11. The Need for Racial Reconciliation, Understanding and community tolerance/togetherness

In the days following the church shooting in South Carolina on June 17th, pastors of 2 very large churches planned a joint gathering. Hope Church is a predominately white church and Victory Missionary Baptist Church is a predominately African American church. The Senior Pastors of both churches came into the radio station to be on the morning show live together on June 29th, the morning of the planned gathering. Pastor Vance Pittman and Rev. Dr. Robert Fowler shared their personal perspective on the tragedy in SC, what we can learn from the days since and gave some of their thoughts on how our community can do a better job of understanding how much more we have in common than the things that can separate us. They talked about having concern and empathy for those who are victims of racism, and rising above past hurts to reach across the divisions and attempt to create a connection with one another, regardless of our race, that will result in our standing up for one another in the face of injustice and setting aside all forms of hatred that shape the way we treat one another. Dr. Fowler had a problem getting to the radio station at the appointed time, so Pastor Pittman was on live for 10 min at 9:05 am, discussing these things with Scott Herrold, Morning show host, and sharing the reason his church chose to extend the invitation to Dr. Fowler to hold the meeting at Hope Church. Dr. Fowler arrived late but was able to make it to the station and be part of the 25 min. conversation that took place live with both of them on the air at 10:05 am. It was a tremendously enlightening presentation that brought healing and an appreciation for our diversity giving encouragement to all of us to make a difference where we can in this national challenge.
