Topic: Why are Americans reluctant to wear masks

There are a variety of factors that contribute to Americans' reluctance to wear face coverings. At the start of the COVID19 pandemic, misinformation from around the world of the effectiveness of wearing/not wearing masks; then the scarce of availability of masks (saving for the essential and healthcare workers); then there's also the stereotypes mentally associating masks wearing with a sign of showing weakness and sick. With that said, social and cultural perceptions both contribute to the issue. Host and audiences shared conversations on the topic.
