DR. DOUG WIMER

BI-POLAR DISORDER.

((COPY))

THIS DISORDER USED TO BE CALLED MANIC DEPRESSION AND IT CAN BE A DEVASTATING ILLNESS IF NOT TREATED APPROPRIATELY. ALTHOUGH OLDER LITERATURE SUGGESTS THAT 1% OF ALL PEOPLE HAVE IT SOME EXPERTS NOW ESTIMATE THAT THE PREVALENCE MAY BE AS HIGH AS 5%. THAT'S 1 OUT OF EVERY 20 PEOPLE. WITH THE INCREASING SHORTAGE OF PSYCHIATRIC SPECIALISTS MANY PATIENTS WITH BIPOLAR DISORDER RELY ON THEIR PRIMARY CARE PROVIDERS TO RECOGNIZE AND TREAT IT. UNFORTUNATELY THE DISORDER FREQUENTLY GOES EITHER UNRECOGNIZED OR MISTREATED. ONE RECENT ARTICLE SUGGESTS THAT MORE THAN 60% OF BIPOLAR PATIENTS ARE INITIALLY MISDIAGNOSED AND THAT MOST SEE 4 PHYSICIANS BEFORE RECEIVING THE CORRECT DIAGNOSIS. MORE THAN 30% GO FOR 10 YEARS OR MORE PRIOR TO GETTING DIAGNOSED WITH BIPOLAR DISORDER. IT IS ESTIMATED THAT AS MANY AS 1 IN EVERY 5 DEPRESSED PATIENTS MAY ACTUALLY SUFFER FROM BIPOLAR DISORDER.

((QUESTION))

PERHAPS THE MAIN REASON THAT SO MANY PATIENTS WITH BIPOLAR DISORDER ARE NOT IDENTIFIED EARLY ON IS THAT THEIR INITIAL SYMPTOMS ARE OFTEN CONFUSED WITH DEPRESSION. THIS IS UNFORTUNATE SINCE MOST OF THE MEDICATIONS USED TO TREAT DEPRESSION CAN ACTUALLY MAKE BIPOLAR PATIENTS WORSE. BIPOLAR DISORDER IS CHARACTERIZED BY WIDE FLUCTUATIONS IN MOOD FROM VERY LOW OR DEPRESSED EMOTIONS TO VERY ELEVATED OR MANIC SPELLS. THE INITIAL EPISODE IS ALMOST ALWAYS DEPRESSION AND THE DEPRESSIVE EPISODES TEND TO BE MORE FREQUENT AND LAST LONGER THAN THE MANIC EPISODES.

((QUESTION))

THE MANIC EPISODES CAN BE QUITE STRIKING AND EASY TO RECOGNIZE WHILE THEY ARE OCCURRING BUT THEY MAY ALSO BE SHORT LIVED, SUBTLE, AND FAR BETWEEN

AND THEREFORE MAY NOT BE OBVIOUS. HOWEVER, THERE ARE SEVERAL KEYS TO THE PATIENT'S HISTORY THAT SHOULD BE ASKED ABOUT WHEN EVALUATING ANY DEPRESSED PATIENT. THE MOST IMPORTANT QUESTION TO ASK IS WHETHER THE PATIENT HAS TROUBLE SLEEPING DUE TO RACING THOUGHTS. SOME FEEL THIS IS ALMOST DIAGNOSTIC FOR BIPOLAR DISORDER. ANOTHER KEY QUESTION IS WHETHER THE PATIENT HAS ANY RELATIVES WHO HAVE SUFFERED FROM BIPOLAR DISORDER. IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THE PATIENT COULD HAVE RELATIVES WHO SUFFER FROM BIPOLAR DISORDER THAT HAS NOT BEEN DIAGNOSED. HOWEVER THE PRESENCE OF 3 OR MORE FIRST-DEGREE RELATIVES WITH SOCIAL OR PSYCHIATRIC TROUBLE SHOULD RAISE SUSPICION OF BIPOLAR DISORDER. OTHER FEATURES THAT SHOULD RAISE SUSPICION ARE INSTABILITY (THEY EASILY FLY OFF THE HANDLE OR ARE UNPREDICTABLE AND NOT THE SAME PERSON FROM ONE DAY TO THE NEXT) AND IF THEIR DEPRESSION HAS AN ATYPICALLY RAPID ONSET AND REMISSION.

WITH APPROPRIATE MEDICATION MANY PATIENTS WITH BIPOLAR DISORDER CAN

WELCOME BACK.

JOINING US IN THE STUDIO TONIGHT IS DOCTOR DOUG WIMER.

TONIGHT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT LONGEVITY INFLUENCED BY ALCOHOL AND ACTIVITY.

TAKE DOUG

DOUG WIMER, MD

Introduction:

A study published in this month's issue of the European Heart Journal shows that the risk of death from heart disease was reduced by both exercise and moderate alcohol intake. In fact, all-cause mortality (not just heart attack risk) was lowered by these factors. The study found that people who neither drink alcohol nor exercise had a 30% to 49% higher risk of heart disease than those who either drink, exercise, or do both.

How was the study done?

The researchers looked at data from 11,914 Danish men and women older than 20. The participants were given questionnaires regarding leisure time physical activity and weekly alcohol intake. They then divided the patients into three categories based on exercise: inactive, low level activity (2 to 4 hours a week of walking, biking, gardening), and moderate to high level activity (more than 4 hours a week of light physical activity or more than 2 hours a week of more vigorous activity). They also divided the patients into three categories based on alcohol consumption: nondrinkers, moderate drinkers (1 to 14 drinks a week), and heavy drinkers (15 or more drinks a week).

TAKE GPX

SLIDE 1

What did they find?

The patients were followed for 20 years. (Show slide 1) During that period there were 5,901 deaths, 1,242 of them were due to heart disease. The biggest factor in determining death risk was activity. Being active lowered the death risk for both men and women by about 20 to 25%. There weren't big differences between the death rates of the low activity and moderate/heavy activity groups- increasing the level of activity from low to moderate actually raised the overall death risk by 1% for women. (Show slide 2) With respect to alcohol consumption, moderate drinking lowered the death rate from heart attack by about 25% for both men and women. Overall mortality rates were lowered by 13% for men but only 7% for women compared to nondrinkers. Heavy alcohol consumption did lower the death rates from heart disease for both men and women compared to nondrinkers but their overall chance of dying was actually about 5% higher than the nondrinkers.

GUEST

1 OF 3

WELCOME BACK.
JOINING US IN THE STUDIO TONIGHT IS
DOCTOR DOUG WIMER.
HE'S HERE TO TALK ABOUT AORTIC ANEURYSMS.

Introduction:

A viewer asked me to cover the topic of aortic aneurysms. These are bulges in a weakened area of the aorta, the large vessel that comes out of the heart and runs through the chest and abdomen before branching into the legs. The most common site to have an aortic aneurysm is in the abdomen. Most of them don't cause any problems but if they enlarge very fast or get too big they can rupture and cause internal bleeding. Ruptures are fatal about half the time and cause about 15,000 deaths in the US annually.

TAKE GUEST

DOCTOR DOUG WIMER

What causes them?

The exact cause of the weakness in the vessel wall is not known but several factors seem to predispose certain people to it. Being male, advancing age, having first degree family members who had aneurysms, having atherosclerosis, being a smoker, and having high blood pressure all increase your risk. There is also an increased risk in patients who have a genetic condition called Marfan's syndrome. These patients are generally quite tall and have disproportionately long thin extremities with loose joints.

How do you find these aneurysms?

Most of them cause no symptoms and they are usually discovered either on routine exams, when we might feel a pulsating mass in the abdomen, or when ultrasounds or x-rays of the abdomen or chest are ordered for unrelated reasons. Some are now being found by screening. Recent guidelines suggest that men over 60 who have a family history of aortic aneurysms or any men 65 to 75 who have ever been smokers should consider being screened by getting an abdominal ultrasound. Occasionally patients with aneurysms experience sharp pain in the chest, abdomen, or low back. These pains are often a harbinger of an impending rupture although most of the ruptures that do occur are not preceded by such a warning.

How are they treated?

If the aneurysm is causing symptoms or if it is larger than 5.5 cm they should be repaired surgically. If they are smaller than that we usually follow them with ultrasound, CT, or MRI scans every 3 to 12 months depending on their size. For aneurysms smaller than 4 cm the annual risk of rupture is less than 0.3% which is less than the 1 to 4% risk of mortality associated with surgery to repair them. Our viewer had questions about the need to restrict her activities. There are no universally agreed upon recommendations to avoid physical exertion but we do advise people to stop smoking, keep their blood pressure controlled

(often by using a class of medications called beta blockers), and keep their cholesterol as low as possible.

Aortic Aneurysms

Doug Wimer MD

January 21, 2008

Introduction:

A viewer asked me to cover the topic of aortic aneurysms. These are bulges in a weakened area of the aorta, the large vessel that comes out of the heart and runs through the chest and abdomen before branching into the legs. The most common site to have an aortic aneurysm is in the abdomen. Most of them don't cause any problems but if they enlarge very fast or get too big they can rupture and cause internal bleeding. Ruptures are fatal about half the time and cause about 15,000 deaths in the US annually.

What causes them?

The exact cause of the weakness in the vessel wall is not known but several factors seem to predispose certain people to it. Being male, advancing age, having first degree family members who had aneurysms, having atherosclerosis, being a smoker, and having high blood pressure all increase your risk. There is also an increased risk in patients who have a genetic condition called Marfan's syndrome. These patients are generally quite tall and have disproportionately long thin extremities with loose joints.

How do you find these aneurysms?

Most of them cause no symptoms and they are usually discovered either on routine exams, when we might feel a pulsating mass in the abdomen, or when ultrasounds or x-rays of the abdomen or chest are ordered for unrelated reasons. Some are now being found by screening. Recent guidelines suggest that men over 60 who have a family history of aortic aneurysms or any men 65 to 75 who have ever been smokers should consider being screened by getting an abdominal ultrasound. Occasionally patients with aneurysms experience sharp pain in the chest, abdomen, or low back. These pains are often a harbinger of an impending rupture although most of the ruptures that do occur are not preceded by such a warning.

How are they treated?

If the aneurysm is causing symptoms or if it is larger than 5.5 cm they should be repaired surgically. If they are smaller than that we usually follow them with ultrasound, CT, or MRI scans every 3 to 12 months depending on their size. For aneurysms smaller than 4 cm the annual risk of rupture is less than 0.3% which is less than the 1 to 4% risk of mortality associated with surgery to repair them. Our viewer had questions about the need to restrict her activities. There are no universally agreed upon recommendations to avoid physical exertion but we do advise people to stop smoking, keep their blood pressure controlled (often by using a class of medications called beta blockers), and keep their cholesterol as low as possible.

JOINING US IN THE STUDIO TONIGHT IS DOCTOR DOUG WIMER. HE'S HERE TO TALK ABOUT DRUG EVENTS IN OLDER PATIENTS.

TAKE GUEST

DOUG WIMER, MD

Introduction:

Essentially any medication has the potential to cause unwanted or unexpected effects and older patients seem to be more likely to experience such an effect. Because of this, a group of experts was convened nearly 20 years ago to develop a list of drugs that should generally be avoided in adults residing in nursing homes. The resulting list is updated every few years and is referred to as the Beers criteria. It is estimated that up to 24% patients receive medications which, by these criteria, are considered inappropriate. For patients who have not yet started these medications, all of these drugs are easily avoidable, because safer and equally effective alternatives are available.

TAKE GPX

SLIDE 1

What are some of the most common offending medications?

Show Slide 1 The complete list contains too many medications to cover in our brief time but here are some of the more common examples: amitriptyline (Elavil) can cause sedation and a number of other side effects. Older antihistamines like Benadryl are not as safe as some of the newer ones. Long-acting sedatives such as Valium are not as safe as the shorter acting ones. Prozac is more likely than other antidepressants to cause sleep disturbances and agitation. Stimulant laxatives like Correctol, Nature's Remedy, and castor oil can worsen bowel function. Muscle relaxants like Robaxin, Soma or Ditropan can cause sedation and weakness. And anti-inflammatory medicines like ibuprofen, Naprosyn, or Feldene can cause gastrointestinal bleeding, high blood pressure, heart failure, or kidney failure if used on a long term basis.

What can patients or their families do to help avoid some of these adverse effects?

One of the best ways to avoid these problems is to frequently review all of the medications that elderly patients are taking and to evaluate whether each medication is still necessary or whether lower doses could be tried. Many elderly patients take numerous medicines which are often prescribed by different doctors. Some of the doctors may or may not necessarily be aware of additions or changes made by other doctors. One method for facilitating medication reviews is the brown bag method in which patients bring in all of their medications and evaluate each one by asking a set of questions: 1) Is the condition for which the medicine was originally prescribed still an issue? 2) Are any of the medications duplicates or from the same class? 3) Do any of the medications require adjustments in dosage based on a patient's age or declining kidney function? 4) Are there any known significant interactions between any of the medications?

JOINING US IN THE STUDIO TONIGHT IS

DOCTOR DOUG WIMER.

HE'S HERE TO TALK ABOUT A COUGH.

Introduction:

Coughing is one of the most common reasons patients seek medical care and it accounts for more than 30 million physician visits each year in the US. The most common cause of a cough lasting less than three weeks is a viral infection. For coughs that last longer than that there are many potential causes such as persistent inflammation related to recent infection, postnasal drip, asthma, and acid reflux. Some of the less common explanations for lingering coughs are certain blood pressure medications, pertussis infection, chronic bronchitis, having a foreign body in the lungs, or lung cancer. Although it is uncommon, some patients have a buildup of earwax that somehow initiates the cough reflex.

TAKE GUEST

DOUG WIMER, MD

With so many potential causes for a cough how does one determine what is causing theirs?

For coughs that have been present for more than 2 months a chest x-ray should probably be part of the initial evaluation. Although there are many other tests and studies that may eventually prove necessary to discover why a patient is coughing most experts advise a trial and error approach. Since 90% of chronic coughs are due to postnasal drip, asthma, or gastroesophageal reflux trying treatments for these disorders is usually helpful. Before embarking on these treatments we should first ask whether the patient is taking an ACE inhibitor. ACE inhibitors are a class of blood pressure medications whose generic names end with "pril" such as enalapril, lisinopril, benazepril, and ramapril. Up to 20% of patients who take ACE inhibitors develop a cough and it may take up to six months after starting the medication for the cough to appear. If possible, a trial off of these medications may help determine whether the cough is due to these drugs. Cough due to ACE inhibitors usually goes away after several days off these drugs but it may take up to four weeks. Since the overwhelming majority of chronic coughs are due to discharge from the nasal cavity draining down the back of the throat and into the upper airway a trial of antihistamines and decongestants is usually suggested first. The older nonprescription antihistamines such as Benadryl have been shown to be more effective at treating cough than the newer ones but they also tend to be sedating. The effectiveness of these medications is usually seen within a week if they are going to help. If these medications aren't helpful then a trial of asthma medications such as inhaled steroids is often advisable since some of these patients have a condition known as cough variant asthma. If a cough has not improved after adequate trials of treatments for postnasal drip and asthma then most experts advise a trial of treatment for gastroesophageal reflux. This involves not eating for several hours prior to lying down, stopping caffeine and nicotine use, and taking antacid medication. If none of these measures prove useful then there are other evaluations such as pulmonary function tests, allergy testing, and others that are beyond the scope of this discussion but even with such studies there are a significant number of patients with chronic cough in whom no cause can be determined.
