Topic: Just three weeks away from Iowa, the race for President is shifting dramatically. Mike Huckabee has been enjoying a meteoric rise from the second tier to leading the pack, at least according to one National poll. As he gains momentum thus follows the scrutiny. We'll take a tougher look at the former Arkansas Governor's plans for the nation.

Guest: Mike Huckabee, (R) Former Arkansas Governor, Presidential Candidate

Topic: Then, Senator John McCain started the race as frontrunner and now he's struggling to hold on to some regained momentum. He's just won a major endorsement in New Hampshire, but what can the Arizona Senator do to gain enough momentum in the rest of the nation and convince America he's the man who should hold the highest office? We'll talk with the Arizona Senator only on Fox News Sunday.

Guest: Sen. John McCain, (R) Arizona, Presidential Candidate

This week on Fox News Sunday: December 30, 2007

Topic: We're just days away from the first-in-the-nation caucuses in Iowa, where the country will begin voting for their party's nominees for President. The race is getting tighter and the tragic death of Former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto in Pakistan has made everything instantly more serious. While the world watches the turmoil unfold, every candidate for President in the U.S. is making their case for why they are best suited to lead the nation. Has the sudden assassination brought terrorism to the forefront of the voter's minds? Which candidate has the most to gain with their record on national security? Fox News Sunday speaks exclusively with Presidential Candidate Fred Thompson.

Guest: Fred Thompson, (R) Former Tennessee Senator, Presidential Candidate

Topic: Then, we'll get the lay of the land of the first battleground of '08 from one of the Hawkeye state's sharpest political minds. Who is best positioned to take the state for each party? Who is most likely to fall off the radar? We'll ask the Des Moines Register's David Yepsen.
