"They feel like they're being looked at as lazy, not wanting to work, saying 'my family thinks I just wanna be home all day,' she explains, "but many are licensed, they hold degrees...they have contributed to society, and they want to continue doing that."

Economy	Closer Look	1/15/23	7:00pm	29min	Food Prices, Fight Inflation from Your Fridge Inflation, simply defined, is a rise in the cost of things we need to live – like food. When COVID-19 forced shutdowns, foodstuffs no longer flowed easily and inexpensively from farms to factories and stores to your kitchen. This global disruption, combined with federal fiscal policies to fight economic slowdown, nearly guaranteed that Americans would feel checkout sticker shock. Food prices are especially vulnerable to pressures of the pandemic, says Joe Balagtas, Associate Professor of Agricultural Economics at Purdue University. “Higher farming costs, like fertilizer, fuel,” make basic ingredients more expensive. Even the Russian invasion of Ukraine in early-2022 “created uncertainty” as both nations had previously been major exporters of global wheat. The tight labor market in the U.S. also affects your total at the register. “Labor along the food supply chain accounts for something like half of the cost of our food,” he says, so “while good for individual worker, rising wages increase the price of food we purchase -- because the cost of delivering those goods to us in the grocery stores and restaurants is rising.” While our grocery bills are undeniably afflicted by global factors, lifestyle blogger Jordan Page challenges us to focus less on prices and more on waste. Page, herself a mother of 8 hungry children, recommends Shelf Cooking, defined as planning your meals around what you already have in the fridge, freezer and pantry. “Do you have a little bit mustard lingering in a bottle? Do you have half a thing of spinach kind of wilting in the back of the fridge?” she asks. Plan around what you have! Grocery runs would then just supplement your existing stock.
Museum	Local Closer Look	1/15/23	7:30pm	20min	Spoke with Mike White, president of the Clay County Historical Society. White talked about the Clay History Museum located in downtown Manchester and it has become the centerpiece of tourism for the town and county. The museum was designed by a firm out of Cincinnati giving it a much larger look and feel than you might expect in a small community like Manchester. White talked about how the museum is divided into 7 sections from the early settlers to post World War days. Sports is also a big part of the museum as the Clay County basketball programs are known as some of the best in the entire state.

Special Needs	Closer Look	1/29/23	7:00pm	22min	'Spend A Day in My Wheels' Challenge Helps People Understand What It's Really Like to Use a Wheelchair Nathan Johnson from Lebanon, Tennessee, wanted his son Alex who uses a wheelchair, to feel comfortable and have equal access to facilities in public places – just like others do. To help people relate, the Lebanon, Tennessee, family came up with the Spend a day in My Wheels, Wheelchair Challenge, showing people what it's really like to use a wheelchair. "They had to go to the bathroom and go the water fountain. They had to go to the football field and back. They had to do just things that seems simple, until you're in a wheelchair in which those things become more difficult." Alex says, despite the difficulty, the majority of participants come up to him after the challenge and tell him how eye opening the experience was.

Faith – Entertainment	KLOVE's Positive People News Podcast with on-air 60sec promo for podcast	January 2023	4 per week, 16 total	60sec Podcast 16.43min	Geek Devotions: We Speak 'Geek' And Share Jesus with Isolated People First off, let's define the word: "A geek is merely a person who is very much – I won't say obsessed – but very much in tune with what we call 'Geek Culture' – things involving comic books, video games, anime, and movies and fantasy books," explains Dallas Mora, who along with his wife, Celeste, lead the Christian outreach Geek Devotions. These days the term geek is not necessarily viewed as a put-down says Celeste. "Geeks are beginning to own the word geek and they're going, 'Yeah. I'm a geek. I like this, this, and this.'" If you don't 'speak geek' – and don't understand what is so important in their lives and socializing, trying to tell them about Jesus can be like speaking a foreign language. Celeste explains there are "multiple geek sub-languages" depending on personal areas of interest. And "we speak many forms of geek," adding "we're called to love people, so that's what we do." Besides conventions, the Moras are also active on YouTube. For anyone who believes in Christ, Dallas believes there's always a local mission field: your circle of associates and friends. "Speak to the culture that you're in. People everywhere need to know about Christ. There are people everywhere who are hurting, who feel abandoned," and Dallas reminds us, "You have this precious thing called Christ, salvation...and they just need somebody to speak their own (cultural) language – presented in a way that they understand – and allow the Holy Spirit to draw them to salvation."

Ed Ternan, co-founder of Song for Charlie lost his college-aged son to one pill and now helps other parents warn their children. "We still say 'just say no' but we spell it K. N. O. Ministry	Closer Look	2/19/23	7:13pm	15min	'Call-In' Bible Studies Connect to Faith and Friendship When COVID-19 forced churches to close and halted even small social gatherings, Christians continued to crave interaction with fellow believers. Soldiers For Faith Ministries launched 'call-in' bible studies back in 2012, but stay-at-home orders in 2020 crystalized the ministry purpose and mission. "When the pandemic hit," says founder Kelly McAndrew, "all of a sudden we understood what God had prepared us for."

Education	Closer Look	2/26/23	7:00pm	15min	'Dare To Dream' School Assemblies Ignite Hope in Tweens, Teens If you're committed to helping kids grab their God-given potential, Randy Rich says first you have to find them. "And where do kids meet in the largest numbers in a mandatory setting? School! And guess what? Schools are required to have a certain amount of assemblies during the course of a year to encourage their students!" The D2D motivational program does visit high schools but sees greatest success among kids slightly younger. "By the time a student reaches 8th grade a little over 80% of their value system in place – meaning the way they look at morality, sexuality, integrity – so where are we focusing our intention with Dare to Dream? Middle School." Various artists, musicians and pro-athletes take the mic to share their own struggles to believe and achieve. Kids hear Christian music artists like Lauren Daigle and Toby Mac on videos to kick off each session. The assemblies are not evangelistic, but principals and teachers are fully aware that Dare to Dream is sponsored by Christian radio network Air1. Air1 - Worship Now is owned by Educational Media Foundation (EMF) and is a sister to the K-LOVE Radio Network. Recurring themes for the presentation include tips for making positive life choices like "who's in your Circle of Trust," explains Randy, and asking kids "what labels are you putting on yourself -- or allowing other people to put on you -- that prevent you from being all that you were truly created to be?" The D2D team also supplies a 3-week Development Guide as a follow-up to the assembly which has become so popular that many teachers stretch it into a whole semester of instruction. More proof of the impact of a Dare to Dream school assembly? Responses written by students on comment cards at the end. The program has helped hundreds of middle and high schoolers confess to teachers or other trusted adults their suicidal tendencies, or report abuse at home and often infused them with courage to ask deep questions about morality. Randy is quick to give credit to God for any self-discovery that comes through Air1's Dare to Dream. "That's not us or any speaker's ability to pull that out. We believe that's the Holy Spirit working in and through the hearts of those kids when you speak truth. The truth will set you free."

Technology – Education	Closer Look	2/26/23	7:15pm	15min	Young Children Give Out Phone Numbers, Chat with Strangers Online “Technology scares us most of the time,” admits Patrick Craven, director of the Center for Cyber Safety and Education, “and our kids are involved in it.” The Center focuses on building awareness of ever-present threats like identity theft and online predators. Surveys of youth and their online habits are alarming. “I gotta tell you”, says Craven. “It was pretty shocking – just frightening.” “We found that 40% of elementary school children have already chatted with a stranger online -- and half of them of have given out their phone number.” The realities of internet missteps by younger and younger children exposes an urgent need to teach kids how to spot and report suspicious activity. “A child gets a phone now on average by 10-yrs-old. We can’t wait till they’re in middle school or high school.” Craven warns parents to rabidly guard their child’s identity. Savvy criminals have turned to setting up fake credit card accounts using a child’s social security number because they know it will be literally years before the theft is even discovered. “There’s been lots of cases where children have had bankruptcy because where loans were taken out in their name.” Protective apps, strong passwords, discretion on social media posts and direct parental supervision remain crucial to preventing such events, but Craven says there is no substitute talking to kids about how to protect themselves from digital threats.
International Aid	PSA	February 2023	Weekly 60sec promos	Podcast 9.08min	For government agencies and faith-based disaster relief organizations, getting aid to those who survived the massive earthquake in Turkey and Syria has been a challenge. Convoy of Hope’s lead team is now in the quake zone. “It’s just mile after mile of rubble, piles of rubble, and uninhabitable buildings that are still standing...many families have truly lost everything,” shares Convoy spokesman Ethan Forhertz. The team reports, “There are tent cities everywhere they look.” There have been roughly 6,000 aftershocks since the main quake on February 6. These can range from mini quakes to more significant magnitudes capable of bringing down even more of the damaged structures. People are fearful. Between the two countries, 46,000 people have been confirmed to have lost their lives, with many more injured. Ethan believes it will potentially take years for anything approaching normal to be possible. In our interview podcast, just below, Ethan shares what Convoy of Hope is actively doing to provide as much food and necessities as possible during this time of extraordinary need. And he also emphasizes the value of continued prayer and financial contributions to keep the relief progress moving forward.

Ministry – International War	KLOVE’s Positive People News Podcast with on-air 60sec promo for podcast	February 2023	4 per week, 16 total	60sec Podcast 16.01min	‘We Can’t Forget Ukrainians’ – CityServe Brings 3M Meals, Generators, Hope “It’s really light or death for many of these churches and families right now,” as the harsh Ukrainian winter makes living conditions even harder for families whose homes have no power to stay warm or even cook. “Many of these families are shivering in the dark,” shares Dave Donaldson, the co-founder of CityServe International. The ministry is actively bringing in generators and food to keep people alive as Russian forces continue to shell power facilities and cut-off supply routes. Working with 1,800 Ukrainian churches, “These churches have become literal lighthouses,” empowered with electricity to help residents, and of course, the powerful life-giving light of Jesus. As daily life feels “very dark and desperate...at the same time, Jesus has been building his church and these churches are thriving. These pastors are brave – they refuse to give up their church. They refuse to leave. And a result, you are seeing thousands of people that are convening in these churches, worshipping, they have hope. They’re believing that this war will end, but ultimately that God is in control. He has not left them. It is his church. They are his people, and he is going to protect them. So, there’s a lot of optimism and hope in the midst of so much darkness!”

Faith	Local Closer Look	March 2023	4 per week, 16 total	60sec Podcast 19.52min	The Asbury Revival: "I Wanted to See If It Was the Real Thing. It Was." Jason Williams, publisher of the Oregon Faith Report, traveled 2,482 miles to see for himself what was taking place at Asbury University in February. "I wanted to see if this was the real thing. It was." Williams shares, "Pulling up to the very small town and seeing just lines of people – sometimes a half-mile long – waiting to get into a chapel to celebrate God was just fascinating." But his impression was not simply based on the number of people. "Everyone was just singing at the top of their voice and with everything that they had. They were praying with everything that they had. It was a very moving experience. It was very sober, and it was very real!" No fog machines, no dazzling lights, no Christian celebrities. "You have to admire the fact that this was as basic as it could be. I mean, they probably had no more than two or three instruments for all the singing. No keyboard. Just a piano and a guitar, maybe – and a lot of the songs they were singing were the most common Christian songs. A lot of them were hundred-year-old hymns. The preaching that was done was less than five minutes at a time, which is a miracle in itself some would say," Williams chuckled. "The fact that everyone was so engaged you really felt God's presence."
