization of whales and the sharp decline of the whaling industry serve as a stark reminder of the volatility of the global marketplace.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Episode three of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia relates how land grabbers poisoned a region that was once renowned mainly for its restful spas and noble character. When the chaos of the Civil War tore apart the agrarian way of life, Appalachian society was left ripe for plunder. Speculators spread through every timber-rich and mineral-infused hollow, making deals. Mysterious courthouse fires destroyed property records, and consolidators evicted people who couldn't prove ownership of their land. As ancient trees were felled and coal was dug to fuel the nation's booming economy, Appalachia's land, people, wildlife and culture were changed forever.

Kilauea, on Hawaii's Big Island, is the world's most active volcano. Its latest eruption began in 1983 and it hasn't stopped since. Since that time, it has created 544 acres of new land and consumed 200 homes. But as we watch nature's own fireworks display and witness the devastation wrought by flowing lava, we've also been able to observe a process that's central to life on these islands. The most spectacular moment of creation is when lava pours into the ocean creating new land; it is here that filmmaker Paul Atkins finds himself getting a shot few have ever filmed -- the cataclysmic meeting of 2,000-degree lava and 75-degree ocean water -- a sight to behold.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

When Mount St. Helens erupted in 1980, every living thing in the blast zone was buried beneath 300 feet of avalanche debris, covered with steaming mud, and finally, topped with a superheated layer of frothy rock from deep within the earth. It seemed as though Mount St. Helens might remain a wasteland forever. When biologist Charlie Crisafulli first flew over the disaster zone, finding no sign of life, little did he realize that his own life would be forever changed. Crisafulli has remained at the site for 27 years, documenting the dramatic return of plant and animal life to the barren landscape and pioneering a new understanding of the interaction between geologic forces and the life surrounding the mountain. NOVA brings viewers on an inspiring journey of a landscape brought back from the dead.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

When filmmaker Karen Skloss got pregnant at the age of 23, she decided to have and keep the baby--even when it became clear that her relationship with the baby's father wouldn't work out. She had no idea that it would be so easy to alter her life in one stroke. In SUNSHINE, Skloss explores the meaning of family through a personal journey to understand both the legacy of her own birth and the non-traditional family she created by co-parenting with her ex-boyfriend. Young, pregnant, single, and unprepared, Skloss struggles with the fact that sometimes, the most strenuous efforts to protect the idea of family can actually do the most to pull families apart. Woven together from more than 10 years' worth of home movies, intimate family interviews, shimmering dance sequences, and stylized reenactments, SUNSHINE is a refreshing and compelling self-portrait of an adopted woman driven to search for her pride and identity while reconnecting with her biological mother.

"We were never concerned with who killed Martin Luther King, but what killed Martin Luther King," says former King aide Andrew Young in this film, which tells the wildly disparate yet fatefully entwined stories of an assassin, James Earl Ray, and his target, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., against the backdrop of the seething and turbulent forces in American society that led these two men to their violent and tragic collision in Memphis, Tennessee, on April 4, 1968. Based on a forthcoming book by Hampton Sides (Ghost Soldiers), the program relies on eyewitness testimony from King's inner circle and the officials involved in Ray's capture and prosecution following an intense two-month international manhunt.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

The selling of Elena Kagan, the oil spill blame game, kissing and making up with Hamid Karzai, and the perilous politics of incumbency, tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "Our solicitor general and my friend Elena Kagan." Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-AL) said, "It is a confirmation. It's not a coronation." True, but President Obama's Supreme Court nominee is for now on a glide path. Elena Kagan said, "Thank you so much." But who is Elena Kagan and what would she bring to the nation's highest court? On Capitol Hill, another scandal, another oath, as lawmakers wrestle with the consequences of the disastrous oil spill. Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) said, "It doesn't benefit anyone of them for BP to be pointing the finger at Transocean, to be pointing the finger at Halliburton, to be pointing the finger back at BP." President Obama said, "The American people could not have been impressed with that display and I certainly wasn't." So who is at fault? At the White House Afghan President Karzai gets the royal treatment but what's happening on the battlefield? Gen. Stanley McChrystal said, "I think I'd be prepared to say nobody is winning at this point." And incumbents brace for what could be a rocky political season. For Democrats--President Obama said, "We've gone through a stormy time and I know sometimes has made you guys a little seasick." And Republicans. Sen. Robert Bennett (R-UT) said, "The political atmosphere obviously has been toxic." Covering the week: Pete Williams of NBC News, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Martha Raddatz of ABC news, and Charles Babington of the Associated Press.

The first hour of this series about the deep and surprising history of Appalachia explores the region's unique mosaic of plant, animal and early human life. As Pulitzer Prize-winning scientist E.O. Wilson notes, "A history of a region includes not just the people, but the creatures and the living environment." Geology is destiny. The Appalachian Mountains hold their treasure of mineral and timber wealth because they were born of a primeval ocean. Early North Americans settled here because giant mammals gave them vast food supplies. Over thousands of years, they formed highly sophisticated cultures, until 1540 when Hernando de Soto ruined them in his violent, single-minded hunt for gold. The tribes that remained after de Soto's brutal swath adopted the gun as their chief technology. England, Spain and France would court these skilled hunters and warriors as allies in the early struggle to dominate America. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Service: PBS
Format: Documentary

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

When Mount St. Helens erupted in 1980, every living thing in the blast zone was buried beneath 300 feet of avalanche debris, covered with steaming mud, and finally, topped with a superheated layer of frothy rock from deep within the earth. It seemed as though Mount St. Helens might remain a wasteland forever. When biologist Charlie Crisafulli first flew over the disaster zone, finding no sign of life, little did he realize that his own life would be forever changed. Crisafulli has remained at the site for 27 years, documenting the dramatic return of plant and animal life to the barren landscape and pioneering a new understanding of the interaction between geologic forces and the life surrounding the mountain. NOVA brings viewers on an inspiring journey of a landscape brought back from the dead.

What drove a company of American soldiers -- ordinary young men deployed to liberate a small foreign nation from an oppressive neighbor -- to murder more than 300 unarmed Vietnamese civilians? Were they "just following orders," as some later declared? Or, as others argued, did they break under the pressure of a misguided military strategy that measured victory by body count? Today, as the United States once again finds itself questioning the morality of actions taken in the name of war, Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Barak Goodman ("The Lobotomist," "Scottsboro: An American Tragedy") focuses his lens on the 1968 My Lai massacre, its subsequent cover-up and the heroic efforts of the soldiers who broke rank to halt the atrocities. "My Lai" draws upon eyewitness accounts of Vietnamese survivors and men of the Charlie Company 11th Infantry Brigade and recently discovered audio recordings from the Peers Inquiry to recount one of the darkest chapters of the Vietnam War.

The second part of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia traces the story of the region from the rumblings of Revolutionary War through Andrew Jackson's forced relocation of the Cherokee people in 1831. Appalachia's early settlers hand-cut trails through steep terrain covered with enormous trees and teeming with wild animals. They weren't about to take orders from Redcoats. When a few hundred angry mountain men handily beat the regiment of a pompous British major, they changed the course of history. Contrary to current stereotypes, the colonists saw Appalachia as a source of great wealth. Her riches seduced early Americans, from the legendary adventurer Daniel Boone to naturalist William Bartram to a young land surveyor named George Washington. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Spring 1946: Ten months after the end of World War II, an explosion rocks the Pacific off the coast of Hawaii. America has just destroyed one of Japan's most advanced weapons systems -- the I-401 aircraft carrier submarine. But this was no belated attack against the defeated Japanese. Bound by an agreement to share any discoveries with the Soviets, but feeling the pressure of the looming Cold War, it was a calculated decision to keep the technology out of Soviet hands. The Japanese had built their sub to take the war to U.S. shores. Merging the stealth and tactical advantages of sea and sky, the revolutionary submarine carried three specially designed Seiran attack bombers, which could be launched from the deck of the sub within seven minutes of its reaching the surface. With missions to attack U.S. cities and blow up the Panama Canal, the aircraft carrier submarine had the potential to change the course of the war in the Pacific. But fortunately for America, its secret weapon -- the atom bomb -- was put into action first. "Japanese SuperSub's" investigates Japan's efforts to take submarine technology where it had never gone before, and reveals how close the Japanese came to using the sub for an attack on the U.S.

Three tangled tales: the latest New York terror plot, the growing oil spill disaster in the Gulf, and the political impasse in Great Britain, tonight on Washington Week. Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, "This was an act that was designed to kill innocent civilians and strike fear into the hearts of Americans. And I'm happy to say that it failed on both counts." Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "Yes, we've been lucky, but luck is not an effective strategy for fighting the terrorist threat." Alert New Yorkers and law enforcement officers foiled yet another attempted terror plot. But was it chance or competence that stopped Faisal Shahzad from carrying out his deadly plans. In the Gulf of Mexico, oil continues to gush into the sea, while the hunt continues for a cause and a solution. Doug Suttles said, "We stress that this has never been done before. We'll likely encounter numerous challenges and but we'll remain committed to make it work." Sec. Janet Napolitano said, "The possibility remains that the BP oil spill could turn into an unprecedented environmental disaster." President Barack Obama said, "I want to emphasize from day one we have prepared and planned for the worst, even as we hoped for the best." While in Great Britain, an unpredictable election yields an unexpected outcome. Prime Minister Gordon Brown said, "People do not like the uncertainty or want it to be prolonged. We live, however, in a parliamentary democracy." Covering the week: Pierre Thomas of ABC News, Peter Baker of the New York Times, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, and in London, Dan Balz of the Washington Post.

When filmmaker Karen Skloss got pregnant at the age of 23, she decided to have and keep the baby--even when it became clear that her relationship with the baby's father wouldn't work out. She had no idea that it would be so easy to alter her life in one stroke. In SUNSHINE, Skloss explores the meaning of family through a personal journey to understand both the legacy of her own birth and the non-traditional family she created by co-parenting with her ex-boyfriend. Young, pregnant, single, and unprepared, Skloss struggles with the fact that sometimes, the most strenuous efforts to protect the idea of family can actually do the most to pull families apart. Woven together from more than 10 years' worth of home movies, intimate family interviews, shimmering dance sequences, and stylized reenactments, SUNSHINE is a refreshing and compelling self-portrait of an adopted woman driven to search for her pride and identity while reconnecting with her biological mother.

Public health scientists and clinicians tout vaccines as one of the greatest achievements of modern medicine. But for many ordinary Americans vaccines have become controversial. Young parents are concerned at the sheer number of shots--some 26 inoculations for 14 different diseases by age 6--and follow alternative vaccination schedules advocated by gurus like Dr. Robert Sears. Other parents go further. In communities like Ashland, Oregon, up to one-third of parents are choosing not to vaccinate their kids at all. And some advocacy groups, like Generation Rescue, argue that vaccines are no longer a public health miracle but a scourge; they view vaccines as responsible for alarming rises in certain disorders, including ADHD and autism. This is the vaccine war: On one side sits scientific medicine and the public health establishment; on the other a populist coalition of parents, celebrities (like Jenny McCarthy), politicians and activists. It's a war that increasingly takes place on the Internet with both sides using the latest social media tools, including Facebook and Twitter, to win the hearts and minds of the public.

When filmmaker Karen Skloss got pregnant at the age of 23, she decided to have and keep the baby--even when it became clear that her relationship with the baby's father wouldn't work out. She had no idea that it would be so easy to alter her life in one stroke. In SUNSHINE, Skloss explores the meaning of family through a personal journey to understand both the legacy of her own birth and the non-traditional family she created by co-parenting with her ex-boyfriend. Young, pregnant, single, and unprepared, Skloss struggles with the fact that sometimes, the most strenuous efforts to protect the idea of family can actually do the most to pull families apart. Woven together from more than 10 years' worth of home movies, intimate family interviews, shimmering dance sequences, and stylized reenactments, SUNSHINE is a refreshing and compelling self-portrait of an adopted woman driven to search for her pride and identity while reconnecting with her biological mother.

During the Depression-era of the 1930s, tens of thousands of teenagers hopped freight trains in search of a better life elsewhere. What they discovered was a mixture of adventure, camaraderie, hardship and loneliness. They saw a country in turmoil and found experiences that impacted them for the rest of their lives -- their ultimate freedom traded for despair, lack of jobs, and even death. Through first-hand accounts, "The American Experience" recalls the stories of teen drifters crisscrossing America during tough times.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

For a 70-year period, when America cared little about the education of African-Americans, and discrimination was law and custom, The Bordentown School was an educational utopia. An incubator for black pride and intellect, it taught values, discipline, and life skills to generations of black children. This is the story of that school, as told by Bordentown alumni, historians, and archival footage. It is also the story of black education in America across three centuries, presenting a nuanced, rarely seen portrait of a separate black space; and a much-needed preface to the growing national discussion about historically black institutions and their role in nurturing identity and accomplishment. What was lost and what was gained in the march toward equality?

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week: Karen Tumulty, of the Washington Post, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

Moral Wounds of War: "Does the public really understand in a deep way what the moral burdens of war are? I don't think so," says philosopher, ethicist, and psychoanalyst Nancy Sherman. Sharing the Burden of War: "The individual soldier often feels not that he or she is broken, but that the world itself is broken, and there is no easy fix for a broken world," writes U.S. Navy Commander Greg Parker. Jonathan Shay Extended Interview: "Whether we're actually preserving veterans' capacity to have a flourishing life after war, a good life for a human being after war, I don't know. I just don't know," says clinical psychiatrist Jonathan Shay. Nancy Sherman Extended Interview: "Soldiers carry all the moral weight of war, and we carry very little, and we need to share that moral burden by realizing that they are our surrogates," says the author of "The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds, and Souls of Our Soldiers." Lt. Col. Eric Olsen Extended Interview: "To do the war on the cheap and not hold us all accountable for the decisions that are made is a travesty," says this New York National Guard state chaplain. Michael Abbatello Extended Interview: "It's like you don't really know your spirit until it's been damaged. We don't really have a consciousness of our own spirit until it's wounded, and then it needs help," says Michael Abbatello, who served in Afghanistan as a rifleman in a Marine Corps infantry line unit. Ed Tick Extended Interview: "It's our job as civilians to tend to the returning warriors by bringing them into the center of the community," says this psychotherapist and author of "War and the Soul." Religious Hiring Rights: At the Helping Up Mission in Baltimore, executive director Bob Gehman says, "If we were not able to discriminate in our hiring practices based on our faith and religion, that would change us." Stanley Carlson-Thies Extended Interview: The fight is not over whether faith groups are subject to the law, says the president of the Institutional Religious Freedom Alliance, "because they are subject to whatever the law is, which in many cases makes this exception for them. The question is should this exception be allowed to continue?"

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

For a 70-year period, when America cared little about the education of African-Americans, and discrimination was law and custom, The Bordentown School was an educational utopia. An incubator for black pride and intellect, it taught values, discipline, and life skills to generations of black children. This is the story of that school, as told by Bordentown alumni, historians, and archival footage. It is also the story of black education in America across three centuries, presenting a nuanced, rarely seen portrait of a separate black space; and a much-needed preface to the growing national discussion about historically black institutions and their role in nurturing identity and accomplishment. What was lost and what was gained in the march toward equality?

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

The final episode of this series about the natural and human history of Appalachia sparks both heartbreak and hope for the region's ransacked mountain ecosystem. Early 20th-century mineral barons ruled Appalachia with an iron fist. Company spies tracked miners' every move. If they found a man's union card, he would be fired, even killed. Inspired by a brave little old lady who talked like a preacher and cursed like a sailor, mineworkers organized and demanded better treatment. The dams of the Tennessee Valley Authority drowned ancestral homesteads, but the project eliminated abject poverty for thousands. An invasive fungus has wiped out the majestic American chestnut tree, but its roots refuse to die. Strip mining has torn the tops off mountains, but a new wave of activists, writers, musicians, scientists and nature-lovers is expanding the miners' ideas of health and fairness to include the forests, the rivers and the mountains themselves. Academy Award-winning actress Sissy Spacek narrates.

Moral Wounds of War: "Does the public really understand in a deep way what the moral burdens of war are? I don't think so," says philosopher, ethicist, and psychoanalyst Nancy Sherman. Sharing the Burden of War: "The individual soldier often feels not that he or she is broken, but that the world itself is broken, and there is no easy fix for a broken world," writes U.S. Navy Commander Greg Parker. Jonathan Shay Extended Interview: "Whether we're actually preserving veterans' capacity to have a flourishing life after war, a good life for a human being after war, I don't know. I just don't know," says clinical psychiatrist Jonathan Shay. Nancy Sherman Extended Interview: "Soldiers carry all the moral weight of war, and we carry very little, and we need to share that moral burden by realizing that they are our surrogates," says the author of "The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds, and Souls of Our Soldiers." Lt. Col. Eric Olsen Extended Interview: "To do the war on the cheap and not hold us all accountable for the decisions that are made is a travesty," says this New York National Guard state chaplain. Michael Abbatello Extended Interview: "It's like you don't really know your spirit until it's been damaged. We don't really have a consciousness of our own spirit until it's wounded, and then it needs help," says Michael Abbatello, who served in Afghanistan as a rifleman in a Marine Corps infantry line unit. Ed Tick Extended Interview: "It's our job as civilians to tend to the returning warriors by bringing them into the center of the community," says this psychotherapist and author of "War and the Soul." Religious Hiring Rights: At the Helping Up Mission in Baltimore, executive director Bob Gehman says, "If we were not able to discriminate in our hiring practices based on our faith and religion, that would change us." Stanley Carlson-Thies Extended Interview: The fight is not over whether faith groups are subject to the law, says the president of the Institutional Religious Freedom Alliance, "because they are subject to whatever the law is, which in many cases makes this exception for them. The question is should this exception be allowed to continue?"

In September of 1938, a great storm rose up on the African coast and began to cross the Atlantic. The National Weather Bureau predicted it would blow itself out at Cape Hatteras, just as such storms usually did. But there was nothing typical about this storm. Without sophisticated forecasting tools, the East Coast was taken by surprise as the storm suddenly headed north. Within 24 hours of the Weather Bureau's benign forecast, the so-called "Florida cyclone" ripped into the New England coast with a fury that set off seismographs in Alaska. Expecting only heavy rains, people found themselves, virtually without warning, in the midst of the most devastating storm ever recorded in North America. Traveling at 60 m.p.h., with peak gust winds surging up to three times that speed, the storm killed some 600 people, destroyed 8,000 homes, and wrecked 6,000 boats. This program follows the lives of fishermen, Shinnecock Indians, and vacationers who were caught up in this incredible natural disaster.

A solitary loggerhead turtle in the middle of a vast ocean may not sound like an adventure film, but stick with her. Along her 9000-mile voyage to nest, our loggerhead tour guide in VOYAGE OF THE LONELY TURTLE encounters hammerhead sharks, deep ocean tempests, and man-made death traps in the form of fishing nets and hooks. Her body of well-suited armor and specialized adaptations for deep-ocean dwelling will help the sea turtle evade many of the ocean's menaces. But this is just one set of challenges to overcome. Here is another: she must find her way across the Pacific, from Mexico to a small stretch of beach in Japan, a precise location that she has been to just once before, as a two-inch hatchling, decades ago.

Each year, a small shorebird that winters on the southern tip of South America must make a 10,000-mile journey to its nesting grounds in the Arctic -- one of the longest migrations on earth. The pocket-sized long distance traveler times its migration precisely to coincide with the annual spawning of one of earth's most ancient creatures. Horseshoe crab eggs in the Delaware Bay fuel the little bird's epic journey to the Arctic...but recently, bird numbers have started to crash. The story of the red knot and the horseshoe crab is a living example of how every species is interconnected -- each one important, no matter how big or small.

A powerful tornado is a terrifying phenomenon that continues to defy decades of scientific efforts to predict it. During one of the worst tornado seasons on record, a NOVA camera team chased across the Midwest, capturing hair-raising footage of highly destructive twisters in action. But HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER is much more than just another "extreme weather" show. Our story focuses on the efforts of two scientists at the University of Oklahoma to develop radically different approaches to forecasting twisters: one relies on "virtual tornados" created inside supercomputers, while the other involves hunting down real-life storms to collect data firsthand (the method that inspired the movie Twister). With jaw-dropping 3-D graphics generated by the National Center for Supercomputing Applications, NOVA's show features spectacular footage of these terrifying twisters. HUNT FOR THE SUPERTWISTER gives viewers a front-row seat to the risky and thrilling art of storm chasing, complete with the latest research findings and state-of-the-art visual effects.

NOVA presents a minute-by-minute eyewitness account of the Hurricane Katrina disaster, exploring why the flood defenses and disaster relief planning failed to match Katrina's fury. What made this storm so deadly? How accurately did scientists predict its impact? And why are powerful hurricanes like Katrina likely to strike more often? The program will investigate the immense challenges posed by rebuilding New Orleans, and why - despite all the knowledge of the peril faced by its citizens - the city was so tragically unprepared when the long-feared disaster finally struck.

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week: Karen Tumulty, of the Washington Post, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

For a 70-year period, when America cared little about the education of African-Americans, and discrimination was law and custom, The Bordentown School was an educational utopia. An incubator for black pride and intellect, it taught values, discipline, and life skills to generations of black children. This is the story of that school, as told by Bordentown alumni, historians, and archival footage. It is also the story of black education in America across three centuries, presenting a nuanced, rarely seen portrait of a separate black space; and a much-needed preface to the growing national discussion about historically black institutions and their role in nurturing identity and accomplishment. What was lost and what was gained in the march toward equality?

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

This was the week the voters turned conventional wisdom upside down in Pennsylvania, Arkansas, and Kentucky. Now, what comes next, tonight on Washington Week. Rand Paul said, "We've come to take our government back." Rep. Joe Sestak (D-PA) said, "A win for the people over the establishment, over the status quo, even over Washington D.C." LT. Gov. Bill Halter said, "Three more weeks, two more candidates, one choice for change." This is what it looks like when American voters get in a bad mood. Incumbents endangered and the longer they've been in Washington the harder they're falling. Sen. Arlen Specter (D-PA) said, "It's been a great privilege to serve the people of Pennsylvania." Both parties are scrambling to assess what comes next as surprises seem to lurk around every corner. Richard Blumenthal said, "On a few occasions I have misspoken about my service." Covering the week, Dan Balz of the Washington Post, John Dickerson of Slate magazine and CBS News, Susan Milligan of the Boston Globe, and Jeff Zeleny of the New York Times.

Confusion, finger-pointing, defensiveness, stand offs, and blame, from the Gulf Coast to the Korean Peninsula, everybody's on edge. We explore why tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I ultimately take responsibility for solving this crisis. I'm the president and the buck stops with me." Rare admissions of fault from our president who likes to be right. President Obama stated, "Where I was wrong, was in my belief that the oil companies had their act together when it came to worst-case scenarios." Surveying the damage today. President Obama continued, "We've got about seven miles of beach here where two types of boom have already been laid." He viewed efforts to stem the tide of oil polluting the Gulf Coast, as the tide of blame kept rising in Washington. Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) said, "And it's also clear the president has failed in his obligations to the American people to uphold the law and act." Tony Hayward said, "What we're seeing here is a whole series of failures." Rep. Charlie Melancon (D-LA) said, "Our culture is threatened, our coastal economy is threatened, and everything that I know and love is at risk." Six weeks later the BP oil disaster continues. Also, Congress moves to make it easier for gays to serve in the military. And tensions build on the Korean Peninsula again. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea." Covering the week: Karen Tumulty, of the Washington Post, Elizabeth Shogren of National Public Radio, Martha Raddatz of ABC News, and David Sanger of the New York Times.

During the Depression-era of the 1930s, tens of thousands of teenagers hopped freight trains in search of a better life elsewhere. What they discovered was a mixture of adventure, camaraderie, hardship and loneliness. They saw a country in turmoil and found experiences that impacted them for the rest of their lives -- their ultimate freedom traded for despair, lack of jobs, and even death. Through first-hand accounts, "The American Experience" recalls the stories of teen drifters crisscrossing America during tough times.

In March 1933, within weeks of his inauguration, President Franklin Roosevelt sent legislation to Congress aimed at providing relief for the one out of every four American workers who were unemployed. He proposed the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) to provide jobs in natural resource conservation. Over the next decade, the CCC put more than three million young men to work in the nation's forests and parks, planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting fires and maintaining roads and trails. Corps workers lived in camps under quasi-military discipline, and received a wage of 30 dollars per month, 25 of which they were required to send home to their families. This film tells the story of one of the boldest and most popular New Deal experiments, positioning it as a pivotal moment in the emergence of modern environmentalism and federal unemployment relief.

Eric Olsen Extended Interview: "To do the war on the cheap and not hold us all accountable for the decisions that are made is a travesty," says this New York National Guard state chaplain. Michael Abbatello Extended Interview: "It's like you don't really know your spirit until it's been damaged. We don't really have a consciousness of our own spirit until it's wounded, and then it needs help," says Michael Abbatello, who served in Afghanistan as a rifleman in a Marine Corps infantry line unit. Ed Tick Extended Interview: "It's our job as civilians to tend to the returning warriors by bringing them into the center of the community," says this psychotherapist and author of "War and the Soul." Religious Hiring Rights: At the Helping Up Mission in Baltimore, executive director Bob Gehman says, "If we were not able to discriminate in our hiring practices based on our faith and religion, that would change us." Stanley Carlson-Thies Extended Interview: The fight is not over whether faith groups are subject to the law, says the president of the Institutional Religious Freedom Alliance, "because they are subject to whatever the law is, which in many cases makes this exception for them. The question is should this exception be allowed to continue?"

GROUND WAR explores the key technological advances that have defined ground warfare through the ages. From the gladius to the AK-47, from the chariot to the tank, from the trebuchet to the howitzer, and from the battle ramp to the star fort, the series follows the fascinating punch and counterpunch of battle tactics and new technologies. With classic examples like the stirrup and lesser known innovations like the gunner's quadrant, the series reveals how even the smallest innovations can have a wide-ranging effect on the way wars are fought. The episodes explore the development of the soldier and his weapons in "Warrior Weapons," movement in the combat zone in "Battlefield Mobility," the evolution of artillery in "Firepower" and battlefield engineering in "Command and Control."

A remote lake in Southeast Asia conceals evidence of Earth's greatest volcanic cataclysm of the last 100,000 years. Miles beneath its placid surface lies a magma chamber that exploded so violently during the Ice Age that gases and ash may have encircled the globe and blotted out the sun for years on end. The Toba eruption may have helped kick the climate into an unprecedented freeze and perhaps even pushed ancestral human populations to the brink of extinction. In a classic science detective story, NOVA pieces together the clues about this great catastrophe and probes questions raised about human evolution and Earth's fragile ecosystems.

One year after the deadliest domestic airline accident in seven years, FRONTLINE investigates the crash of Continental 3407 in Buffalo, NY, and discovers a dramatically changed airline industry, where regional carriers now account for half of the nation's daily departures. The rise of the regionals and arrival of low-cost carriers have been a huge boon to consumers, and the industry insists that the skies remain safe. But many insiders are worried that now, thirty years after airline deregulation, the aviation system is being stretched beyond its capacity to deliver service that is both cheap and safe.

After the Pearl Harbor attack, Nebraska farmer Ben Kuroki volunteered for the U.S. Army Air Corps. He would become the first Japanese-American war hero, surviving 58 missions as an aerial gunner over Europe, North Africa and Japan. Between tours of duty he found himself at the center of controversy -- a lone spokesman against the racism faced by the thousands of Japanese Americans who were sent to internment camps.

Moral Wounds of War: "Does the public really understand in a deep way what the moral burdens of war are? I don't think so," says philosopher, ethicist, and psychoanalyst Nancy Sherman. Sharing the Burden of War: "The individual soldier often feels not that he or she is broken, but that the world itself is broken, and there is no easy fix for a broken world," writes U.S. Navy Commander Greg Parker. Jonathan Shay Extended Interview: "Whether we're actually preserving veterans' capacity to have a flourishing life after war, a good life for a human being after war, I don't know. I just don't know," says clinical psychiatrist Jonathan Shay. Nancy Sherman Extended Interview: "Soldiers carry all the moral weight of war, and we carry very little, and we need to share that moral burden by realizing that they are our surrogates," says the author of "The Untold War: Inside the Hearts, Minds, and Souls of Our Soldiers." Lt. Col. Eric Olsen Extended Interview: "To do the war on the cheap and not hold us all accountable for the decisions that are made is a travesty," says this New York National Guard state chaplain. Michael Abbatello Extended Interview: "It's like you don't really know your spirit until it's been damaged. We don't really have a consciousness of our own spirit until it's wounded, and then it needs help," says Michael Abbatello, who served in Afghanistan as a rifleman in a Marine Corps infantry line unit. Ed Tick Extended Interview: "It's our job as civilians to tend to the returning warriors by bringing them into the center of the community," says this psychotherapist and author of "War and the Soul." Religious Hiring Rights: At the Helping Up Mission in Baltimore, executive director Bob Gehman says, "If we were not able to discriminate in our hiring practices based on our faith and religion, that would change us." Stanley Carlson-Thies Extended Interview: The fight is not over whether faith groups are subject to the law, says the president of the Institutional Religious Freedom Alliance, "because they are subject to whatever the law is, which in many cases makes this exception for them. The question is should this exception be allowed to continue?"

This program investigates a fantastic WWII tale of jungle ambushes, extreme engineering, blow darts defenses, and enemy headhunting. In 1945, an American B24 bomber is shot down over Japanese-controlled Borneo. The airmen bail out and survive, only to find themselves isolated and lost in the impenetrable jungle. Briefed to fear the "savage" Dayak inhabitants, the Americans are instead taken in by these tribes and become witness to a compassionate, resourceful people who shatter stereotypes, protect them from the Japanese, and eventually deliver them safely into the hands of an eccentric British Major who orchestrates their rescue by building a bamboo runway deep in the Borneo interior.

Germany's invasion of the Soviet Union in 1941 was the largest troop offensive in military history. And the Battle of Stalingrad is arguably the deadliest single battle the world has ever seen. The eventual Russian victory has long been lauded as a shining example of Stalin's military genius. He is said to have baited the much more powerful and technologically advanced German army with a carefully executed withdrawal, then caught the Nazis unprepared in vicious city-block-by-city-block fighting that decimated the German forces. By the time the battle was over, more than one million lives had been lost and the course of the war permanently altered. But 70 years after the battle was fought, newly uncovered documents, survivor accounts and stunning archival footage are revealing a different picture. "Deadliest Battle" uncovers evidence that describes a forced retreat by the Russians, not a tactical one, in addition to much fiercer fighting in the countryside than previously thought. The battle not only changed the course of World War II, but established the Soviet Union as a superpower to be reckoned with in the long Cold War that lay ahead. More than a half-century later, the full impact of this horrific battle is revealed.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Hundreds of millions of dollars being spent on the Gulf Coast disaster and on elections coast to coast, the winners, the losers, and the stalemates, tonight on Washington Week. Two California Republicans triumph. Meg Whitman, CA GOP Gubernatorial Candidate said, "Two businesswomen who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done." While some incumbents fall and some survive. Nevada Gov. Jim Gibbons said, "I stand here humbled and grateful for the four years that the people of Nevada gave me." Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-AK) said, "The vote of this senator is not for sale and neither is the vote of the people of Arkansas." But outsiders rule. Sharron Angle, GOP Senate Candidate in Nevada said, "We have completed the first step to taking back our U.S. Senate seat." Expensive elections, breakthroughs, and comebacks. What this week's primaries mean for Washington. And the Gulf oil spill turns into a deadly serious numbers game. Rep. Edward Markey (D-MS) said, "It's quite clear that BP has known that this is much more catastrophic right from the beginning." Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said, "It is very frustrating that over 50 days into this they still don't have a reliable estimate of how many oil they've released, how much oil is still out there." Coast Guard ADM. Thad Allen said, "I'm not going to declare victory on anything till I have absolute numbers." What changed and what stayed the same with the reporters covering the stories: John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Hundreds of millions of dollars being spent on the Gulf Coast disaster and on elections coast to coast, the winners, the losers, and the stalemates, tonight on Washington Week. Two California Republicans triumph. Meg Whitman, CA GOP Gubernatorial Candidate said, "Two businesswomen who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done." While some incumbents fall and some survive. Nevada Gov. Jim Gibbons said, "I stand here humbled and grateful for the four years that the people of Nevada gave me." Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-AK) said, "The vote of this senator is not for sale and neither is the vote of the people of Arkansas." But outsiders rule. Sharron Angle, GOP Senate Candidate in Nevada said, "We have completed the first step to taking back our U.S. Senate seat." Expensive elections, breakthroughs, and comebacks. What this week's primaries mean for Washington. And the Gulf oil spill turns into a deadly serious numbers game. Rep. Edward Markey (D-MS) said, "It's quite clear that BP has known that this is much more catastrophic right from the beginning." Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said, "It is very frustrating that over 50 days into this they still don't have a reliable estimate of how many oil they've released, how much oil is still out there." Coast Guard ADM. Thad Allen said, "I'm not going to declare victory on anything till I have absolute numbers." What changed and what stayed the same with the reporters covering the stories: John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post.

Can the power of music make the brain come alive? Throughout his career Dr. Oliver Sacks, neurologist and acclaimed author, whose book, "Awakenings" was made into an Oscar-nominated feature film starring Robin Williams and Robert De Niro, has encountered myriad patients who are struggling to cope with debilitating medical conditions. While their ailments vary, many have one thing in common: an appreciation for the therapeutic effects of music. NOVA follows four individuals--two of whom are Sacks's case studies--and even peers into Sacks's own brain, to investigate music's strange, surprising, and still unexplained power over the human mind.

A biography of America's seventh president, ANDREW JACKSON: GOOD, EVIL AND THE PRESIDENCY explores whether Americans should celebrate Jackson or apologize for him. Viewers discover that Jackson fought in the Revolutionary War when he was 13 years old and that he used the skills learned in battle to kill a man over a gambling debt; that Jackson led the American army to the most surprising victory in its history in the Battle of New Orleans, but that he also launched an unauthorized invasion of Florida; that Jackson was the first great champion of the common white man and owned more than a hundred black Americans; that Jackson dramatically expanded the United States and did so by brutally wresting vast regions of the south from Native Americans; that Jackson, in one of the boldest political strokes in history, founded the Democratic Party, yet was viewed by his enemies as an American Napoleon. The film concludes with the words of Jackson's first biographer, James Parton: "Andrew Jackson was a patriot, and a traitor. He was the greatest of generals, and wholly ignorant of the art of war. He was the most candid of men, and capable of the profoundest dissimulation. He was a democratic autocrat, an urbane savage, an atrocious saint." Martin Sheen narrates.

Commando raids, an uncontrollable oil spill, an economy that can't rebound fast enough, and political missteps here, there, and everywhere, tonight on Washington Week. Is anything going right? Oil continues to gush from the ocean floor. President Barack Obama said, "Right now, stopping this oil spill and containing its damage is necessarily the top priority not just of my administration, but I think of the entire country." Gov. Bobby Jindal (R-LA) said, "Every day they wait, every day they make us wait. We're losing our battle to protect our coast." Tony Hayward, CEO, BP OIL said, "I'd like my life back. So there's no one who wants this thing done more than I do." A high sea standoff forces the U.S. to mediate newly inflamed tensions between Israel and the Palestinians. Israeli Prime Min. Benjamin Netanyahu said, "Israel should not be held to a double standard. The Jewish state has a right to defend itself, just like any other state." Dr. Ghassan Al-Khateeb, Palestinian Government Spokesperson said, "We think that Israel should be held accountable for this crime and should be punished." Secretary of State Hillary Clinton said, "The situation in Gaza is unsustainable and unacceptable." The economy adds new jobs, but not enough of them. President Obama said, "While we recognize that our recovery is still in its early stages and that there're going to be ups and downs in the months ahead, things never go completely in a smooth line." And the White House political shop stumbles, again. What's a president to do? We assess the challenges and the distractions with the reporters covering the week: Peter Baker of the New York Times, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine and Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times.

Hundreds of millions of dollars being spent on the Gulf Coast disaster and on elections coast to coast, the winners, the losers, and the stalemates, tonight on Washington Week. Two California Republicans triumph. Meg Whitman, CA GOP Gubernatorial Candidate said, "Two businesswomen who know how to create jobs, balance budgets and get things done." While some incumbents fall and some survive. Nevada Gov. Jim Gibbons said, "I stand here humbled and grateful for the four years that the people of Nevada gave me." Sen. Blanche Lincoln (D-AK) said, "The vote of this senator is not for sale and neither is the vote of the people of Arkansas." But outsiders rule. Sharron Angle, GOP Senate Candidate in Nevada said, "We have completed the first step to taking back our U.S. Senate seat." Expensive elections, breakthroughs, and comebacks. What this week's primaries mean for Washington. And the Gulf oil spill turns into a deadly serious numbers game. Rep. Edward Markey (D-MS) said, "It's quite clear that BP has known that this is much more catastrophic right from the beginning." Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal said, "It is very frustrating that over 50 days into this they still don't have a reliable estimate of how many oil they've released, how much oil is still out there." Coast Guard ADM. Thad Allen said, "I'm not going to declare victory on anything till I have absolute numbers." What changed and what stayed the same with the reporters covering the stories: John Dickerson of Slate Magazine and CBS News, Alexis Simendinger of National Journal, and Karen Tumulty of the Washington Post.

"William Kunstler: Disturbing the Universe" examines the life of this radical attorney from a surprising angle. Kunstler's two daughters from his second marriage grew up lionizing a man already famous for his historic civil rights and anti-war cases. Then, in their teens, they began to be disillusioned by a stubborn man who continued representing some of the most reviled defendants in America -- this time accused rapists and terrorists. In this intimate biography, the Emily and Sarah Kunstler seek to recover the real story of what made their late father one of the most beloved, and hated, lawyers in America.

Korean War veterans recount their memories of America in the late 1940s and early 1950s, when young men from all over the country were being shipped off to defend South Korea against the advancing Red Army in the north. UNFORGETTABLE: THE KOREAN WAR recalls the "un-won" war that never ended...no one even wanted to call it a war: it was "the Korean conflict" or a "police action." Finally, it was called the Forgotten War. No matter the name, the Korean War killed tens of thousands of U.S. soldiers and affected many more lives at home.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

"William Kunstler: Disturbing the Universe" examines the life of this radical attorney from a surprising angle. Kunstler's two daughters from his second marriage grew up lionizing a man already famous for his historic civil rights and anti-war cases. Then, in their teens, they began to be disillusioned by a stubborn man who continued representing some of the most reviled defendants in America -- this time accused rapists and terrorists. In this intimate biography, the Emily and Sarah Kunstler seek to recover the real story of what made their late father one of the most beloved, and hated, lawyers in America.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

Jailhouse Chaplain: "As chaplains we absorb people's sadness, their brokenness, their depth of spiritual despair," says Dennis Gibbs, an Episcopal chaplain at the Twin Towers Correctional Facility in Los Angeles. "In many ways we hold for these inmates what they cannot hold for themselves." Adoption Ethics: "The concern I have with a lot of families is that when they adopt they may not always see it as a permanency nowadays, because there's a lot of availability to disrupt adoptions," says Dr. Ronald Federici, a neuropsychologist.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Cuttlefish are some of the strangest animals on the planet. These shape-shifting creatures can hypnotize their prey, impersonate the opposite sex and even kill with lightning fast speed. More accomplished masters of disguise than any chameleon, they have a remarkable ability to change their skin color - even their shape - to blend into most any background. They have the largest brain-to-body ratio of all the invertebrates. But are they capable of learning and remembering complex tasks? With beautiful underwater footage and in-depth expert interviews, NOVA gets up close and personal with these bizarre and amazing animals.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

Jailhouse Chaplain: "As chaplains we absorb people's sadness, their brokenness, their depth of spiritual despair," says Dennis Gibbs, an Episcopal chaplain at the Twin Towers Correctional Facility in Los Angeles. "In many ways we hold for these inmates what they cannot hold for themselves." Adoption Ethics: "The concern I have with a lot of families is that when they adopt they may not always see it as a permanency nowadays, because there's a lot of availability to disrupt adoptions," says Dr. Ronald Federici, a neuropsychologist.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

Jailhouse Chaplain: "As chaplains we absorb people's sadness, their brokenness, their depth of spiritual despair," says Dennis Gibbs, an Episcopal chaplain at the Twin Towers Correctional Facility in Los Angeles. "In many ways we hold for these inmates what they cannot hold for themselves." Adoption Ethics: "The concern I have with a lot of families is that when they adopt they may not always see it as a permanency nowadays, because there's a lot of availability to disrupt adoptions," says Dr. Ronald Federici, a neuropsychologist.

The continuing oil disaster. Apologies everywhere, but not a solution to be found. Plus, the latest on debates on Afghanistan and from the Supreme Court, tonight on Washington Week. Rep. Bart Stupak (D-MI) said, "Truth, the whole truth, nothing but the truth the matter pending before this committee?" Tony Hayward, CEO of BP (British Petroleum) answered, "I do." The oil disaster debate moves to Washington with dramatic hearings." Mr. Hayward said, "If this investigation determines that anytime anyone put cost before safety, then we will take action." Rep. Phil Gingrey (R-GA) said, "Well, with all due respect, Mr. Hayward, I think you're copping out." Mr. Tony Hayward responded, "With respect, sir, we drill hundreds of wells a year all around the world." Sen. Michael Burgess (R - TX) said, "Yes, I know. That's what's scaring me right now." Partial payback. President Barack Obama said, "I'm pleased to announce that BP has agreed to set aside $20 billion to pay claims for damages resulting from this spill." And wild pitches. Carl-Henric Svanberg, Chairman of BP said, "We care about the small people." Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) said, "It is a tragedy of the first proportion that a private corporation can be subjected to what I would characterize as a shakedown, in this case a $20-billion shakedown. I want to apologize for that misconstrued -- misconstruction." Yet the oil continues to flow. John Young, Chairman Jefferson Parish Council, Louisiana said, "We're in a war, and at this point in time unfortunately we're losing the battle." While a separate debate rages about a real war. Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "This is June, 2010. Are we winning?" Gen. David Petraeus said, "Winning to a counterinsurgent center means making progress. And in that regard I think that we are winning." And the Supreme Court weighs in on text messaging. Covering the week Charles Babington of the Associated Press, Juliet Eilperin of the Washington Post, Doyle McManus of the Los Angeles Times, and Joan Biskupic of USA Today.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

The most memorable symbol of the revolution that swept across Europe two decades ago is the November 1989 opening of the Berlin Wall after 28 years. The Wall--A World Divided tells those dramatic events from the perspective of ordinary East Germans whose lives were caught up in the wheels of Cold War politics. And it presents the lesser-known story of how the autumn of 1989 set the stage for three world leaders--George Bush, Mikhail Gorbachev, and Helmut Kohl--to come together and guide the completely unanticipated spiraling series of events that ended the Cold War.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

"William Kunstler: Disturbing the Universe" examines the life of this radical attorney from a surprising angle. Kunstler's two daughters from his second marriage grew up lionizing a man already famous for his historic civil rights and anti-war cases. Then, in their teens, they began to be disillusioned by a stubborn man who continued representing some of the most reviled defendants in America -- this time accused rapists and terrorists. In this intimate biography, the Emily and Sarah Kunstler seek to recover the real story of what made their late father one of the most beloved, and hated, lawyers in America.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to email messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

Long before the days of giant theme parks, the United States had many, many amusement parks where families gathered for a cool escape on a hot summer day. This program celebrates these pre-Disney parks, visiting places like Playland in Rye, New York; Holiday World in Santa Claus, Indiana; and California's Santa Cruz Beach Boardwalk, where vacationers can still reach for the brass ring on the merry-go-round. The special also checks out some old wooden roller coasters and other classic rides.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

FRONTLINE/WORLD investigates one of its own stories, "The Play Pump," which promised to use a merry-go-round and the power of children to help meet the dire need for fresh water in southern Africa. After FRONTLINE/WORLD first aired the story in 2005, major donors in the United States -- and the U.S. government itself -- launched a multimillion-dollar campaign to install the device in thousands of African schools and villages. Now, correspondent Amy Costello investigates what happened to those communities, as the promise of the PlayPump fell short and the device's biggest American boosters began to back away from a technology they had once championed. Also in this episode: Adam Davidson of NPR's "Planet Money" team looks at a new idea in post-disaster relief being tried out in Haiti and a profile of a painter who travels to the remote jungles of West Papua in search of the "clever bird."

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

Informed Consent and Medical Research: "Blood samples are sacred," says Carletta Tilousi, a Havasupai Indian, and "a major part of our spiritual, cultural, and religious identity." The tribe was recently involved in a dispute that raised ethical questions about research subjects and the use of genetic material. Norman Fischer on Meditation: "As the mind becomes a little more quiet, the sacredness of everything, within and without, becomes clear," says Norman Fischer, a practicing Jew and a Zen Buddhist priest who has been teaching meditation for over 30 years. Norman Fischer Extended Interview: "There's no such thing as a hermetically sealed religion or culture. We human beings have been talking to each other since the beginning, and every time we talk to each other we change each other."

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

FRONTLINE/WORLD investigates one of its own stories, "The Play Pump," which promised to use a merry-go-round and the power of children to help meet the dire need for fresh water in southern Africa. After FRONTLINE/WORLD first aired the story in 2005, major donors in the United States -- and the U.S. government itself -- launched a multimillion-dollar campaign to install the device in thousands of African schools and villages. Now, correspondent Amy Costello investigates what happened to those communities, as the promise of the PlayPump fell short and the device's biggest American boosters began to back away from a technology they had once championed. Also in this episode: Adam Davidson of NPR's "Planet Money" team looks at a new idea in post-disaster relief being tried out in Haiti and a profile of a painter who travels to the remote jungles of West Papua in search of the "clever bird."

Do we have the right to end our lives if life itself becomes unbearable, or when we enter the late-stages of painful, terminal illness? The questions, debated for centuries, have only grown more pressing in recent years as medical technology has allowed us to live longer lives, and several U.S. states have legalized physician-assisted suicide. With unique access to Dignitas, the Swiss non-profit that has helped over one thousand people die since 1998, Academy award-winning filmmaker John Zaritsky offers a revealing look a couple facing the most difficult decision of their lives--and lets us see for ourselves as one Chicago native makes the trip to Switzerland for what will become the last day of his life.

For the first time on television, NOVA exposes the hidden world of the high-tech, 21st century eavesdropping carried out by the National Security Agency or NSA. Today, the NSA is the world's largest intelligence agency, three times the size of the CIA and far more secret. Its mission is to eavesdrop on the world - from cell phones in Europe to pay phones in Afghanistan to e-mail messages from Pakistan to Baghdad. But since 9/11, it has also turned its giant ear inward, listening in without warrant on thousands of American citizens, many of whom are on the government's secret watch list, now more than half-a-million names long. Based on the latest bestseller by journalist James Bamford, INSIDE THE SPY FACTORY is a gripping investigation of the NSA from its tragic failures leading up to the 9/11 attacks to its secret listening rooms currently installed in the nation's telecom networks.

FRONTLINE/WORLD investigates one of its own stories, "The Play Pump," which promised to use a merry-go-round and the power of children to help meet the dire need for fresh water in southern Africa. After FRONTLINE/WORLD first aired the story in 2005, major donors in the United States -- and the U.S. government itself -- launched a multimillion-dollar campaign to install the device in thousands of African schools and villages. Now, correspondent Amy Costello investigates what happened to those communities, as the promise of the PlayPump fell short and the device's biggest American boosters began to back away from a technology they had once championed. Also in this episode: Adam Davidson of NPR's "Planet Money" team looks at a new idea in post-disaster relief being tried out in Haiti and a profile of a painter who travels to the remote jungles of West Papua in search of the "clever bird."

Korean War veterans recount their memories of America in the late 1940s and early 1950s, when young men from all over the country were being shipped off to defend South Korea against the advancing Red Army in the north. UNFORGETTABLE: THE KOREAN WAR recalls the "un-won" war that never ended...no one even wanted to call it a war: it was "the Korean conflict" or a "police action." Finally, it was called the Forgotten War. No matter the name, the Korean War killed tens of thousands of U.S. soldiers and affected many more lives at home.

The most memorable symbol of the revolution that swept across Europe two decades ago is the November 1989 opening of the Berlin Wall after 28 years. The Wall--A World Divided tells those dramatic events from the perspective of ordinary East Germans whose lives were caught up in the wheels of Cold War politics. And it presents the lesser-known story of how the autumn of 1989 set the stage for three world leaders--George Bush, Mikhail Gorbachev, and Helmut Kohl--to come together and guide the completely unanticipated spiraling series of events that ended the Cold War.

Stanley McChrystal is out. David Petraeus is in. What was the ousted general thinking? And what happens now? We tackle those questions tonight on Washington Week. President Barack Obama said, "I welcome debate among my team, but I won't tolerate division." Adm. Mike Mullen said, "We do not have the right nor should we ever assume the prerogative to cast doubt upon the ability or mock the motives of our civilian leaders, elected or appointed." Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) said, "I've been a military officer most of my adult life and there's lines you can't cross. Those lines were crossed." There he goes. Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL) said, "I think Petraeus is a brilliant choice. I think he is the guy who clearly is schooled in counterinsurgency." Here he comes. As the war in Afghanistan rages, the President gets a commander-in-chief moment. And just as he leaves for an international economic meeting in Canada today, Congress reaches agreement on Wall Street reform. Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA) said, "With the votes of the House and Senate I declare the bill passed and the conference committee is now adjourned." And not a moment too soon, as polls show the president's approval slipping and Republicans get good news in South Carolina. Nikki Haley, GOP Candidate for South Carolina Governor: This is the movement about the idea of government being open and accountable to the people. Setting the stage for critical midterm elections. Covering the week: Martha Raddatz of ABC News, Michael Duffy of Time Magazine, Eamon Javers of CNBC, and James Barnes of National Journal.

Program #	109 - The Ozarks Greatest Hits
Production Date	October 2006
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Music remains a time-honored tradition in the Ozarks. Early settlers from many countries brought their own unique forms of music to the region, evolving into diverse sounds and styles throughout the decades. In the wonderfully descriptive words of historian and author Wayne Glenn, the Ozarks region "is the home of opera and oprys, of bluegrass and chamber ensembles, of folk and rock, of jazz and Jew's harps! The Ozarks region is also home for many acclaimed and well-known musicians. Wayne Glenn provides an entertaining and informative overview of the history of music in the Ozarks since the 1800s, highlighting many of the region's significant musicians and entertainers and their accomplishments.

Program #	119 - The Neosho National Fish Hatchery
Production Date	October 2006
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Chris Nagle
Description	The Ozarks is rich in unique and extraordinary places. One of these is the Neosho National Fish Hatchery in Neosho, Missouri. Established in 1888, the facility is the oldest operating Federal fish hatchery in the country. The Neosho National Fish Hatchery is widely recognized for its success in protecting the endangered blind Ozark cavefish and raising endangered pallid sturgeon. However, these efforts are only part of the facility's mission and success. In addition to other fish research and propagation, the hatchery also provides environmental education and many viewing opportunities for the public. More than 45,000 people visit the facility each year. David Hendrix, Hatchery Manager, provides a tour of the facility and explanation of the work accomplished there.

Production Date	December 2007
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	One of the key elements in the revitalization of Springfield's center city is the development of the Jordan Valley Park. The idea to have public space within the center city area, to create a sense of place and a sense of community, came from the citizens involved in Vision 20/20, which sought to develop a long-term vision for the city. Jan Horton discusses the origin and on-going evolution of Jordan Valley Park, a park that has been referred to as a "grand civic gesture."

Production Date	October 2009
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Steve Wynn
Description	At the end of World War Two, a series of historic and high profile tribunals took place in Nuremberg, Germany. In these, Allie representatives from the United States, Great Britain, France and the Soviet Union placed high ranking Nazi officials on trial. Seven of these men were sentenced to imprisonment in Berlin's Spandau Prison, an institution that was unique not only for its inmates, but also for its post-war organization and administration. Ozarks veteran Robert Owens provides his unique insight of these historic inmates as an Army guard at the prison.

Program Number	155 – Owned and Operated: Meyer Communications and Broadcasting in the Ozarks
Production Date	October 2009
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Steve Wynn
Description	Broadcasting in America continues to change at a rapid and sometimes confusing pace. Technologies are constantly changing as viewers experience increased quality and broadcasters compete for audiences. There was a time when local television and radio stations were primarily locally owned and closely identified with individual communities. This has changed too as local stations are often owned by out-of-town and sometimes large corporations. Now missing is the local pride and ownership that so strongly connected stations and communities together, resulting in enhanced identities for both. In the Ozarks there remains a strong, locally-owned, family broadcast organization—Meyer Communications. Together, Ken and Jane Meyer successfully operated both television and radio stations, bringing many broadcasts firsts to the Ozark and Springfield community, Station owner Ken Meyer shares local broadcast history through his long-time and uniquely first person experiences.

Program #	44 - The Arkansas Ozarks
Production Date	July 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	The Ozarks and her people provide a rich setting of images and perceptions. Hill Folks: A History of Arkansas Ozarkers and Their Image , offers perhaps the first in-depth historical treatment of the Ozarks. Written by Dr. Brooks Blevins, the book traces the region's history from the early nineteenth century through the end of the 20 th century. Hill Folks examines a wide range of Ozarks social life including the development of agriculture, the rise and fall of extractive industries, the settlement of the countryside, decline of rural communities, migration and the growth of tourism in the region. Dr. Blevins, Director of Regional Studies at Lyon College in Batesville, Arkansas, discusses the development and perpetuation of the Ozark image versus the reality behind that image.

Program #	46 - Ozarks Spirits: Moonshiners and Revenuers
Production Date	July 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Moonshine or "white lightning," is a broad name given to illegally distilled alcohol. Moonshiners took pride in their craft but produced their brew without the benefit of a license or payment of taxes on their product. Certain federal agents known as "revenuers" naturally frowned upon this practice. The making of moonshine or corn liquor, was not uncommon in the Ozarks. Nor was it as common a practice as sometimes portrayed in the stereotypical characterization of the Ozarks hillbilly guzzling "corn squeesins." Susan Young, community outreach coordinator at the Shiloh Museum of Ozark History in Springdale, Arkansas, provides a look at the colorful history of moonshining in the Ozarks.

Program #	47 - Taney County Stories
Production Date	August 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	There are many ways to learn about the towns, cities and counties in the Ozarks. Libraries, historical museums, books, magazines, and the Internet are a few of the resources providing insight and information about a community. The U.S. Census Bureau provides population information, and state and county archives provide essential records such as birth and death certificates. Perhaps the best way to learn about the heart and soul of a community is to listen to the stories about its people. A good listener, writer and storyteller can reveal what truly makes a community unique. Gifted writer and storyteller Leon Combs shares his extensive knowledge of Berryville and Taney County, and his extraordinary ability to portray the spirit of the people he writes and talks about.

Program #	48 - Shape Note Music: Heavenly Sounds
Production Date	October 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Music traditions play a large role in our Ozarks heritage. One of these traditions is shape note music, a style of singing using the fa-sol-la solemnization, the singing of syllables; to teach part-music to otherwise musically untrained people. Rural singing schools developed and greatly influenced gospel singing in the region. Like many rural traditions, shape note music struggles to survive. However, the rediscovery of this unique style has led to its spread to the southern United States, parts of the Midwest, and to the Pacific Northwest. Dr. Drew Beisswenger explains this traditional and fascinating approach to teaching music.

Production Date	August 1999
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Folklore is the traditional beliefs, legends and practices of a people that are often passed down orally between generations. As such, folklore can be easily lost and forgotten. Max Hunter, a traveling salesman and folklorist from Springfield Missouri, spent much of his life recording traditional songs and musicians he met through his travels. Preserving Folklore and Traditional Music and Making it Accessible features Dr. Michael Murray and explains how Southwest Missouri State University is using information technology to preserve and make available Mr. Hunter's valuable collection.

Program #	54 - Ozarks Hospitality: Tourism in Ozarks Mountain Country
Production Date	August 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Tourism and recreation is a multi-billion dollar industry in the Ozarks. The area's natural beauty and leisure opportunities have brought millions of visitors to the Ozarks each year and those visitors have impacted everything from the region's natural environment to the perception people have of the Ozarks and its residents. One of the most popular tourist attractions in the Ozarks is Silver Dollar City, located near Branson, Missouri. Co-founder and co-owner Peter Herschend is well known for his efforts to promote tourism and education in Missouri, develop area roads, improving environmental awareness, and championing such community projects as Branson Country Spring and Ozarks Mountain Christmas. Program #	55 - Lessons From the Past: History and Life in a Missouri One-Room School House
Production Date	June 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Many Ozark residents have fond memories of attending or teaching in area rural schools, commonly called one-room schoolhouses. Improved transportation, roads, and economies of size resulted in larger consolidated school districts and the end to the country school. While educational opportunities and resources have improved, one-room schoolhouses and their teachers are always acknowledged for the important role they played in educating Ozark residents. Dr. David Hough, Dean of the College of Education at Southwest Missouri State University, provides an explanation of the history and development of public education in Missouri, and a tribute to the role one-room schoolhouses in providing education for the children of rural Missouri. Former teachers share their unique first-hand accounts of everyday experiences in these classic educational institutions. Viewers are also treated to a special look at unique artifacts from this historical period.

Program #	57 - Route 66: Springfield and the Mother Road
Production Date	August 2002
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Route 66. "The Mother Road". Perhaps no other stretch of highway rivals the sense of romance, adventure or intrigue than this remarkable roadway. Commissioned a national highway in 1926, Route 66 made its way from Chicago across eight states to the Pacific Ocean. It has been immortalized in a television series, documentaries, songs, stories and folklore. Its popularity is enduring as travelers continue to seek the Route 66 experience. "The Main Street of America" weaved its way through the Ozarks, and during its heyday helped develop a thriving tourist industry that introduced the Ozarks to travelers from across the country. Join well known Route 66 author and historian Skip Curtis as he describes the origin of this magical road and takes us on a "road trip" to some of Springfield's classic "66" sites.

Production Date	June 2003
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	In his book Country Lawyers , Dr. Donald Landon states that a century ago almost all lawyers were country lawyers. Along with physicians, these individuals were often the most knowledgeable and active in community affairs. Dr. Landon observes that lawyers in rural settings are much more likely to be active in community organizations and much more likely to seek political office than their counterparts in urban areas. Emory Melton, Attorney at Law in Cassville, Missouri, is a fifth generation native of Barry County and served six terms in the Missouri Senate, providing a unique perspective on the law as well as the role of public service.

Program #	66 - Ozarks Traditional Women Fiddlers
Production Date	August 2003
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Music has always played an important role in our developing Ozarks culture. Early settlers often relaxed and entertained themselves with music and styles brought from their native homes. Perhaps no other instrument played a more significant role in the evolution of Ozarks music than the fiddle. Even today, the fiddle remains a favorite of area musicians and is the instrument most often associated with Ozarks music. Until recent years, fiddle music was a man's occupation or pursuit. Fiddle playing was considered un-ladylike, and in some circles fiddle music was considered as evil. Violet Hensley, Violet Long, and Ruth Hawkins are long-time fiddle players who demonstrate time-honored traditions of fiddle music.

Program #	68 - Tumbling Creek Cave
Production Date	June 2003
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Karst features such as caves, sinks, and natural bridges are common throughout the Ozarks. Limestone and dolomite are the underlying bedrock in the Ozarks and both are highly susceptible to groundwater. Over millions of years, cracks and crevices in this bedrock have allowed water to dissolve these foundations and create these karst features. Because of this natural erosion, the Ozarks has literally thousands of caves. These caves are often characterized by a fragile ecosystem and are under increasing threat from environmental problems such as groundwater pollution. Hydrologist Tom Aley discusses the many issues that make protection of fragile cave environments so complex and difficult.

Program #	74 - The Orphan Train
Production Date	November 2003
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Between the years of 1853 and 1929, an estimated 250,000 orphans were relocated from major east coast cities such as New York City, to new homes throughout the United States and Canada. These children traveled on what became popularly called Orphan Trains. At the peak of the Orphan Train movement, 3,000-4,000 children a year were traveling west. Records of the New York Children's Aid Society documents more than 6,000 of these orphans relocating to Missouri. Mary Ellen Johnson, of the Orphan Train Heritage Society of America, considers the Orphan Train riders as the first documented foster children in the United States. She provides an overview of this historical program and impact it had on children raiding the trains and Ozarks residents. Also featured is Elizabeth Daniel, who shares her unique experiences as an Orphan Train rider.

Program #	75 - Historic Buildings: Fresh Starts
Production Date	November 2003
Air Time, Date
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Passages of time often sadly result in the decay and loss of historic structures. Many older buildings are destroyed by fire, neglect, or simply become impractical to repair or utilize as a result of age. However, often times these area and architectural landmarks are acquired by individuals who remodel them for new uses. Joanne Abbey, Manager of the Ozarks Heritage Welcome Center in West Plains, Missouri, explains how area entrepreneurs are converting unique and historic buildings into bed and breakfast establishments. Owners of these businesses provide a tour and explanation about how they creatively adapted these structures and ensured their existence and enjoyment by future visitors.

Laura Ingalls Wilder: The Life Stories of a Pioneer Girl

Program Number	Laura Ingalls Wilder: The Life Stories of a Pioneer Girl
Production Date	April 2010
Air Time, Date	4/29/2010 8pm
Producer	Tom Carter
Director	Tom Carter
Description	Laura Ingalls Wilder remains one of America's most well-known and beloved authors. Her popular "Little House" books, reflecting her life experiences, are favorites with young and older readers alike. The stories of her family and their travels leading to Mansfield, Missouri, document an American era of settlement in a uniquely personal and enduring way. Her books are respected for their historical perspective and celebrated for their loving human interest qualities. Ozarks Public Television helped create this locally-produced program that features re-enactments and a rich collection of archival images and documents as well as showcasing the historic Mansfield, MO site where Laura settled. Award-winning actress and Missouri State University alum Tess Harper narrates the program.

The Gillioz Movie Palace: Springfield's Theatre Beautiful

Program Number	The Gillioz Movie Palace: Springfield's Theatre Beautiful
Production Date	April 2010
Air Time, Date	4/1/2010 8pm
Producer	Jamie Bihlmeyer
Director	Jamie Bihlmeyer
Description	This locally-produced film from Missouri State University's College of Arts and Letters is a history of the Gillioz Theatre, Springfield's restored vaudeville movie palace as told by its greatest fans: former employees from decades past, volunteers, and members of the Springfield Land Preservation Trust who spearheaded this great labor of love that resulted in the theatre's revival. Highlights of the film include many unique first-person remembrances including the 1926 grand opening and the story of the struggle to save this community treasure from destruction after it's closure in 1980. Vaudeville-style singers and dancers perform on the renovated stage during the celebration of its grand reopening in 2006. This historic film captures the results of a community that had the foresight to invest in its past and preserve its rich history for future generations.
