 Detailed Description: Brett Edwards reports from Vincennes about the construction in the city. With the Second Street project completed, Mayor Yochum explained the big plans in store for the downtown district. A group called INVIN hopes to renovate the two theaters and potentially repurpose them and open their doors in 2016. The addition of Pioneer Oil last year will spark more downtown development. One resident described it as a renaissance happening in the City of Vincennes.

 Detailed Description: It's rated one of the busiest airports in Indiana but for those who don't work in the aviation industry the Terre Haute Airport is probably not on your radar. Sadie All met with officials today to find out what's up and coming. With a wide array of flight business the focus now is to really hone in on the airport's community aspect. That's what today's gathering was about. The Terre Haute International Airport serves as a home to businesses like Stark Industries, IU Lifeline, and Tri Aerospace as well as being the home base for the Air National Guard's 181st Intelligence Wing. Jeff Hauser stated that we really want to expand on taking advantage of our universities and a lot of our technological businesses. We want to get on that front edge of technology. Richard Baker, "Great economic growth in Terre Haute and we hope to take the partnerships we've started, the students we've put out into the field and other people reaching back to us for interns and employees for the future and grow that into more business." Wednesday's meeting also looks to some changes for the future, one being the exterior structure of the building. A name change is also in place. There is also a possibility for a restaurant at the airport. Director Jeff Hauser says with the east side of Terre Haute growing and the airport seeing up to 500 people daily, many are looking for a sit down eatery.

 Detailed Description: Abandoned homes are an eyesore in any neighborhood but they can also be dangerous. The City of Sullivan hopes to eliminate these dilapidated homes. Hazelmarie Anderson reports from the first demolition. The wrecking crew converged on South Broad Street in Sullivan to bring down the first blight house. Mayor Clint Lamb, (d) Sullivan: "Well, I think if you look around, it's raining progress in the City of Sullivan. Rain or shine we continue to move forward." And to keep things moving forward, Sullivan is using 1.2 million dollars from the state. The blight elimination program uses a portion of Indiana's hardest hit funds to knock down blighted and abandoned homes. While this is just the first of ten homes that are on the list for demolition, Mayor Lamb feels this is a step in the right direction. The next house on the list is at 716 North Main Street. It's been a burned out shell since this past August.

Detailed Description: The frigid weather requires more attention to detail when being outdoors. Emergency workers say to keep blankets, water, and extra clothes in the car. Also make sure the car is in good working order for the weather ahead. Always tell others where you're going should you have trouble. Keep your hands, ears, and face covered at all times. Watch for signs of frostbite which include redness in exposed areas of the skin, numbness, and pain. If you happen to get frostbite, warm yourself slowly. Warming too quickly could cause more damage. Most importantly, it is recommended that you stay indoors when you can.

Detailed Description: The natural migration of local turtles during warmer seasons poses a threat to their livelihood. That's due to a dangerous crossing near the Wabashiki Wildlife Area in West Terre Haute. The reptiles are very vulnerable as they try to cross the highway to get to their ultimate destination. For six years the Wabashiki Wildlife Research and Rescue Team has been keeping tabs on the turtles and moving them from the highway to their northbound destination at Lazy-I-Lake. The Indiana Department of Transportation bought fencing to go alongside the highway so that turtles' lives can be spared. INDOT paid entirely for the eight thousand feet of fencing but that doesn't mean the Research and Rescue Team will no longer patrol the area daily. They'll still be out collecting turtles stopped at the fence and relocating them to Lazy-I-Lake.

Detailed Description: Although the Vigo County Solid Waste Management District has only been around for about three years, they have taken on some pretty big projects. Cody Adams spoke to Kathy Kinney, Executive Director, about their latest endeavor. Last year the Solid Waste Management District partnered with Vigo County School Corporation to collect bottle caps. Those bottle caps were then collected and turned into benches and given back to the schools. The same company that creates those benches also makes trashcans. Kathy Kinney and the Solid Waste Management District were approached by the Bark Park at Fairbanks to see if they could make some sort of donation. That's when it was decided to donate the recycled trash cans made of bottle caps. They purchased five cans so far, two for the Bark Park, one for the annex building, one at the courthouse, and one at the juvenile center. Not only is it better for the environment obviously, but it's also a good way to remind people that there is a Solid Waste Management District. Kathy said she's been getting a lot of good feedback on the trash cans so you very well could see more in the future.

Detailed Description: Today the Chamber of Commerce hosted a city update with the mayor to inform local business how the city is doing. Cody Adams was on hand for the luncheon and reports that more than 100 people were in attendance. Mayor Bennett was very candid, discussing the city deficit as well as some struggles with the property tax caps. The biggest thing the Mayor stressed was to continue to build the infrastructure and bring more business to Terre Haute. Another topic of discussion was the Hulman Center Convention Center remodel. The Mayor stressed the importance of getting the project off the ground. The lengthiest discussion was the need for a trash fee since the city is losing money on trash services.

Detailed Description: A new development for the City of Terre Haute is gathering plenty of talk from the community. A 25 million dollar student housing project will replace the old Boys and Girls Club across Third Street from Indiana State University. The new student housing project, Annex 41, is coming from a private developer based out of Indianapolis. The unit will offer a variety of apartment options with 408 bedrooms along with a mix of fully furnished studio, two bedroom, and four bedroom apartments. The approximate 500 dollar monthly rent is competitive with other off-campus apartment buildings. One of this building's biggest draws might be its location near the Wabash River. Construction is expected to begin this fall with completion by fall semester of 2017.

Detailed Description: A new proposal in the Illinois Senate would give Governor Rauner full control on where to get the money to balance the budget. This is not sitting well with some Illinois citizens. Gabriel Gomez is a professor at Chicago State. He's seen his fair share of students leave the state because of lack of funding in state schools. Gomez says because of the budget impasse the campus doesn't have money to support map grants, pay salaries and to keep the doors open. During his budget address Governor Rauner gave lawmakers two choices, either his turnaround agenda or full control. Now lawmakers have proposed a bill that would give Governor Rauner the power to cut spending in all state agencies, including the legislative branch. The Unbalanced Budget Response Act would put everything on the table to help us balance our budget. He would be able to limit automatic yearly spending known as continuing appropriations, which set aside money for things including lawmaker salaries and pension payments. But Gomez says right now it's about the doing the right thing. The proposal would also give Rauner power to cut funding from anything in the budget except debt payments, general state aid to public schools, and early childhood education programs.

Detailed Description: Many people suffer from seasonal affective disorder, more commonly known as the Winter Blues. Sadie All talked with happiness enthusiasts and how some folks are improving their work spaces. Rebecca Moore, Educational Specialist for the Council on Domestic Abuse, has established an office routine to remain constant throughout the year. Moore was first introduced to the Happy Light when her sister was receiving chemotherapy and radiation treatment. The full spectrum UV light therapy lamp helped to boost her sister's energy and workplace effectiveness, something Moore wanted to personally try. The light therapy in turn increases Moore's productivity. Barbara Battista, Physician Assistant, states that for workplace wellness, we need to keep moving, not staying seated for too long. Sunlight, even if it is man-made is one vital component to boosting energy among other habits. Whenever we are in a better space, a better frame of mind, a better mood, we're more likely to reach out in service.

Detailed Description: Indiana Lawmakers are looking for ways to restrict the purchase of medicines that contain ephedrine or pseudoephedrine which is used to make meth. Senate Bill 80 would allow a pharmacist to refuse to sell ephedrine or pseudoephedrine to anyone suspected of meth production. But the proposal is causing some concern for the role the pharmacist would play. One Wabash Valley resident stated that it may be difficult for pharmacists to make the determination. Also up for consideration is Senate Bill 161. It too would place restrictions on who could buy cold medicines.

Detailed Description: This week is National Poison Prevention Week. More than two million poisonings are reported each year to poison control centers across the country. Hazelmarie Anderson reports that Congress made National Poison Prevention Week a proclamation in the 60's. More than 90% of poisonings occur in the home, and the majority of the non-fatal incidents occur in children younger than six years old. To protect these children, parents should take those extra precautions like locking up the cleaning supplies, or putting items that can harm a child out of hands reach. Union Hospital reports that at least once or twice every 24 hours they have some type of patient, usually a child presenting for an accidental ingestion. Children are very curious, they like colors, they like bottles, they like to play. They go into cabinets and they try nearly everything in their mouths. In a lot of these cases children get into medicine that belongs to a grandparent or another family member. Cleaning supplies are also a problem. So, while doing your spring cleaning, be diligent when handling those cleaning items and keeping them out of the reach of children.

Detailed Description: We have a scam alert senior citizens. Two young women are preying on retirement homes to make some quick cash. These particular scammers are in Texas but their scam can happen anywhere including right here in the valley. The retirement home says the women claimed to be granddaughters of a resident and from a nearby high school, collecting money for a band trip. Minutes later they come out of the apartment with a $250 dollar check and a victory dance. Later, the resident had second thoughts and cancelled the check. So far the pair has stolen hundreds of dollars from seniors. Police remind the public to always ask for an ID before giving money to solicitors. The Better Business Bureau urges you to "give, but give wisely." Never give cash to an unfamiliar charity. And if you pay with a check, make the check payable to the name of the organization not the individual who's collecting the money.

Detailed Description: Spring illness has hit pretty hard in the last couple of weeks. Symptoms vary from cough, cold, and allergies. Sadie All stopped by a local pharmacy to gauge the impact. Many people look forward to spring but others suffer by going outside. Ed Walker of Milburnq Pharmacy states that in the last two weeks the amount of people requesting or complaining about allergies has really increased, the sinus headaches, the runny nose. There's a lot of both flu and strep going around also. Clearly with all of these illnesses going around it's important to keep yourself healthy to prevent sickness. Pharmacist Walker suggests a good diet, plenty of vitamins especially vitamin c and zinc can help. To keep illness from spreading, practice good protective hygiene. That includes covering your cough, washing your hands, and sanitizing. Also avoid being around crowds. This last hint is especially for those who have weaker immune systems like the young and elderly.

Detailed Description: The 2015 ISTEP results are in and Tommy Pool reports on the results of lower test scores. But parents are cautioned to not worry too much. The 2015 ISTEP was based on new, more rigorous standards. Because of this change, education officials warn against comparing results to previous years. Statewide about 54% of students passed both the math and language arts exams. In the Wabash Valley, the results varied with some below 40% passing and others as high as 75%. Many districts are satisfied with the results. The Southwest Schools superintendent feels the numbers do not provide proper feedback. Many school districts say that while the results are sub-par, they do show that the new platform needs some work and the numbers provide suggestions on how to do so.

Detailed Description: A valley school district considers consolidation. The North Central Parke School Corporation held a public forum at Turkey Run High School. The board provided residents an update on the subject with two options, remain as is or consolidate. If consolidation is chosen, middle schoolers in the district would go to Turkey Run and all the high school students would attend Rockville. The elementary schools would remain the same. The public voiced several concerns and the board president said they'll do whatever is best for students. The board will hold a final public forum next month. It expects to vote on consolidation in May.

Detailed Description: Once combat wounded veterans return home and transition back into civilian life they typically don't get the recognition they deserve. But some local businesses are thanking the vets by extending a simple courtesy. Alyssa Andrews reports. Everyone is familiar with handicapped parking spaces, and for the most part, we've seen other signs designated for purposes such as media parking, food to-go, or pregnant mothers. But driving around town, you might notice a newer type of parking space dedicated to combat wounded soldiers. At Chili's, GM Dan Shipley shows us a sign that they put up just out of respect and consideration for all the men and women who have done service to our country through the military, and we just want to give back a little bit and show our appreciation for what they do.

The signs are issued by Wounded Warriors family support. Like this Chili's location, other businesses in the Wabash Valley made the decision to show their appreciation for Purple Heart recipients. I talked to an official from the Omaha-based organization about the parking initiative who said it is a simple process and that literally thousands of different businesses, cities, different counties, restaurants have done this. The signs are free to anyone who wants one in their parking lot. All you have to do to obtain a sign is fill out the online request form and your business can support the cause. There are an estimated 1.8 million Purple Heart recipients who could benefit from these parking signs.

Detailed Description: There is more activity at the Wabash Valley Fairgrounds. After renovations a couple of years ago, they are transitioning from winter events to a heavier spring and summer schedule. This weekend's big event is a custom car show with something for everyone. The recent renovations adding heating and air conditioning in the exhibit hall provides more opportunities for different events. This indoor custom auto show here this weekend is a prime example of that. Attracting displays that travel all over the country add value year-round. The facility manager says booking these extra events is huge for supplying the funding needed to maintain the fairgrounds for years to come. This exhibit hall was previously used for winter storage. So the renovations have already proven to be a smart move for the fairgrounds, both as a community-builder and financially.

K-9 assistance and safety is something their human partners don't take for granted but protection isn't always in the budget. Recently one community came together to help out. In Vermillion County, one volunteer for the Humane Society took funding matters in her own hands and began a Go Fund Me page for the five K-9's that serve the Parke County and Vermillion County Sheriff's Departments. In less than a week, ten donors have contributed $1500. That was enough to buy a vest for K-9 Byron of the Vermillion County Sheriff's Department. Detailed Description: Voting is a right that everybody has but not everyone has a ride to the voting polls. For some local primary voters that doesn't have to be a problem. Sadie All took a trip to Rides Mass Transit in Paris. Rides Mass Transit is in operation every Monday through Friday. Stationed in Paris, Illinois, it serves both Edgar and Clark Counties. The supervisor there tells us it's an affordable service on any day. Edgar County has already had a successful early voting turnout. As of yesterday, their average number of 500 early voters climbed to more than 700. The same can be said for Rides Mass Transits' "Rides to the Polls" event today. When I was there this morning, half-dozen voters had taken advantage of the service. That is a big increase compared to no voters using services last voting season. The polls will not close until 7 p.m. Central Time. Rides Mass Transit will be open until that time. Although this service requests a 24-hour notice if you'd like a ride to the polls, it's possible to accommodate voters with same day service.

Detailed Description: Life is sometimes a roller coaster ride and this is the case at a local gas station. Last week the Jiffy Mini Mart at 13th & Poplar sold a million-dollar winning lottery ticket. This morning a would-be thief wearing a black ski mask walked in, showed a gun, and demanded cash. The employees locked themselves in an office while the suspect fled. This is the fifth convenient store in Terre Haute targeted by robbers in the last couple of weeks, four of which have been Jiffy Mini Marts. Last week a robbery suspect fleeing police went onto Indiana State's campus. He was apprehended by ISU Police. Campus Police Chief Newport stated that campus and city police help each other as needed. The two departments also work together when crimes happen close to campus or when a suspect is a student or visitor.

Detailed Description: Local law enforcement stepped in before scary words could become deadly actions and now, three local students face some tough consequences. Brett Edwards reports of an incident at West Vigo Middle School. A teacher intercepted a hand-written note that contained the names of approximately thirty students. Beside each name was an insulting comment with some of the words being ugly, fat, and stupid. But it was the title of the note that raised alarm. The title said Kill You're Going to Learn Today. Ray Azar/VCSC Dir. of Student Services, "We believe the incident to be a matter of juvenile judgement gone wrong, and that it was intended to be a joke. However in this day and age we can't dismiss youthful pranks and we must take each case seriously." The three students who were arrested face charges of intimidation. Along with the criminal investigation that's underway the school district is also conducting an investigation. Once they determine the level of involvement of the individual students they'll decide on a school level punishment which could be as severe as expulsion.

Detailed Description: A good neighbor can make life a lot better, even when it comes to law enforcement. The Vigo County Jail has a chronic problem with over-crowding and one part of the fix involves near-by counties. Hazelmarie Anderson has details of the impact. With overpopulation a main concern at the Vigo County Jail, officials are looking to other counties to help ease the housing problem. The Vigo County Jail can hold 268 prisoners. Sheriff Greg Ewing told me they are always over capacity. It's been more than a decade since the Indiana Civil Liberties Union filed a lawsuit about the over-crowding. That forced the county to ship inmates to surrounding counties, all on the taxpayer's dollar. Last week they shipped more than 90 inmates to other facilities. Sheriff Ewing explained that he is currently working with the Vigo County Council on a long term plan for more space.

Public Service Announcements: In addition to the above programming WAWV broadcast public service announcements related to the following issues:
