Episode Title: The Child Cases
Length: 60 minutes
Airdate: 7/3/2011 2:00:00 AM
Service: PBS
Format: Documentary
Segment Length: 00:00:00

When a child dies under suspicious circumstances, abuse is often suspected. That's what happened in the case of six-month-old Isis Vas, whose death was deemed "a clear-cut and classic" case of child abuse, sending a man named Ernie Lopez to prison for 60 years. But now a Texas judge has moved to overturn Lopez's conviction, and new questions are being asked about the quality of expert testimony in this and many other similar cases. In this joint investigation with ProPublica and NPR, FRONTLINE correspondent A.C. Thompson unearths more than 20 child death cases in which people were jailed on medical evidence--involving abuse, assault, and "shaken baby syndrome"--that was later found unreliable or flat-out wrong. Are death investigators being properly trained for child cases? Also in this magazine hour: Correspondent Martin Smith (College Inc.) continues to investigate for-profit colleges, this time focusing on their aggressive recruitment of veterans from Iraq and Afghanistan. Are the for-profits making promises that they can't keep?

This week, guest host Maria Hinojosa fills in for Alison Stewart. On this week's episode, our ongoing collaboration with VII Photo Agency presents a portrait of one remarkable symphony orchestra that's thriving in Congo's capital city, Kinshasa. Through the devastation of war and violence that Congo has undergone throughout the years, photojournalist Marcus Bleasdale discovers how people can flourish even in the midst of tragedy.

Also, we look at a special program at OSHA that allows certain work sites with solid health and safety records to become exempt from regular inspections. The Center for Public Integrity and iWatch News found that, over the last decade, there were at least 80 fatalities at dozens of VPP sites, but the majority remain in the program.

And: We look at the historic election in South Sudan and tell the story of Salva Dut, a Sudanese "lost boy" who returned to Sudan to help bring clean water to his hometown.

Legal analyst Jami Floyd also returns to discuss the lessons learned from the Dominique Strauss-Kahn case.

FRONTLINE's primetime monthly newsmagazine returns with three new stories, leading with a timely report from the frontlines of marijuana legalization in California. The bulk of the marijuana consumed in the United States used to come across the border from Mexico, Canada, and elsewhere. Now, more than half of it is believed to be home grown in California, where an enormous black market has emerged under the cover of the state's medical marijuana law. With more than a third of all states now experimenting with some form of legalization and decriminalization--and several California counties attempting to openly regulate pot production--FRONTLINE and The Center for Investigative Reporting team up to investigate the country's oldest, largest, and most wide-open marijuana market. Is the federal government now moving to shut it down? Also this hour: New Yorker writer and surgeon Atul Gawande reports on a doctor in Camden, New Jersey, who actually seeks out the community's sickest-and most expensive-patients. Dr. Jeffrey Brenner and his team are pioneering a practice called "hotspotting," in which medical care is focused on the hardest-to-treat to improve their health and dramatically reduce costs.
