Joseph Stiglitz, Professor, Columbia University; Author, The Great Divide: Unequal Societies and What We Can Do About Them

Monika Bauerlein, Co-editor, Mother Jones — Moderator

We are living in an era defined by economic uncertainty and bitter politics: The gap between the rich and the poor continues to grow, an emboldened Wall Street has shrugged off attempts at regulation, and important political policies have become the playthings of financial interests. Still, economist Joseph Stiglitz believes that a healthy economy and a fair democracy are within our grasp. By taking what he sees as practical political steps, such as making those at the top pay their fair share, spending more in areas that we all value — education, health, and infrastructure — and eliminating the corrosive advantages built into our markets, Stiglitz argues that we can once again create the opportunities that have for so long defined America, and get the country back on track.

Shari Steele, Executive Director, Electronic Frontier Foundation - Moderator

Join us for a shocking look at the ways corporations and governments track and control people, and the ways we can fight back.

Data is everywhere. We create it every time we go online, turn our phone on (or off) or pay with a credit card. This data is stored, studied and bought and sold by corporations and governments for surveillance, profit and control. "Foremost security expert" (Wired) and best-selling author Bruce Schneier shows how this data has led to a double-edged Internet: a Web that gives power to the people but is abused by the institutions on which those people depend.

In Data and Goliath, Schneier reveals the full extent of surveillance, censorship and propaganda in society today, examining the risks of cybercrime, cyberterrorism and cyberwar.

He shares technological, legal and social solutions that can help shape a more equal, private

Gina McCarthy, Administrator, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

As Mitt Romney's "Green Quarterback," Gina McCarthy played a key role in helping the Massachusetts Governor craft a plan to protect the climate and grow the economy. Now she's the point person for President Obama's effort to do the same thing on a national scale.

The Obama administration's clean power plan is similar to regulations first proposed in the 1990s. In addition to its impact on U.S. industry, it underpins the U.S. position going into the UN climate summit in Paris later this year. Supporters say it is a crucial move to clean up the air. Critics say it is a job killer and may be unconstitutional.

Despite the political battles in Washington, Silicon Valley is advancing renewable energy technologies that are creating companies and jobs. Can clean tech save the day? Join America's top environmental protector for a conversation about clean energy, the coal wars, green jobs and more.
