Guest: Jon Meyers, ARC of Arizona Executive Director

Topic: Wings For Autism program, Wings for Autism

Southwest Airlines and American Airlines provide planes in coordination with the ARC of Arizona to help children with developmental needs and their parent "practice" the issues with flying. This helps the families when they do fly to make it less stressful. Children with autism, down-syndrome, and fetal alcohol syndrome are some of the candidate available for this program. By practicing the flights ahead of time the children can be acclimated to the issues with flight. The whole process is practiced from TSA screening to boarding. Becoming overwhelmed is the biggest issue with all the distractions, so serenity is key. The Wings for Autism event is on August 19th
