As new housing, commercial and industrial developments go up, what happens to the literally hundreds of cemeteries that dot various parts of the county. It's a real problem that has already occurred in the norther portion of the county. Bodies have been moved, and the history of some of those cemeteries may be getting lost. Dr. Dekunder is here today to talk about what they are doing to preserve the cemeteries, which include small family plots, slave cemeteries and large community cemeteries that have all but been abandoned. 38:15

A local non-profit organization, that works to provide support services for students across the area, is getting a record-breaking donation this week. Chris Douglas, chief executive officer for Communities In Schools of South Central Texas, says they have received an astounding $3 million donation from philanthropist MacKenzie Scott. Douglas says the one-time donation is amazing news for their organization, and will go a long way towards supporting the work that they do on behalf of children in this area. Scott's donation to Communities In Schools of South Central Texas is part of a much larger overall donation to the national Communities In Schools Organization. In all, Scott donated more than $133 million to CIS, which is easily the largest gift ever received by the nationwide program in its 40 year history. If you're not familiar with the work of Communities In Schools, there's a good chance that they are working in partnership with a school district in your area. Douglas says they have staff members that work inside of schools. They build one-on-one relationships with students and help them to move beyond the barriers that might exists in the classroom, at home, or in the community. They currently work with 59 schools in seven school districts in this area. The list of districts includes the Comal,

New Braunfels, Seguin, Luling, Marion, Nixon-Smiley and Schertz-Cibolo-Universal City school districts. Our guest is Chris Douglas, CEO of CIS of South Central Texas. 18:00

Today on the Saturday Topic we offer an encore presentation of our interviews with the candidates from the locally contested races here in Guadalupe County. It's part of our effort to help voters make an informed decision when they head to the polls for the primary election. This morning we'll begin our coverage with the Guadalupe County District Clerk's race. Up first, we will hear from incumbent District Linda Balk and that will be followed by our conversation with her challenger businesswoman Shelly Saldivar-Sposari. Next, we will take a look at the race for Guadalupe County Clerk. Incumbent County Clerk Teresa Kiel will discuss why she thinks she deserves another term in office. Kiel is being challenged by newcomer Stacy Melton. Our attempts to interview Melton were unsuccessful, but we still want to make sure that voters get to hear from the incumbent this morning. The three candidates vying for the Precinct 4 seat on the Guadalupe County Commissioners Court will join us next. Incumbent Judy Cope will be first, followed by challengers Joel Hicks and Stephen Germann. And we will wrap up our program with a look at the race for Precinct 1 Justice of the Peace. Darrell Hunter is the incumbent in this race. He's being challenged by Sam "Saundra" Meyer and Kelly M. Cross. That's the rundown for our Saturday Topic program, but as I mentioned we begin our conversations this morning with the candidates for the district clerk's race. The incumbent in that race Linda Balk is up first -- we hope that you enjoy this special two-hour edition of the Saturday Topic program on AM 1580 KWED. I hope that you enjoyed our special Saturday Topic program. Don't forget that the early voting period resumes on Tuesday and runs through Friday at several locations around Guadalupe County. Election day is Tuesday, March 1. 120 minutes
