Proverbs 31 Radio Program

Weekdays at 3:30 p.m. on KVNE

Issue: All “Family”

March 2014

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 31, 2014

I was talking to my friend, the Gourmet Chef, today. I call her that because she's always making something wonderful! Two weeks ago it was Baklava and last week, chocolate covered cherries. I thought those were only made in factories! And, today she was making something fancy with molasses. I said, “Oh yeah, I've got a tube of that!”

Obviously, my talents lie outside the kitchen. Sometimes I feel inadequate when I struggle in an area where others are gifted. But I've learned to stop beating myself up! I get advice from those who naturally excel in areas where I don't. And, when I discover something I'm good at I can help someone else. Isn't that the beauty of friendship? My friend, the Gourmet, often asks for my help with public speaking. And she's taught me that Molasses comes in a jar and there are some yummy things that can be made with it.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 28, 2014

I used to hesitate sometimes when people asked how they could pray for me.

I remember one Sunday a friend from church asked how I was and how she could pray for me. I hesitated for a second and then spilled my guts. I told her I was having a REALLY hard time. Our daughter had just been diagnosed with Apraxia, a severe speech disorder, and it could be years before she would be able to talk.

I started crying right there in our church lobby and wondered if she regretted asking.

But you know what? I don't want to pretend things are ok when they're not. We need to know life is hard for others not just us. That way we can pray for each other and stop believing we're alone in our struggles. The truth is we all have hard stuff and we need each other.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 27, 2014

The other day I came home from a fun outing with my kids and realized how messy the house was!

Quickly my mood went from happy, happy to mad and demanding. My husband pulled me aside after watching me rant and rave for a few minutes and asked a very simple question: “Why did you let everyone go on a fun outing without first having them clean up? If you'd told them before you left what needed to be done the thrill of going out would have motivated everyone and you could have come home relaxed."

He was right.

I've taken his advice on several occasions and it's amazing how it has reduced my stress. And what if the kids don't cooperate with the clean before we go plan? Well, then we cancel the outing and I get to take a bubble bath. Now that's a beautiful plan!

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 26, 2014

Have you ever heard someone who doesn't believe in God say that Christians SHOULD tell others about Jesus?

The other day I was watching a video on You-Tube of a famous entertainer who's a self-proclaimed atheist. He was talking about one of his fans who had politely offered him a Bible. I was sure this entertainer was going to mock the guys who'd wanted to tell him about Jesus. But...he didn't! In fact, the celebrity said he respected him. He said it made sense for someone who believes Jesus is the only way to heaven to share it with others. He even said that you'd really have to HATE someone to believe you have the key to eternal life and NOT share it.

I was shocked and challenged to be less concerned about offending people and more concerned about telling them that a relationship with Christ means peace, love, and the hope of heaven!

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 25, 2014

I try to keep my car clean, honestly... I do. I keep the area where I sit very clean and tidy. It would never occur to me to use it as a trashcan. My kids on the other hand have issues.

Yesterday I informed the kids that I was tired of pulling through the car pool line at school and watching things fly about when they got out. After school my kids went to work cleaning. But when I inspected there was still trash everywhere.

They said, "Ohhhhh, we didn't know you meant the trash too. We just got our stuff out."

When they came inside I talked to them about the importance of doing things right the first time. I also explained that doing little things out of obedience is how God prepares us for the bigger things in life. I'm happy to report, my car is clean! At least for today that is.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 24, 2014

Have you ever thought about what makes you feel loved by God?

One morning I asked my son Andrew what makes him feel loved. I was expecting him to say he feels loved when I do things for him or buy him something new.

But instead, Andrew said that me being with him and me being there for him is what makes him feel loved. Later, I thought about his answer and wondered – If God asked me what makes me feel loved by Him, what would I say?

My answers were the same as Andrew. It's knowing God's always with me. That He cares about me. It's the promises He's made and kept that remind me of His love again and again.

So, what makes you feel loved by God? Why not make a list today.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 21, 2014

Recently my husband hurt my feelings so I resorted to the ever so mature silent treatment.

Can you relate? Well, I was so upset that I called a friend who I was sure would understand and say something to make me feel better. But what she said actually pierced my heart and helped to change my perspective. She asked me, "Lysa, if you knew something might happen to Art today and he'd never come home again, would this situation really matter?" Suddenly, my hurt was put into perspective and my outlook was completely different. Instead of the silent treatment I called my husband and gently told him why his statement had hurt my feelings. The anger and hurt had dissipated and, thanks to my wise friend, I was free to live the rest of that day with no regrets.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 20, 2014

I wonder how many times I don't put as much effort into something if I think no one else will notice?

The other day I read about a nurse who admitted she used to give less than her best effort when no one would see it. During her night shift, she needed to change her patients' bandages two times. She'd hurry through the first bandage change – doing it correctly, but not as carefully – because no one would see it since she'd be the one to replace it before her shift ended. But with the second bandage change, she did a better job because the nurse on the morning shift would see her work.

One night God reminded her He sees everything. Maybe no other human eyes notice her effort, but He does. This changed her perspective – and mine. I want to be faithful in everything God gives me to do, even if no one sees but Him.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 19, 2014

Recently my husband and I returned home from vacation only to discover that our camera was missing. And I have to admit I cried. Not so much over the lost camera as over the lost pictures. I know it sounds silly but I was so sad I prayed that God would either help us find the camera or give me a peace about this loss. Later that day, I wrote down what I felt I needed to remember:

First, keep it in perspective. And, secondly, don't let this loss take the joy out of the memories of our trip.

Ultimately, the camera and the photos are just stuff. Many people are dealing with situations today that are far beyond this. So, I'm thankful for the memories, hopeful for the return of the camera, but OK if we never get it back.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 18, 2014

I'm always surprised at how interested my kids are in the story of how I met their Dad!

My husband JJ and I just celebrated 20 years of marriage. Instead of going out alone for our anniversary, we had a special dinner with our kids to celebrate. It was so much fun to talk with them about our early years of marriage before we had kids.

And much to my surprise, our boys started asking how we met and some of the funny things that happened while we dated. They actually wanted to hear our story.

Telling them how met and why we decided to get married seemed like just a fun way to reminisce but I think it goes deeper. I think knowing our story reassures our kids we really love each other and are committed to staying together no matter what. And, I think it makes them feel more secure as they face their own uncertainties each day.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 17, 2014

I wanted to pinch the two little girls sitting in the front row at church. Hi I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs31 Ministries. My daughter and her friend were not acting the way I wanted them to.

Suddenly, an annoying little thought started to tug at the corners of my mind. "You want your children to act perfectly because it makes you look good. Let that go. They don't need to be sitting up straight to hear God's message. This is a beautiful time for grace."

Soon my daughter's friend looked back at me. Despite my feelings, I smiled, winked, and gave her a little wave. Then that wiggly, usually not very affectionate, middle-schooler got out of her seat. She walked down the aisle, five rows back, and gave me a hug that preached a thousand sermons right then and there. Oh how crucial it is for me as a mom to ask God for moment by moment wisdom.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 14, 2014

I want to look and feel like a runner, but I don't want to endure the pain it takes to get there! Hi, I'm Renee Swope for Proverbs 31 Ministries.

Running is hard! And the worst part is that burning sensation you get in your legs. You know that hot sting that makes your calves limp and your muscles scream. But the best part is when you push yourself until a new burst of energy brings more motivation! Pushing past my pain always makes me feel like I can go further!

You know, avoiding the hard stuff is never good physically or spiritually. I've found that I have to push past the pain as I try to follow God, too. Being afraid of what might happen or how much it might hurt can really hinder me if I'm not careful.

I don't want to let fear keep me from growing and stretching in my race as a Christ follower, how about you?

Let's feel the burn together as we run the race of our lives with Jesus!

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 13, 2014

I'm a bit distracted because this morning there are two... not one which would be bad enough... but two mice in my kitchen. Hi, I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs 31 Ministries.

The mice came running out as I was reading the book of James in the Bible.... Which by the way, says, "Suppose a brother or a sister needs clothes and daily food; If you say to him, 'Go, I wish you well; keep warm and well fed, but do nothing about his physical needs what good is it?'" So this is what I'm reading while trying to think of a way to get rid of these mice!

Why are there always distractions when I'm trying to read my Bible? Do you ever feel this way? I've found spending time reading the Bible each day is so important, I have to intentionally protect this time. It's crucial for my spiritual and emotional stability- especially on those days when mice come to visit! Yuck!

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 12, 2014

My email was supposed to sound like a prayer request, but it started out sounding more like an apology. Hi, I'm Renee Swope from Proverbs 31 Ministries. I needed friends to pray, but I hesitated to ask. I didn't want my request to be a burden for anyone.

My husband was having health problems and a biopsy done that week, but I wasn't sure if it was going to be anything serious in the end. I just knew that I didn't want to walk through it alone or in my own strength. Fifteen minutes after I sent the email several friends started telling me they were praying. Not only did they pray – they thanked me for sharing what was going on and for letting them be there for me.

For someone who hates to impose on others, I need to remember that asking for prayer isn't about putting burdens on my friends. It's about letting them walk by my side down a path that I was never intended to walk alone.

Recently a friend asked "If the Bible were being written today would our names be in it?" Hi, I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs 31 Ministries.

My first inclination was to draw back and think, "Um, no. How dare I even think that? Seriously? The Bible? No, I don't think my name would be in there."

But this question has continued to rattle around in my heart where I've committed to living an all out life for God. And somewhere deep inside I've started to DARE to think, maybe. Not because of me. Not because I deserve an ounce of recognition. Not because I've accomplished anything worthy of mention. But because God loves to take rag tag people from broken backgrounds and surprise the daylights out of them with possibilities.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 10, 2014

Today I decided not to do some things I really needed to do! Instead I spent time with my family just having fun. Hi, I'm Renee Swope for Proverbs 31 Ministries.

Every day I have a choice. Will I let my schedule be determined by laundry that's piling high, deadlines that are getting closer or even projects that have been waiting for months, or will I set aside time to spend with my family?

It's so easy for me to get swept up into what I need to get done. But then at the end of the day, I wonder where my time has gone, and what my kids and husband have been doing while I was on the computer or cleaning for hours.

I know God wants me to love and enjoy my family! Not just clean up after and work around them. So today I stopped doing so much and got intentional about being with them. We sat on the porch talking and went for a walk. At the end of the day, I felt great knowing where my time had gone.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 7, 2014

Prayer isn't crucial because it changes God but because it changes me! Hi, I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs 31 Ministries. Simple, heart felt prayers where I ask God to be with me, have an amazing way of filling in some really big gaps in my life.

When I pray, I see things more clearly. I realize perspectives otherwise beyond me.

And, I gain wisdom that can override my frail humanity. Sometimes when I pray I feel confident that I'm right, or am convicted that I'm wrong.

It's interesting that in order for God's peace to rule in my heart as mentioned in the Bible... I have to spend time with God!

Praying helps me do just that. And the really beautiful thing about praying for God to be a part of our day is that it can start at any time. Even right now.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 6, 2014

Does it ever feel like picking on each other is your kids' favorite pastime? Hi, I'm Renee Swope for Proverbs 31 Ministries.

The other day my friend Tracie and I were talking about how our kid's days can turn into one fight after another. After a day filled with irritating sibling rivalry, Tracie told me she pulled her daughter aside and explained to her that her brother is like a flower, and if she'd water him with love all day, instead of aggravating him, he'd flourish and his love for his sister would grow.

Well, it got me thinking about my kids being like flowers. And realizing that I need to water them with love everyday, so that they can flourish. My words are like seeds and they take root in their hearts and grow in their actions and attitudes. It motivated me to use encouragement instead of criticism, to shape the hearts and decisions of my children.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 5, 2014

I don't believe in chance. Hi, I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs 31 Ministries. I don't believe our lives are filled with random occurrences. I don't think we're supposed to brush past, rush away from and forget others so easily.

Today, I'm certain that I will come across somebody who needs me to feel for them, care for them, or love them in some way. Taking time to pause for them should be simple and practical.

Maybe I'll mention Jesus. But maybe I won't this time. It shouldn't be an awkward fumbling for the perfect salvation message quickly packaged up and spewed out. Just a pause filled with sincere love.

I'm passionate about leading people to Jesus. But I never want to reduce Jesus to a slick sales pitch where I rush to close the deal. I realize that sometimes I'm just supposed to love.

Radio Hostess : Renee Swope March 4, 2014

What do you tell your child who is worried? Hi, I'm Renee Swope for Proverbs 31 Ministries.

One morning my son Andrew, who was 8 at the time, came to me and said he didn't want to have ANY anxious thoughts that day! He didn't want to worry about me being there when he got home from school, or about his teacher liking his science project.

It broke my heart. Then I remembered some words from the Bible that encourage us to take every thought captive. But, that seemed like a really hard concept for a kid so I tried to put it in terms he could understand.

I told Andrew, "When you have a thought that makes you feel anxious, catch it like it's a baseball." I then cupped my hand like I was holding a ball and told him to look at it and ask, "Is this something Jesus would say to me?" If the answer is no, then throw that thought back into the outfield!

Andrew smiled really big and said – "Thanks Mom" – and I had a feeling it was going to be a better day.

Radio Hostess : Lysa TerKeurst March 3, 2014

Recently I've been studying what causes people to feel frustrated spiritually. Hi, I'm Lysa TerKeurst with Proverbs 31 Ministries. The top two reasons? Bible study and prayer.

I can clearly remember sitting in church sweating because everyone else knew instantly how to get to every passage in the Bible and I didn't.

And then there was my prayer life. Or the lack there-of. It's not that I didn't want to pray but the whole concept of talking to God felt weird. I tried copying others. But then somehow I felt foolish for what I'd just said to the God of the Universe.

So, over the years I've learned sincerity and simplicity are two keys to dismantling that spiritual frustration. A few honest moments spent with God reading the Bible and just talking openly to Him are really good life-changing steps.
