Issue: opioid crisis

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There

Date: Jan 3 Time of day: 4:06pm Duration: 53min

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): In 2015, Sam Quinones wrote Dreamland the book that broke the news of America's opioid addiction epidemic and how the market had moved from prescription drugs like OxyContin to cheaper Mexican heroin. Late last year, Quinones updated the story in The Least of Us, a book about the industrialization of addiction through fentanyl

WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There
Date: Jan 4 Time of day: 4:06 pm Duration: 53 min
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Sam Quinones' book
The Least of Us described how fentanyl pills, mass manufactured in Mexico and marketed on social media have created huge new populations of addicts in America. Today, reporter Matthew Reisen of the Albuquerque Journal narrows the focus to the streets of New Mexico's biggest city where fentanyl is addicting new generations of people. Reisen talked with officers from the DEA and APD, with sellers and buyers of America's new king of addictive drugs.

Issue: public health
WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There
Date: Jan 10 Time of day: 4:06pm Duration: 53min
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): As the Omicron Variant moves from East to West across the country, the New Mexico healthcare system is bracing for a new wave of infections. The emergency care physician Clayton Dalton, who writes eloquently for The New Yorker, says his rural hospital is already over-stressed with a dwindling core of staff and fewer options to send patients to better-equipped hospitals. Dr. Dalton admits, the fact that almost all his most serious cases are people who chose to be unvaccinated makes everything harder.

Issue: climate change
WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There
Date: Jan 11 Time of day: 4:06 pm Duration: 53min
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): The term geo-engineering may sound generic, but actually it refers specifically to the concept of deflecting from Earth some solar rays to cool global warming. Environmental scientist Gernot Wagner's book Geo-Engineering: The Gamble looks at the perceived positive and negative effects of putting theory into practice. Good may not be good enough in itself and might distract from better ideas. One casualty might be New Mexico's 300-plus days of sparkling sunshine.

Issue: diversity in the media
WE RAN THE FOLLOWING PROGRAM TO ADDRESS IT (Title): Here and There
Date: Jan 17 Time of day: 4:06 pm Duration: 53 min
BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF PROGRAM (Format, participants, content, etc.): Two words sum up the American news media's treatment of African-Americans: "malign neglect." Both in hiring and in coverage, the representation of American communities of color on radio, TV and in print journalism has been underdone. So how to make up for it? Journalist and media literacy specialist Damaso Reyes says reparations are in order. But what does that mean? Reyes' answer is more nuanced than you might have assumed.
