MARIJUANA POSSESSION IS GROUNDS FOR DEPORTATION	Noticiero Univision-Edicion Nocturna	4/20/2017	11:43PM	2:20	Homeland Security Secretary John Kelly announced that the Trump Administration would use marijuana possession as a reason for deporting immigrants. ICE will continue to use marijuana possession, distribution and convictions as essential elements as they build their deportation removal apprehension packages for targeted operations against illegal aliens living in the United States. Marijuana is currently illegal under federal law, but eight states have legalized it for adult use and 28 states have medical marijuana laws. Individuals following state law would be exposed to deportation. "Whether it's the construction of a wall or deporting individuals for marijuana possession, the Trump Administration has signaled its desire to use the drug war as a tool to persecute immigrants," said Jerónimo Saldaña, Policy Manager at Drug Policy Alliance's Office of National Affairs. The Trump Administration has nefariously used the drug war as a way of targeting immigrants, and yesterday's statement is merely another example of this tactic.

IMMIGRATION-VISA OVERSTAYS	Noticiero Univision-Edicion Nocturna	5/5/2017	10:38PM	2:15	U.S. immigration agents cannot effectively track foreigners who overstay their visas because of outdated technology involving numerous computer systems and a lack of screening when visitors leave the country, according to a government watchdog report released Thursday. The inefficient computer systems plus insufficient technology training for agents hampers their ability to monitor the immigration status and whereabouts of visa holders who travel to the U.S. Visitors are screened when they enter the U.S. but the government has been slow to develop an effective system that will track them and their status when they leave. The U.S. government has launched a biometric exit screening pilot program for visa holders at Atlanta's Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport and plans to expand it to other airports in 2018. Under the pilot program, U.S. Customs and Border Protection combined traveler and airline data with images taken of passengers to confirm their departure, the report said. Visitors who overstay their visas are investigated to determine whether they have applied for immigration benefits, left the country or pose a security risk.

HOUSE COMMITTEE SQUARES OFF ON AGGRESSIVE IMMIGRATION BILLS	Noticiero Univision-Edicion Nocturna	5/18/2017	10:40PM	2:00	Democrats and Republicans on Thursday faced off over immigration policy as a House committee began considering a set of immigration bills that Democrats say would amount to the creation of a "mass deportation force." The committee was set to mark up three Republican bills related to immigration on Thursday -- one that would vastly expand the role of state and local jurisdictions in immigration enforcement and two others that would authorize immigration components of the Department of Homeland Security. But by mid-afternoon, the committee recessed until next week after only making its way through two amendments. In a two-page memorandum, Mr. Sessions announced that the Trump administration would withhold certain types of federal aid from jurisdictions that "willfully refuse to comply" with a single federal immigration law. That statute requires cities, counties and states to allow local agencies and officials to exchange information about people's immigration status with federal immigration authorities.

A successful application allows eligible victims to remain in the country temporarily if they have been helpful to an investigation or are expected to be helpful. "Immigration enforcement actions should not undermine community safety and a victim's access to justice and protection," said Cecilia Friedman Levin, senior policy counsel for ASISTA, an immigration assistance group. The agency released a statement that said all immigration cases are reviewed on a case-by-case basis.

On Father's Day this Sunday, Democratic Senator Robert Menendez and Congress members Frank Pallone Jr. of New Jersey and Luis Gutierrez of Illinois requested at a press conference held at the capitol that the President Trump and Secretary of Homeland Security, John Kelly, not separate families. Lawmakers said the deportation of a parent leaves families without emotional and financial support and has devastating consequences for the development of children. Today, between five and six million children born and raised in the United States have one or two undocumented parents in the country who, although not a priority for deportation, are at risk of being expelled.
CLOSING IN ON SB4 LAW	UniMás News Briefs	6/17/2017	10:47AM	:29	Texas District Judge Orlando Garcia listens to the legal arguments against the political law SB4 that prohibits "sanctuary cities" and authorizes police to request documents from citizens. We interviewed Luis Paoli, an immigration lawyer, and Claudia Quiñonez, DACA beneficiary and representative of United We Dream.
HOUSE IMMIGRATION VOTE	UniMás News Briefs	6/29/2017	5:21AM	:29	The House on Thursday voted to crack down on undocumented immigrants and localities that shelter them, approving two bills President Trump has championed but that are certain to meet resistance in the Senate. The legislation from the Republican-controlled House would increase prison sentences for those re-entering the country illegally and pressure so-called sanctuary cities to comply with federal immigration officials, including through cutting federal funds. While the measures gave the President a modest, if predictable, win, they would need Democratic support to clear the Senate's 60-vote threshold, an unlikely prospect.
