Quarterly Issues/Programs List

WODC provides its listeners with programming and public service announcements that address issues of concern to our local community. Among the issues determined to be of most concern to the community during the preceding calendar quarter were:

- Asthma and lung health: Jessica Kach of the American Lung Association talked about how many families have someone in the house who suffers from allergies or asthma. She discussed how to make them more comfortable such as removing carpets from bedrooms and installing a central vacuum system.
- Blinded veterans services: Ed Eckroth, a field service representative for the Blinded Veterans Association, talked about how the organization committed to blinded vets and their families helps them get the services they deserve.
- Car care: Members from the Car Care Council discussed how important it is to invest an hour or two to have your vehicle checked to stay safe on the road and avoid the hassle of a breakdown and cost of unexpected repairs.
- Colon cancer awareness and prevention: Representatives from the American Society for Gastrointestinal Endoscopy talked about stopping a silent killer. They said the danger comes from colon cancer, which is largely preventable. They added that if that first test is normal, you probably won't need a second test for a decade.
- Diabetes education: James Miller, Communication Coordinator for the Diabetes Education Program, discussed the physical and online materials available for people over age 60 that can help prevent or delay Type 2 diabetes.
- Family fitness programs: Staff and volunteers from the local YMCAs talked about how living a physically active lifestyle can significantly improve your health and how you feel, and how it can be hard to make healthy lifestyle changes without the support of those around you. They gave information about their summer fitness and sports programs developed and aimed at families.
- Financial planning: Chris Johnson, a local financial planning expert, talked about how planning for a financially secure future should be a top priority for young families. He said that insurance products such as disability income and critical illness insurance should definitely be considered especially by those families just starting out.

- Military dogs: Volunteers from Ability One, a non-profit agency providing protective gear for dogs of military families, talked about their help efforts. They said that military working dogs save lives in many ways, including tracking troops and sniffing out explosives.
- Senior volunteering: Officials from the Central Ohio Area Agency On Aging discussed older adults who volunteer as little as three hours a week are more than sixty percent less likely to report health problems. They offered information to help connect individuals with local community resources for volunteering.
- Small business support: Officials from the U.S. Small Business Administration discussed how the nation's small businesses may find the help they need. They said the SBA has updated their online resources to provide easier access to information about ways to start up, grow and achieve small business success.
- Tax education: Raymond Jones, a local tax expert, talked about the best ways to exempt yourself from the pre-tax and post-tax frenzy. Among the tips he gave was having a central location for all your paperwork, refund receipts, W-2 forms and interest income statements.
- Teen drug abuse and prevention: Sara McNeil of the Ohio Teen Drug Abuse Awareness Committee talked about how many parents fear that their children will become addicted to illegal "street drugs" like marijuana or cocaine. But she said kids are turning to their own parents' medicine cabinets to abuse commonly prescribed prescriptions including pain relievers, anti-anxiety pills and ADHD medication.
- Understanding insurance policies: Officials from the Ohio Department of Insurance discussed how an insurance policy contains a promise. For a premium, the insurer promises to accept certain of your risks. They said it makes sense to buy insurance for your house, business or car from a professional committed to ethics - to keeping promises and putting your interests first.
