Guest: Tom Russell, Heritage Christian Counseling Ministries

Description: With school shootings, natural disaster, and other tragic events being played out on just about every electronic device our family's watch, Scott and Tom discuss how to talk with your children about the news they are seeing, based on an article from Tami Devine and Jannie DeBrito from Focus on the Family. Emphasis is placed on age-appropriate conversations. Tips include being careful with the first part of a newscast. News organizations approach of "If it bleeds it leads" can be traumatizing. Other tips include explaining that stories or video repeated does not mean the tragic event is happening again, helping older children process emotions, and teaching children that a news program is a "show" and "a business".
