Topic: Adding tariffs before the ultimate negotiations

US President Trump suddenly announced that the United States will raise the tariff of 200 billion US dollars of Chinese goods from 10% to 25% on Friday, and does not rule out the imposition of tariffs on other commodities. Sino-US trade negotiations have currently entered a sprint stage. Market feared break down of the two countries' negotiations. Global stock markets in China and Hong Kong fell sharply yesterday. However, the Chinese Foreign Ministry said yesterday that "the Chinese team is preparing to go to the US for negotiations." Some analysts pointed out that Trump hopes to seek the best interests at the ultimate moment of negotiations and use the handcuffs to coerce the Chinese side to give in.

Topic: U.S. will impose punitive tariffs on Mexico due to border immigration disputes

Trump announced, during his Ireland trip, that the progress of the negotiations was "not enough" to revoke tariffs on Mexico. He quoted on Twitter that "if the agreement is not reached, the 5% tariff will take effect on Monday and then increase monthly according to plan." He made an unanticipated announcement last month that if Mexico "has not properly handled the immigration problem," the tariff on all goods in Mexico will increase by 5% per month until the 25% cap. Audiences shared their thoughts on this subject.

Topic: Hong Kong Civil Protests Marathon, G20 puts pressure on Xi Jinping

In the eight days of Hong Kong's civil protests, an estimated two million people have marched onto the streets of Hong Kong, an action shocked the rest of the world. United States has previously announced that US President Trump will discuss the Hong Kong issue with Chinese President Xi Jinping during G20 summit in Japan. A number of non-governmental organizations in Hong Kong visited several consulates hoping to get support from them before the G20 Summit, and a marathon fight will be continued in Hong Kong to give pressure. From tomorrow until Friday, a rally will be held, and the consulates of the participating countries will be petitioned. Hong Kong demonstrators hoping that the current situation in Hong Kong will alert international attention and exert pressure on Xi Jinping. "Withdraw the evil law and promote Hong Kong's political reform as soon as possible, and fully implement the universal suffrage." as they said.
