Alabama Gov. Kay Ivey is urging people to update their driver's licenses to STAR ID which will be required next year for air travel.

Ivey and Alabama Law Enforcement Secretary Hal Taylor held a Tuesday press conference urging people to get the STAR ID if they think they will need it.

STAR ID is Alabama's version of the federal REAL ID program which required states to upgrade the security of their driver's licenses.

Starting Oct. 1, 2020, people will need the upgraded IDs — or a passport — to board domestic flights. It will also be needed to enter certain federal buildings.

People will need to show a birth certificate or other documents to get STAR ID. A list can be found with the Alabama Law Enforcement Agency website.

Problem # 6: The Rights of Homeschool Students

Do homeschool students have equal educational rights as public school students?

A student that was transferring from homeschool to public school was forced to repeat her American Government class that she had last year simply because of the title of the book. The book was titled: God and government. The school said that they couldn't accept that.

Jay Sekulow advised her of the law concerning this issue. He stated that "Public School systems should acknowledge that under every state law, there is recognition of homeschool credits." The fact that the course material, involving history, dealt with the issue of God and government should not mean that it's excluded from being used as a credit giving course.

Jay then put her in touch with the lawyers there at American Center for Law and Justice to help her resolve the issue.
