Fourth Quarter 2012
Issues and Programming Report

SUNFLOWER BROADCASTING, INC.
KSCW-TV, WICHITA, KS

FOURTH QUARTER 2012

QUARTERLY SIGNIFICANT PROGRAMS REPORT

Covered the period beginning October 1, 2012
Ending December 31, 2012

Station KSCW is a CW Network affiliate in its service area. In carrying out its responsibilities as a public trustee, the station deals with and is responsive to the principal issues arising in its community on a continuing basis. A variety of specials, public service announcements, public affairs programs and broadcasts on matter of concern to our community are supplemented, in some cases, with in-community projects. Our most significant programming, which has dealt with current community issues during the preceding three-month period, is set forth below.

Specific Treatment of Community Issues

News stories carried in the M-F and Sunday 7am Morning Newscasts and the rebroadcast of the daily KWCH 10:00pm newscasts, Monday through Sunday, ranging in length of 45 seconds or more, address community issues.

News stories carried in the M-F 4pm and M-Sunday 9pm Newscasts ranging in length of 45 seconds or more, address community issues.

COMMUNITY ISSUES

Crime – Reports on criminal activity throughout the entire viewing area as well as the rest of the country and the world. Here we are listing just a few of the stories that were included in our newscast this quarter.

Community - Connecting with the all members of the community and serving their specific and special needs is important in a diverse culture. In Wichita, as in most communities, there is a need for the public and private organizations to contribute money, time, and services to important issues, organizations, and causes within their community. As a public medium, we carry a responsibility to let the community know about important causes that are worthy of public support.

Economy - The economy is of major importance to Kansas residents. Continuing growth keeps our employment rate high; new contract acquisitions by the local aircraft manufacturers, old businesses leaving town, new businesses coming in, proposed tax increases/decreases, and major weather concerns for residences and businesses. All of these factors impact the community, and are of ongoing interest and concern for our viewing audience.

Education – Coverage of educational issues in the viewing area including the various school districts, higher education facilities, and communities.

Environment - Environment issues and concerns are of interest are aired regularly in newscasts to keep viewers informed of the latest in Environmental technology, treatments, advisories, etc.

Health & Safety - In Wichita, as in most communities, there is a need for public awareness of certain public and personal safety issues, and as a public medium, it is our responsibility to help ensure that a message is disseminated.

Politics – Coverage of the issues and decisions by city, county and state government can affect them.

Formal charges are filed against the man accused of killing his girlfriend. 41-year old anson bernhardt is charged with first degree murder. He was formally charged today. Bernhardt was arrested monday in connection with the death of 38-year-old amber kostner. Her body was found over the weekend in a ditch near campus high school... Investigators say it appears kostner was beaten or hit with an object. Bernhardt's preliminary hearing is set for later this month.

10/10/12 9pm

A man arrested after a shoot-out in saline county... Now faces several charges it's the story we first brought you last night. Now police say this man, 30 year old jason gleason was booked for attempted murder and kidnapping. Though formal charges have not been filed. Gleason was also wanted in connection with a bank robbery in chase tuesday morning. Agents with the Kansas bureau of investigation say he was arrested at around 9-30 last night. Gleason is accused of robbing a rice county bank then shooting at a trooper in saline county. The k-b-i says five people were in the car during the shootout. Eyewitness news reporter pilar pedraza spent the day in the small town of chase... Where yesterday's events remain the main topic of conversation.

Gleason is the brother of this man...sidney gleason. In 2006 Sidney was sentenced to death for the 2004 murders of mikki martinez and darren wornkey in great bend. During the trial witnesses testified that sydney gleason wanted Martinez dead because he was afraid she would tell police about his involvement in a robbery.

People in Peabody can't believe someone would burglarize their town's youth center... Several valuables were taken---and they say there's no money to replace them. Eyewitness news reporter Jim Grawe found out the crime is not only a blow to the teenagers.... But also to those who worked so hard to make that center a reality. Christian Gard: Why would somebody want to do this to us kids? What did we do to you? That's the eight thousand dollar question. It's what the Hub---which is Peabody's non-profit teen center--is out after a break-in. These brackets on the wall, each television had a bracket behind it. This is how they came in. That entire glass was broken totally out. Gone are the TVs, video games....and all but one laptop computer. There was also cash...from a garage sale fundraiser....that had not yet been put in the bank. Fred Winsor: It was heartbreaking just hearing about it. Standup: This place opened six years ago. It was started by the local dentist and his wife who essentially funded the entire operation. Then a year and a half ago he passed away. I talked to his widow on the phone who is still very much involved here but she says this burglary has been so upsetting to her she just can't talk about it on TV. Nancy McLeod: I think because we've really been struggling since her husband passed away....whether we'd be able to stay open because funded almost everything by himself. Jim Pohlman 2:58:36 They even mortgaged their house--put their house up for collateral just so these youth could have this program. A program that has attracted a lot of teens who don't have computers...or video games.... At home.... Or much of anything else to do in this small town. Garret Schroeder 3:07:14 Instead of us just hanging out and getting in trouble we're here and parents could trust us and they knew we were here and for somebody to just take all that stuff---it hit me. Now the teens are brain storming ways to replace what was stolen....because they say this place is far too valuable to give up on. In Peabody, Jim Grawe KWCH 12 Eyewitness News.

Any one with details on that driver is encouraged to call police

10/21/12 7am

It's been a revealing week for the Boy Scouts of America - as they are ordered to release its so-called perversion files. Now we're learning more about Kansas' connection to this national story. Documents detailing the acts and names of people involved with the scouts who allegedly sexually abused children over the past five decades were released late this week.. We're finding out more about a former harvey county attorney, who refused to prosecute two such cases back in the the 60s. Records from the boy scouts suggest two kansas men were accused of molesting numerous boys - but were never charged, coming up in the next half hour .. Eyewitness news reporter jim grawe talks to a sexual abuse expert to see if these cover-ups are still possible today.

The naked man who Wichita police say attacked a woman in her home...and then barricaded himself inside...is expected to appear in court today. The attack happened Saturday in the 100-block of south lulu street. We sat down with the victim and her boyfriend. The woman tells us she feared for her life and is thankful to even be alive to describe what happened... He told me, he kept pulling on my arm trying to get me up and go to the bedroom and i told him at one point, no I'm not going, I will die first. The woman was finally able to call for help. Police say they still don't know why the man did this.

Sirens at the Hutchinson correctional facility go off... As an inmate escapes. They say 36-year-old juan marquez walked away from work detail. That happened around two this afternoon. Marquez has several counts of theft and burglary on his criminal record. Investigators say he was working at collins bus company when he walked away. It took about an hour for authorities to track him down and get him back in handcuffs.

Wichita police arrest 2 men in connection with a pair of early morning shootings police say the first shooting happened just after midnight. That's when one of the men started pounding on a door.... Then fired shots. About an hour later... Someone reported shots being fired from inside a car. Police caught up with the vehicle. Both men were arrested for drugs and possession of a firearm.

Hutchinson police want your help solving several cases of vandalism... More than 20 cases were reported over a few hours Tuesday night police say windows of businesses... Homes... And vehicles were shot out with a b-b gun the shooters even hit the cosmosphere."that's not fun. I don't understand what the point it. You just decide to go out and bash windows in. Like it's not fun for people." police say some of the cases may be connected.

We could learn more about a man arrested for setting a salina apartment complex on fire. "tracey hall" i had a thousand things going through my mind. To really say one thing, i don't know. My mind was just bobbled people who live at a salina apartment complex say Thursday was full of confusion and fear. The fire put more than a dozen people out of their homes... And police say it is a case of arson. Investigators say a person who lives in this apartment complex had a guest over... And that guest started fires in a bedroom and bathroom with a hand-held torch. Officers arrested that man... Most of the damage was from smoke... The red cross is helping people who need a temporary place to stay.

We begin tonight with a car chase that ends in a crash. Wichita police tried to stop a stolen car this morning, with two people suspected of stealing copper wiring inside. After reaching speeds of 90-miles per hour, the driver drove off the road near 13th and eye-135, hit a cement pillar and tried to run from officers into the canal route. He was arrested. Officers say the driver and female passenger face numerous charges.

Neighbors use the only weapon they had to stop a burglary... A pitch-fork the attempted burglary happened Saturday.... In the 26-hundred block of south cheyenne - near pawnee and hillside. Eyewitness news reporter sia nyorkor shows us how neighbors took action. They took their opportunity, trouble is, it was the wrong time to take their opportunity. robert craig and his work partner, joe moore were getting ready for a job when they got the call. It was a neighbor girl who called them to say she saw strangers inside another neighbor's house. Thinking quickly, the landscapers grabbed the only weapons they had...a shovel and a pitchfork from the back of robert's truck. The teens took off running -- so did robert and joe. Tell me, what did you do? I'm nervous, I'm on the phone with 911, i'm getting ready for someone to come over, i'm like, there they are, they're coming over now, i grab my pitchfork, i'm ready to throw it, he's down in the ravine, i just keep running, i'm past the fence, he's down and i go like that! Joe says he's thankful he didn't actually hit anyone. Police got there and arrested the teens. They were hiding in the neighborhood. Robert says the true credit goes to the little girl who saw something suspicious and called for help. She told me exactly, i see robbers, i see robbers, they're in the window...she deserves 100% of the credit. And the whole neighborhood is reacting. The bennet boys live across the street. They have their own idea for punishment. I hope they make them clean it up because we do know they've already been arrested so make them to clean it up. In south wichita, sia nyorkor, kwch 12 eyewitness news.

The shooting at Sandy Hook elementary has started a new debate on gun control in our country. Tara Mergener is in Washington D.C. this morning, with the latest push by the N-R-A. Protestors marched across the Brooklyn Bridge asking for new gun control laws. And there were demonstrations outside a gun shop in a Washington, D.C. suburb. "to allow these kinds of guns that have no other purpose than to murder, slaughter innocent people and children is just insane." but fear of new gun control laws has made the weapons one of the hottest selling items this Christmas. "I'm definitely trying to stock up and buy items I potentially won't be able to get in the future. "It's funny, two weeks ago you coulda bought one gun for 14-hundred dollars and now it's 24, 27-hundred dollars, it's jumped up like crazy." The debate about gun control laws is just as heated here on Capitol Hill. And the N-R-A...one of the most effective lobbying organizations in Washington...says it will fight *any* new gun control laws. "what every mom and dad - what will make them feel better - when they drop their kid off in school in January is if we have a police officer in that school." but the reaction to that plan was mixed among the parents we spoke with. "I think any effort to protect our children is worth it." "No, we don't want people with guns in our schools, whether deranged gunmen or armed policemen." Senator Dianne Feinstein plans to present a bill banning assault weapons this January when the new Congress convenes. But Mr. Lapiere points out there was a ban in place from 1994 until 2004. "it hasn't worked. Dianne Feinstein had her ban and Columbine occurred." there was also an armed guard at Columbine and he couldn't stop the killings. Either Tara Mergener for CBS News, Washington.

A group of Kansans took off for the storm zone today....ready to help in the aftermath. Nine red cross volunteers flew out of mid-continent en route to albany, new york. From there....they'll be dispatched to wherever area needs them most.. The volunteers only had a few hours to prepare for their trip, because the travel window to get out east safely was starting to narrow. We're trying to get folks out to what could very well be the affected area before the hurricane hits. That's one thing we don't want is, have it hit and then have airports not be able to receive our volunteers in. The volunteers will help provide food, water, shelter and first aid to storm victims if needed.

We just want to be left alone and scary. We don't want to be bothered. Hundreds of zombies took over Tanganyika zoo today. It was all part of a charity run put on by consumer credit counseling services. But this wasn't your typical five -K- Runners had to go through obstacles and dodge zombies throughout the course. It's not your traditional road race, but something we think everyone will enjoy tremendously. Runners wore flag football belts -- if the zombies got their flags, the runner was out of the race. About 16 hundred people took part in the event.

A young Kansas girl dies after suffering from leukemia. Taylor hearsche (hershey) was 15-years-old the teen was being treated at children's mercy hospital in Kansas city and wanted to live out her final days at home--in Mulvane. The people in the town were planning a homecoming.... When they got news of her death. Now many say, the celebration of her life will go on---as was her wish. Eyewitness news reporter sia nyorkor takes us there. She was amazing, she brought smiles to everybody>so many words to describe a young woman who lived such a short life. Taylor heersche was just 15 years-old when she died.the teen had been battling leukemia for four and a half years. She died Tuesday morning.now people in her hometown aren't mourning her death---but celebrating her life... The way taylor wanted it.<it's still a homecoming in our eyes, it's just a different home that she's going to, a better home that she's going to. If you drive down main street here in Mulvane, you'll see that residents have tied these ribbons around trees, lamp posts and signs for Taylor. Orange is the official color for leukemia. Taylor requested that everyone wear the t-shirts she designed to describe the community that put their arms around while she was sick. <there of course is grief but not that it's selfish but the grief is mainly for us, we're so happy for taylor> and although they'll miss her, they're happy to know that taylor says she's in a better place. A highway patrol trooper finds something unusual on the Kansas turnpike. The turnpike tweeted this... If you lost furniture on the turnpike a couple nights ago, let us know. P-s we have your cat, too. The trooper found her Tuesday night. She was in a crate along mile post 68...just a couple of miles north of the Towanda service area. The kitty is not hurt and she's very friendly. She's just been hanging out in the turnpike office. She's quiet, awfully sweet, spent the night with the trooper and he said she did have a few things to say in the evening throughout the night but during the day she's pretty quiet... Oh, oh... > the turnpike already has offers for a new home for the cat...but it wants to return her to her family if that's possible. If you think that's your kitty...you should call the Kansas turnpike in Wichita. Turnpike officials will ask the owners to identify what else they lost.

We know stores will be busy the next few days. But they're not the only places... Wichita hospitals are preparing for a lot of patients too. Eyewitness news reporter Brian Heap shows us how they're getting ready. Stand up: sometimes it's just a simple case of overeating. Sometimes it much more serious. There's no quicker way to ruin your thanksgiving holiday than will a visit to the er." "it's the emergency department so there's no special holiday for us. It's always the same business." track: doctor jeff bell has worked the emergency room at via christi for more than two years. He says there's no time for turkey and football here. "Some days you just get a huge volume and you just try to monitor and we do the best we can." track: dr. Bell says the exam rooms will fill up quickly and the nurse's station will be bustling. More people coming to Wichita from out of town means more people to potentially get sick. And thanksgiving dinner is often the culprit. "i think a lot of people kind of tend to indulge. So they overeat and then they get a lot more nausea. So we tend to see that more often. And then food poisoning. I think most people can recognize undercooked meat and stay away from it. But i think it's jsut because people are eating more foods." track: that's in addition to the viral infections, heart attacks and broken bones that are common throught the year. "there's always issues with staffing. But i think we try to have a schedule to prepare for those things. Physicians have a back-up call schedule and so we try to move things through." track: the e-r doctors hope you don't need them, bt they'll be ready if you do. Brian heap, kwch 12 eyewitness news.

Religion and public schools---it's a relationship that continues to evolve. What was accepted for decades in the valley center school district...is no longer. Eyewitness news reporter Jim Grawe tells us about these changes and what they could mean for students. That's new at nine. Playing basketball is a big part school life for senior Shannon crow. But so is prayer and bible study with her classmates in the fellowship of Christian athletes. As a Christian, i think its great that we can get together as a group of students and just be in fellowship with each other and encourage one another as we go through our everyday lives. Though...some policies are changing. Standup: the 50 valley center students involved with fellowship of Christian athletes will still be able to bring their bibles and gather here on school grounds, but the district is making some changes in the way fca operates here after a parent raised some concerns. Cory Gibson superintendent 9:25:48 the changes are pretty minimal. Superintendent cory gibson says the changes are in line with what most districts do with regard to fca. The teacher who serves as sponsor will no longer get special pay for it. The sponsor also cannot lead the group meetings. And handouts cannot use the valley center district letterhead or email addresses. Fellowship of Christian athletes state director Kevin wade says it sounds like the changes won't have a drastic effect. He says he's never heard of a district not allowing school email to be used for fca...but says he can see why they're doing it. Gibson says the school board's attorney helped craft the changes to practices that didn't used to face legal scrutiny. There's case law, there's precedent set, so in the past there probably wasn't as much guidance on the gray areas, whats right and what's wrong--as time has gone on courts have sided with one side or the other it gives us more direction, more specifics on the way we should do it. Meanwhile crow says her group will continue to fit in well at valley center high. A charity event in old town raises thousands of dollars for the leukemia-lymphoma society sunday. Artist auctioned off their work after painting live in old t0wn.. Eyewitness news reporter anne meyer talked with the artist michael potts.... And finds out more about his passion for this cause. Michael potts 802-12 the process is, there is really no process, the way i like to say it is that its like grouping lots of little tiny pictures together 12 instead of overwhelming yourself with the entire picture you just kinda narrow your focus down to just one spot 31 they call that in art class, gesture painting that's kinda the process i use anyway this is captain jack sparro it's one of six paintings michael potts will create today, all will be auctioned off to raise money for the charity i started the campaign because i lost a brother to cancer last year 32, he wasn't a brother but he was my brother but anyway -- his sister and i are both really active in leukemia lymphoma 42 he hopes the money raised at this event will help lead to a cure this is a great way of doing it, i think people are fascinated by art 14 Anne Meyer this is another project of potts, it's van gogh's starry night but when you take a closer look, each one is a name of someone affected by cancer that is exactly the process that i am doing here, but in the shapes we are using the names of the people who fought, died or still battling cancer 19 i think the hardest part is talking while i paint, no the hardest part, i don't know if there is a hard part its just fun 45 about a half hour into the painting, it's time to add the color. It really eats up the negative space in it and does really help it pop out thats why i always wait until the last because its kinda like the grand finale 53.

Few of us were even alive when they originally hung now some long forgotten pieces of art are placed back-on display. Eyewitness news reporter jim Grawe shows us why they're coming out after 60 years of hiding. He would be so excited, yet he would be so humbled. He...is felix jones. A painter who lived in Wichita in the 1930s. Jones was commissioned to paint these murals that hung in the original wichita airport terminal. That terminal building later became the Kansas aviation museum....where they hang once again....after sitting in storage for 60 years. Lon smith: i learned about these paintings about three and a half years ago and had no idea what they were and finally got a look at them and said, hey these are special. Executive director lon smith painted this likeness of jones....on the wall of this room that is now fully dedicated to the artist, his life and these two paintings. One depicts the pioneer days in Wichita---the other depicts contemporary life of the 1930s. Jones' daughters came from Colorado. They just recently found out these paintings existed. Judy Gardner: 10:41:34 to get a phone call and then to know what it's about and to step in this room. I just about can't stop crying. Lidanne sandberg: 10:47:11 i think they're magnificent. I love the style, i love the colors, i love what it stands for. I thought they were beautiful. Jones left wichita shortly after painting the murals.... He died in Hawaii in 1974. But now his life and his connection to wichita are remembered and honored. Judy Gardner 10:44:02 it's such a wonderful wonderful thing that you all are doing. It's just unbelievable. As these long forgotten images of Wichita's history are back on display for all to see. In Wichita jim Grawe kwch 12 eyewitness news.

It's operation holiday....where thousands of needy families can pick up coats, toys and food.....33xq we going grocery shopping. Things to help make the holiday season brighter. 46ur got me some mac and cheese, it's the stuff nya bright and patricia bannister say this will make their christmas a lot merrier. Nya bright 12:13:50 i'm new here to wichita so this is a blessing for me and my family. Patricia bannister: 12:15:30 i'm very thankful. My kids are going to be grateful. This year a lot of the thanks goes to the students at st. Thomas aquinas school. The kids collected 21 thousand cans of food---the biggest single donation operation holiday has ever received. Father duling: 14:53:00 it's going to help the poor. And that's what i've tried to explain to the kids. We need to help the poor in all that we do and we're going to have a very blessed Christmas. This was a last minute thing---after word spread that operation holiday was way behind on donations. And the kids answered in a big way. We let them know on tuesday night. We got them all rallied together and wednesday and now it's Thursday all this came just in time for the first day of holiday giveaway organized by four of the city's largest charities. It was huge, especially to come the day of distribution. We weren't expecting it. Standup: those on the receiving end here through Saturday have all preregistered. But those who haven't signed up will get their chance next monday and Tuesday if they're in need to stop by here and pick up some things to make the holidays a little brighter for their families. It's at 21st and amidon, here in Wichita. Jim grawe kwch 12 eyewitness news

The bombardier learjet strike is over this afternoon, workers approved their new contract by a 70-percent majority. They've been on the picket lines since early october, and many are ready to get back on the production line but eyewitness news reporter sia nyorkor found out not everyone is happy with this new deal. The majority has spoken for the machinists and some say they're relieved to get off the picket lines and back into work. Linda wiley/striker "i don't think any of us got everything we wanted...you're not going to ever get everything that you want but it's better." hundreds of striking workers filed into the union hall saturday afternoon and voted on a new contract. Machinist union members rejected bombardier's first offer mainly because of an increase in healthcare costs and a decrease in pay raises. Vernon jennings/striker "i mean one percent raise? The insurance is going to eat that up. If you go to the hospital one time, you're out the box. No, i don't like it all." but a federal mediator stepped in and negotiated a deal. Bombardier workers say they can live with this new contract. Frank mollina/president/district 70 "there's a big difference than what we originally received on oct. 8 and there's a big difference of where we're at, there's a lot of gains." this was the second and longest strike for bombardier here in wichita. Wichita is known as the air capital... But the city could soon get a new title. Eyewitness news reporter Michael schwanke shows us the new industry that's putting Wichita on the map. Here's the list--the study comes from the bay area economic institute in California and it's a list companies pay attention to. Here we are--Wichita is number 6 in the nation--with just under 15 percent of our jobs...in the tech field. Our company includes san jose, boulder, seattle. Even the study says you may be surprised to find Wichita on the list--but the companies and experts we talked to today says you shouldn't be. It didn't really surprise me. Net app general manager joel reich says Wichita was a good move. We see a lot of potential in Wichita and talent in Wichita that will position us well in the future. Net app--which spans hundreds of thousands of feet on Wichita's northeast side specializes in data storage. Based in california--this high tech company consistently ranks among the best places to work in the nation--and is growing. We joined the fortune 500 a big part of that growth is here...where the company plans to add 400 or more high tech jobs over the next five years. When you look at high tech we've had a base of high tech here. Jeremy hill with Wichita state's center for economic development says he's not surprised either. We are very skilled and technical already many of the high tech jobs are in the aerospace industry--so we have the people--hill says studies like this help with another issue.. The one problem we have is the image we have the image of being out here in the midwest.it helps it gives companies a new look. They say we need these positions where can i go? Wichita. Something net app figured out months ago. It didn't surprise me i was glad to see someone else saw it not that i want competition but it's a good thing it keeps you on your toes. A new app available sometime early next year... Will enhance the learning experience for students. Mike hydeck explains. He's found a way to take the fear out of raising your hand in class. Ask your question in the hallway instead. The name came from the idea that some really amazing profound learning happens outside the classroom in the metaphorical hallway. Hallway is a social media type site where you load your classroom in and the site connects you with students in your school and eventually around the world. You can add an event to Thursday, November eighth and say i have a test and anybody else studying can see that. Post your question and get a slew of answers from other students taking the subject. You can change your settings. Thomas jefferson high school senior created the site with a tj alum. The project had so much promise, Microsoft got interested and got another team from springbrook high school in maryland to develop the mobile app. The all-student project is really taking off. Classes are loaded in, you can either add them on the website or in the app. Every student has that kind of fear about asking that one question that seems so straight forward but you don't get it and you don't want to be that one student that doesn't get it. So everyone has that fear and having an app like this that kind of abolishes that fear is really welcoming to students. Investors were really welcoming too. He may only be 17 but sean mcelrath has already made pitches to venture capitalists and angel investors. Listen to how it went. A group of Kansas high school students is in israel right now. Word of the cease-fire brings a sigh of relief to friends and family back home. Eyewitness news reporter Jim grawe has the story. These are the sights of sounds of israel we've been seeing on the news recently not far from all this...is half the senior class from sunrise Christian academy in bel aire. That includes Debbi harp's daughter, luci and her cheer leading squad. Debbi harp: i was watching the news Monday and my son and my other daughter we like, mom just turn it off, just turn it off, you don't want to watch it. Harp says the school superintendent was monitoring developments closely leading up to the group's departure on Sunday and since arriving in israel luci has been posting photos on Facebook...that capture a different mood than the video we've been watching on tv luci talked to her mom Tuesday from Jerusalem. She has said the bomb sirens have gone off but they don't feel endangered at all.she told me she's having a blast. She's really exhausted and worn out but everything's going well. Luci has told her mom...the missiles have been striking in remote areas....nowhere near the students. And now there appears to be calm. When i spoke with luci yesterday she mentioned that was a possibility that a cease fire was going to be declared, so it's good know that it has been. A Christian organization will change the way it operates in the valley center school district. The teacher sponsor for the "fellowship of Christian athletes" will no longer get special pay from the district. The organization cannot use school emails or letterhead. The group will continue to use school facilities and meet as usual. The district made changes after a parent questioned whether the old rules were legal. as time has gone on courts have sided with one side or the other it gives us more direction, more specifics on the way we should do it. The school board's attorney helped with the changes. About 50 students are involved with the group in valley center

Expect big changes in the temperatures heading into the second half of the week as a cool, Canadian airmass settles over the area. Skies will be clear overnight with light winds and temperatures dropping into the mid and upper 40s for lows. Some high clouds will overspread the area on Wednesday and temperatures will warm up into the 80s with south/southwest winds across the state. The warmest temperatures will be in western Kansas where highs will climb into the upper 80s for a few areas. The strong cold front will push through the area Wednesday night and by Thursday, highs will only be in the 60s for much of the state. Gusty north winds will make it feel even cooler. Some clouds will be around on Thursday, but much of the state should remain dry. Frost is possible this weekend in Kansas. Stay tuned.

10/3/12            9pm

A cold front will sweep across Kansas overnight bringing an abrupt end to the warmer weather we saw today. Behind the front on Thursday we will see increasing clouds, gusty north winds and temperatures that will be 15 to 30 degrees colder than today. There will be some sprinkles Thursday night but no significant rainfall is expected. Friday will be mostly cloudy and even chillier than Thursday. Friday night will bring another chance for some light rain showers. We will see decreasing clouds on Saturday with temperatures even colder than on Friday. Be ready to protect tender plants on Saturday night as readings dip into the upper 20s in the northwest to mid 30s in the southeast.

10/4/12            7am

Say so long to Wednesday's summer warmth and hello to autumn's chill because it will be a different weather world Thursday. A strong cold front will plow all the way through southeast corner of Kansas by Thursday afternoon ushering in much colder temperatures and gusty northerly winds but little if any rain. Highs Thursday will range from the mid-50s over the northwest to mid 60s for south-central Kansas. North winds will be rather gusty, especially in the morning making it feel even cooler. Thicker clouds will be found over central and eastern Kansas while some sunshine is still expected out west. Temperatures will continue to tumble Saturday when afternoon highs fall into the low to mid-50s as the coldest air of the season so far over-spreads our region. The chilly Canadian air-mass will mean areas of frost are possible across parts of Kansas this weekend along with some freezing drizzle or flurries especially out west.

10/5/12            8am

Mostly cloudy to partly cloudy skies are forecast for the area today as a chilly Friday unfolds. Highs are expected to reach the 40s and 50s. Tonight, the clouds will thicken up with some light rain mixed with snow in the far west. If there is any accumulation of snow, it would be an inch or less on grassy areas in the NW. A Freeze Watch is out for southwest Kansas Saturday morning. A cold Saturday is on the way with highs in the 40s and 50s again. A hard freeze is expected for parts of Kansas Saturday night into Sunday morning. A number of counties in Kansas are covered by a Freeze Watch. Lows will drop to the middle and upper 20s to lower 30s.

10/6/12            9pm

As the clouds depart overnight, the temperatures will drop below freezing for much of the area, bringing and end to the growing season for many areas. The light snow and sprinkles over northern Kansas will be ending and the clouds will slowly depart. Winds will be going calm and by early Sunday, much of Kansas will be in the upper 20s. Wichita will be close to 30, which should be a new record for the city. Sunday looks like a brighter day with mostly sunny skies and light southwest winds. Temperatures will be in the 55-60 degree range for much of the state. Temperatures will continue on a warming trend into Monday as highs will be close to 70 for the start of the new week.

A very cold start to our Sunday morning, might require a jacket as you head out the door to get the paper, walk the dog or rush off to morning services. Freeze and Hard Freeze warning remain in place statewide through 9 A.M. Sunshine will make it feel a little warmer today even though our highs are only expected to be in the 50s. Another cold night with clear skies and light winds. Overnight lows in the 30s. Sunny skies will prevail for Columbus Day and a warming trend begins. Peeling off layers of clothing will be the trend throughout the day as we start out in the 30s, and end the day in the upper 60s and low 70s. To have such a swing in temperatures in Kansas, you need the sun this time of year, and the wind. Expect it to be a little gusty during the afternoon. The warmer (actually closer to normal for October) weather will persist this week, even with a couple of weather systems moving through the state. Dry weather can be expected for the first half of the week, while moisture returns to the state Thursday through Saturday.

10/8/12 8am

A pleasant Monday is on the way as a sunny to mostly sunny sky is forecast. It'll turn breezy with highs near 70 degrees. A milder night is on the way with mostly clear skies and lows in the 40s for most areas. A cold front will begin to invade northwest Kansas tomorrow morning and end up past Wichita in the mid-afternoon. Another breezy day is forecast, but this time that breeze will be developing out of the north. Highs will reach the 60s in the west with lower 70s here in Wichita. Rain and storm chances will pick late Thursday and last through Saturday. Highs will be in the 70s.

10/9/12 4pm

A group that opposes adding fluoride to Wichita's water is protesting a flier from the Sedgwick County health department. The flier is a "fact sheet"... Listing information about fluoride... But members of "fluoride free Kansas" say...the health department is advocating fluoridation. The health department says it's just stating the facts...but later this afternoon it removed the information from its website at the direction of three county commissioners. The issue will be on the general election ballot in Wichita.

10/10/12 9pm

A storm system approaching from the west coast will bring increasing storm chances to the area for the end of the week. Clouds will increase overnight, but dry weather is expected statewide. Lows will be in the 40s around the area, but should stay in the low 50s in the Wichita area. Expect a partly cloudy sky Thursday around much of the state. However, southcentral Kansas will likely stay mostly cloudy throughout the day. A cold front will slide into central Kansas Thursday afternoon, so temperatures over northern Kansas will be in the mid to upper 60s, while southern Kansas will be near 80. Scattered storms are expected over southern Kansas Thursday night, but could develop just about anywhere on Friday. Isolated severe storms are possible in central and western Kansas Friday afternoon. Stay tuned.

10/11/12 7am

Morning clouds will give way to partly cloudy skies. A cold front will sink southeast into central Kansas, so temperatures will be cooler: in the 60s and 70s across the north and west. Wichita will be south of that front, so expect an afternoon high near 80 degrees. As the front drifts past Wichita and stalls out near the Oklahoma border, it will help in touching off some showers and storms, most likely after Midnight. This will be the start of an active weather pattern as a storm system approaches Kansas from the southwest. More showers and storms will fire up in western Kansas late Friday afternoon into Friday evening, then work northeast. Storms should affect eastern Kansas late Friday night into Saturday. Large hail and hail winds will be the main concerns.

10/12/12 8am

Early Friday morning a stalled front over northern Oklahoma sparked an area of fading showers and storms. Friday afternoon, the best chances for scattered showers and a few strong storms will be found across western Kansas, as the front lifts northward into Nebraska. Some of the storms will produce large hail and wind gusts over 60 mph and will most likely be moving east/northeast. Temperatures north of the Friday afternoon's warm front will be quite cool over central and northern Kansas, mainly 60s, while highs across the south top out in the low to mid-70s. Everyone across Kansas will have a chance for storms Friday night into Saturday morning as a powerful storm system kicks out of the southern Rockies. The Saturday system will spread the threat for severe storms along and east of I-135, a Salina to Wichita line, by midday. Hail, wind, and isolated tornadoes will all be possible Saturday afternoon with the stronger storms. It will be windy, warm and humid with highs between 75-80. The risk for severe storms will be end early Saturday evening and Sunday looks dry and mild.

10/13/12 9pm

Thunderstorms in eastern Kansas will continue their weakening trend this evening. Spotty showers and storms are also scattered over western Kansas but they are weakening too. The cold front that helped produce the storms today will move southeastward overnight, ushering in some drier air for the next few days. Temperatures will be above normal from Sunday through Wednesday and then take a bit of a dip for the latter part of the week. Rain chance after tonight will be near zero except for late in the day on Wednesday.

10/14/12            7am

The upper level storm system that produced storms across Kansas yesterday, is moving a little slower than expected and continues to exit the state this morning. Scattered showers and storms continue to plague northeast Kansas with some clouds as far west as central Kansas. On the back side of this system today skies should become mostly sunny for the majority of Kansas and temperatures will remain mild. Highs will be in the 70s statewide. Clear skies, low humidity and light winds tonight will allow temperatures to drop into the 40s to near 50 as we start our Monday morning. A warming trend and dry weather conditions are expected for the first half of the week with temperatures in the 80s, while chilly weather is on the way for the later half. There is a slight chance of showers with a cold front on Wednesday, however the next seven days look rather dry.

10/16/12            9pm

A cold front will sweep across the state overnight bringing an end to the warm weather we have experienced the last couple of days. Cooler temperatures and strong north to northwest winds will be with us on Wednesday and Thursday. Fire danger will be in the extreme category the next couple of days due to the strong winds and low humidities. As the winds diminish on Friday the temperatures begin a warming trend that will last through the weekend. We will have a slight chance for some showers and thunderstorms Monday night.

Warmer than average temperatures will be the theme of our weather to close out the weekend and start the new week. A few clouds will pass through Kansas overnight, but dry weather continues with lows in the mid 40s west/mid 50s central and east. Light south winds are expected. Sunday will be warmer around much of the area. Highs above 80 should be expected with mostly sunny skies, except in the northwest where a weak cold front will change the winds to the north and keep temperatures in the mid 70s. Monday looks mild and dry for our area. A few thunderstorms may develop in far eastern Kansas, but they will remain spotty and most of us will see a fair amount of sun for the afternoon. Temperatures will be in the upper 70s to around 80 with winds under 20 mph regionwide. Big changes are expected in the weather toward the end of the week. Stay tuned.

Partly cloudy skies will return to Kansas overnight with a few locations even seeing mostly cloudy conditions. It will be another mild and muggy night also. Wednesday will bring mostly sunny to partly cloudy skies along with more warmth and humidity. High temperatures will range from around 70 in the northwest to the mid 80s in the south. Gusty south winds will be found over all but the northwest. A cold front will sweep across the state Wednesday night accompanied by scattered showers and thunderstorms in central and eastern parts of Kansas. Behind the front on Thursday we will have mostly cloudy skies with temperatures steady to slowly falling. The colder air will hang around through the weekend.

10/29/12            4pm

An opponent of fluoride spoke in Wichita today... Hoping to sway undecided voters before next week's election in Wichita. Doctor Paul Connett has published books about the effects of fluoride... He says more research into those effects is needed before fluoride is added to drinking water. While he urges Wichita voters to reject a proposal to add fluoride to their water... He admits some who support his position are using scare tactics...instead of science. It hurts us a lot...when people go out there ranting and raving about Hitler using it in concentration camps... Which there's no proof for. It hurts us because we have the science on our side. > the issue is on Wichita ballots in next week's election.

New York City slowly starts to re-open... It could be several days before hundreds of thousands get power. The new york stock exchange is back open his morning after closing for two days.jfk international airport and newark airport are back open laguardia airport is under water and closed this morning.

11/1/12 8am

New york city's mass transit is back up and running... New York's governor has suspended fares on all trains, subways, and busses. Some bus routes and train lines will stay closed as crews clean up the damage from sandy.

11/4/12 7am

Today will be similar to yesterday, with mostly sunny skies and slightly warmer temperatures. High clouds will be on the increase across the northern half of the state, with skies becoming partly cloudy to mostly cloudy by evening. Afternoon highs will reach the 60s to near 70. A weak disturbance and cold front will move into Kansas overnight, increasing clouds statewide. This will keep temperatures in the upper 30s and 40s by daybreak. Slight cooler temperatures on Monday with breezy conditions in the wake of a cold front. Clouds will be thickest along and to the east of Interstate 135 and the turnpike. Northerly winds will make it feel even cooler as gusts approach 25-30 m.p.h. Highs will reach the 50s east, to the mid 60s in the southwest. A slow warm up will ensue the rest of the work week as highs will eventually climb back into the 70s. Southerly winds will crank up by Thursday, ahead of an approaching storm system expected by the weekend.

It has been a beautiful Election Day across Kansas with sunshine and some high clouds. As a surface area of high pressure moves into eastern Kansas tonight, we expect generally clear skies. Lows should bottom out in the 30s statewide. Look for light north winds in the east and a returning south breeze for the west. For Wednesday, we'll have plenty of sunshine as south winds turn breezy in the west. Highs will warm into the 60s and 70s, with the warmest readings for the west. The warm up will persist through Saturday as highs reach the 70s. The weekend storm system still looms for Kansas, bringing showers and storms in the central and east. Some light rain is possible in the west, perhaps mixing with a little bit of light snow or flurries in the northwest. Amounts do not look heavy at all though in the west. A dramatic cool down will work in for the second half of the weekend.

A quiet night is ahead for Kansas with clear skies. Lows will drop into the 30s and 40s. Sunny to mostly sunny skies will prevail for Thursday as highs warm into the 60s and 70s. Gusty south winds will develop for central and eastern Kansas. Even more wind and warmth will be around Friday and Saturday as highs climb into the mid and upper 70s to the lower 80s. Some record highs are possible both days and gusty southerly winds will be common. The windy weather is forecast out ahead of a powerful storm which will organize over the western U.S. This weather system will bring showers and storms to central and eastern Kansas late Saturday, with isolated severe weather possible. Some light rain is possible out west, which will mix with snow flurries Saturday night into Sunday morning. Significant, measurable snow is not expected at this time. Temperatures will tumble hard across our entire region Sunday and Monday with afternoon highs in the 30s and 40s!

11/8/12 7am

More very pleasant weather is on the way to Kansas Thursday with warm temps and blue skies and gusty winds followed by more of the same Friday and Saturday. Sunny to mostly sunny skies will prevail Thursday as highs warm into the upper-60s and lower-70s along with gusty southerly winds for central and eastern Kansas. We can expect even more wind and warmth Friday and Saturday as highs climb into the upper-70s and lower 80s. A few record highs will be possible both days as gusty southerly winds continue to howl. Our windy, warm, dry weather is out ahead of a powerful storm which will organize over the Rockies Friday then plow out into the central US this weekend. The potent system will bring showers and storms to central and eastern Kansas late Saturday with isolated storms possible. Light rain out west will mix with light snow or flurries for some late Saturday night into Sunday morning but a significant snowfall is not expected at this time. Temperatures will tumble hard across our entire region Sunday and Monday with afternoon highs only in the 30s and 40s!

11/9/12 8am

More warm, very windy weather is on the way to Kansas Friday and Saturday with a mix of clouds and sun, gusty winds and highs in the mid-70s to lower-80s. A few record highs will be possible both days as gusty southerly winds will likely howl at nearly 40 mph at times Saturday. Our warm, windy, dry weather will come to an abrupt end later this Saturday night as a powerful storm organizing over the Rockies Friday plows out into the Plains this weekend. The potent system will bring showers and storms to central and eastern Kansas late Saturday with isolated storms possible. Light rain out west will mix with light snow or flurries for some late Saturday night into Sunday morning but a significant snowfall is not expected at this time. Temperatures will be in a free-fall mode after the storm system passes through Kansas with afternoon highs tumbling hard and only topping out in the 30s and 40s Sunday and Monday.

11/12/12 8am

People in New York and New Jersey still have no power. It's been two weeks since Hurricane Sandy hit. Here's the latest this morning... About 120-thousand homes and businesses are still in the dark. Some power grids are working, but utility company officials say it's still not safe to connect the homes, because the wiring and other equipment was flooded.

11/13/12 4pm

The slight warming trend that started earlier in the week should continue through Wednesday. Clouds will be moving out overnight with lows in the mid and upper 20s. The wind is expected to be light throughout the state. Mostly sunny skies will be the rule on Wednesday with south winds under 20 mph. Temperatures across Kansas will be topping out near 60. A weak cold front will drift into the area Thursday, bringing more clouds and changing the winds back to the northwest. Afternoon temperatures will be in the mid to upper 50s behind the front. Dry and tranquil weather will continue into the weekend.

11/14/12 9pm

High clouds will thicken up a bit overnight in response to a weather feature moving southeastward through the northern Plains. This system won't bring any moisture for the drought-stricken Sunflower State. Expect lows in the 20s and 30s. Clouds will be rather thick to start your Thursday but more sunshine will break out by afternoon for places like Dodge City and Goodland. A weak cold front will also be working through the state, so expect northerly winds behind the front and highs in the 50s. Ahead of the front, we'll see partly cloudy skies and highs reaching the wonderful 60s! The dry and mild weather will roll on through the weekend. There will be a few more clouds Sunday and Monday in southern Kansas with highs mostly in the 60s.

11/15/12 7am

A weak front will push across Kansas Thursday, unfortunately it will not bring us any moisture simply shifting winds, more clouds for a time and slightly cooler temps for some. We'll see plenty of clouds to start our Thursday but sunshine will break through the gray skies by afternoon out west. As the weak front works its way through our area, winds will become northerly behind and highs will fall back into the low to mid-50s. Ahead of the front, look for partly cloudy skies and highs around 60. Dry and quiet, mild weather will continue through the weekend and into early next week so our long drought will continue. There will be more cloud cover Sunday and Monday across southern Kansas but afternoon highs will still be in the low to mid-60s.

Hurricane Sandy uncovers part of Virginia's past. Mike Mather has more on what island residents are now seeing... Days after Hurricane Sandy churned the Chesapeake Bay and battered Tangier, Carol Moore went for a walk. A part of Tangier Island, even at low tide, is barely above the waves. No one lives there, but it wasn't always like that. "A thriving community. My great grandfather owned a general store up here. And there was a school and a church," says Carol. A hurricane in the 1930s forced out the townspeople. They retreated to the main part of Tangier, leaving behind the artifacts of their lives. Time and tide washed them away, or buried them, until recently. Among the shells and the driftwood, Carol spotted bottles, a button and then bones. "I was just walking along the shore and ran across five graves and three skeletons, a couple skulls and lots of bones," says Carol. This section of Tangier Island, already ravaged by centuries of storms, took another severe blow from hurricane sandy. The erosion uncovered pieces of the island's past, including a graveyard. You can see the outlines of the caskets on what is now the beach. The button is from a child's burial shirt; his tiny skeleton now exposed to the bay. The recently uncovered headstones show the burials were for the pruit family in the 1800s. The graveyard was once well inland, but now the tide laps against it. A look into tangier's past also tells its future. The island is losing around 19 feet of land a year. A jetty has helped along the island's southwestern side. But islanders say they rest of the land needs protection, either an expanded jetty or a seawall. Carol and the other 500 who live there say they are running out of time. "another storm like isabel or ernesto could wipe us out," says carol. Hurricane sandy unearthed some of the island's hidden history. Another storm like that, carol says, could make the entire island a memory. "everybody's worried about that," she says.

Clouds will slowly increase from the southwest overnight, but won't bring any rainfall...yet. Thanksgiving day will find a cold front moving southeastward across the state bringing a wind shift and colder temperatures for a few days. There may also be a few light rain showers in south central and southeastern sections of the state. Sunny or mostly sunny conditions are expected for the rest of the holiday weekend. Another cold front will arrive on Monday with another chance for a few rain showers in the south and east.

It will be a mild Thanksgiving here in Kansas but as a front treks across the west during the afternoon, temperatures will begin to cool down quite a bit. As the cold front makes its way through our region Thursday, winds will shift to the north ushering in cooler air and dropping afternoon highs into the mid to upper 50s over northwest Kansas. Central and eastern parts of our state will see highs in the 60s to around 70 degrees. The front could produce a few widely scattered showers over south-central and southeastern Kansas Thursday afternoon but most of us will stay dry. Cooler weather will move in behind the front Friday with statewide highs in the 50s. We'll warm-up a bit again this weekend before another, more potent, weather system arrives early next week bringing another chance of showers Monday followed by much colder weather Tuesday when highs only climb into the 40s.

Some high level clouds will drift through our skies over the next few days. Along with southerly winds we will see temperatures slowly rise each day through Monday. High temperatures will mostly be in the 60s with a few low 70s Sunday and Monday. Monday also looks like it will a windy day out ahead of the next cold front that will move across the state. That cold front will usher in high temperatures in the 50s for Tuesday and next Wednesday.

11/30/12            8am

Another major storm hits the u-s... This time the west coast is hit. There are flood warnings in northern California... And people can expect a foot more this weekend. Authorities say the storm has already killed one person. Mud slides are a concern in areas where fires have burned off trees and soil. The system is part of what's known as a pineapple express - where the jet stream starts near the pineapple growing territory of the Hawaiian islands and carries heavy rains to the west coast.

Mostly clear skies are forecast for tonight with any fog prospects staying in far eastern Kansas. Overnight lows will drop to the 30s, thanks to the drier air settling in. Sunday will feature sunshine and high clouds. We are forecasting new record highs in Wichita and Salina before the day is over as statewide highs reach the 70s. These temperatures are well above normal for early December, which is upper 40s. Breezy winds will develop over western Kansas by tomorrow afternoon. Increasing clouds and patchy areas of fog are possible in eastern Kansas Sunday night as the moisture returns again. Overnight lows will be in the 30s west with 40s and 50s to the east. A cold front will slash its way through Kansas on Monday, bringing slightly cooler temperatures and gusty northwest winds. Highs in the 50s and 60s are forecast. Upper 50s to lower 60s will continue into Tuesday and Wednesday. The next weather system is set to roll in at the end of the work week, giving Kansas a chance of rain, some snowflakes too and much cooler air.

A foggy and cold start to the morning, especially across central and eastern Kansas. The fog and low clouds should lift by mid-morning and sunshine will prevail. Weather conditions will be favorable for a rapid warm up with record highs possible in Wichita and Salina before the day is over. Highs will be in the 70s statewide. These temperatures are well above normal for early December, which is upper 40s. Breezy winds will develop over western Kansas by afternoon. Increasing clouds and patchy areas of fog are possible in eastern Kansas tonight. Overnight lows will be in the 30s west with 40s and 50s to the east. A cold front will move through Kansas on Monday, bringing slightly cooler temperatures and gusty northwest winds. The front will not move through south central Kansas until late afternoon, so another warm day on tap to start the work week. Elsewhere it will be cooler with highs in the upper 50s and 60s. Mild and dry weather will continue through Thursday. The next weather system is set to roll in towards the end of the work week, giving Kansas at least a slim chance of rain, some snowflakes too and much cooler (more seasonable) temperatures as we work into the weekend.

Parts of California dealing with extreme flooding this morning. Another powerful storm drenched towns around San Francisco and Sacramento. It's the third system to hit the area in less than a week. Cars are driving through at least a foot of water. The storm knocked over trees and power lines. This man says he learned a lesson about parking his cars outside.... (off cam) it's crushed both of our cars. Initially we park our cars in the garage, (on cam) but the spring on the garage door broke so we parked them outside, didn't think it would happen like this > no one has been hurt in the storms.

Temperatures were a little cooler across Kansas today, even with abundant sunshine. We will see a few high level clouds overnight with lows dipping into the 20s and 30s. Mostly sunny skies and a return of south winds will push high temperatures on Wednesday into the 60s statewide. A cold front will move across the state on Thursday bringing a few more clouds but still no rain. Temperatures will take another dip on Friday and Saturday. The next storm system to affect our area will finally bring some chances for moisture beginning in the northwest on Saturday night and slowly spreading eastward Sunday into Monday. Temperatures will turn much colder Sunday night into Tuesday.

12/5/12            9pm

Skies will be partly to mostly cloudy overnight with dry weather statewide. Lows will range from around 30 west to the upper 30s near Wichita. The wind is expected to ease overnight but as a cold front moves in on Thursday, the winds will be turning to the north during the day. Tomorrow's highs are expected to be a little cooler with lower 50s west but it should still be close to 60 over south central Kansas. North winds could be rather gusty over the west but wind speeds should be less than 20 mph near Wichita. Temperatures are expected to gradually cool off into the weekend with mostly cloudy skies developing. Highs in the 40s and 50s will be common Saturday with even colder temperatures arriving on Sunday as a weather system moves in. It'll bring some light rain and light snow to parts of Kansas. There are still question marks about the timing and speed of this system so it's still too early to nail down any potential accumulation amounts.

12/6/12            7am

Our string of mild December days is about to end as a cold front slides across Kansas Thursday ushering cooler temps, gusty northerly winds, more clouds but only a few sprinkles. Afternoon highs Thursday will range from around 50 over the northwest corner of Kansas to the lower 60s southeast. Our cooling trend will continue through early next week as highs dip into the 40s and 50s Friday then tumble into the 30s by Sunday and Monday. Another front and very strong storm system will sweep out into our region from the west Sunday bringing decent rain and snow chances our way. Timing at this point in time remains a bit of a challenge but moisture could move into northwest Kansas as early as Saturday night then spread eastward Sunday into Monday. It's far too early to talk rain or snow amounts but depending upon the weekend weather-maker's track, measurable snow will be possible for some.

Light snow and flurries missed Kansas to our south early Monday morning but a frigid Canadian air mass is sitting right here in our area making it a very cold start to our work and school week. Lows early Monday fell into the single-digits and low teens across the state and despite calmer conditions, wind chills were subzero for many. Monday afternoon we will see sunshine but one of the coldest days we've had in a long time. Highs will only climb into the 35-40 degree range statewide and our wind should slowly swing around to the west or southwest at 10-15 mph later in the day.

Clear to mostly clear skies will be the rule tonight and into Wednesday. Overnight lows will drop to the teens and 20s. Wednesday afternoon's highs will be even warmer than Tuesday, with lower 50s around south central Kansas. Middle to upper 50s will be located over western Kansas. Quiet weather is expected into Thursday before a storm system organizes over the southwestern United States and moves to the northeast. This system should arrive into Kansas late Friday, bringing increasing clouds and a chance of rain and snow to the state. At this point, amounts don't look significant but light. A slightly cooler weekend will prevail for the state.

12/12/12 9pm

It should not be as cold overnight with lows in the 20s for most of the state. South winds will continue overnight with wind chills likely dropping into the teens with just a few higher level clouds moving through. Thursday should be mild again with a south breeze and afternoon highs that will end up between 55-60 for much of central and northwest Kansas. Temperatures could reach the low 60s for southwest Kansas. Mild weather continues on Friday as a storm approaches from the southwest US. Clouds will take over during the day and rain showers should develop by Friday evening. They will move from west to east, but amounts will be light (generally .25" or less). Much of the precipitation will fall as rain, with very little snow expected in the area.

A weak cold front will pass southward through the state overnight, switching our winds around to the north or northeast. In addition, scattered clouds will develop and they'll be a little thicker in the north and west. Some light rain will initially develop here, then change to light snow and flurries. An inch or less of accumulation is forecast in northeast Colorado with only a dusting expected for parts of northwest Kansas. Overnight lows will drop to the 20s and 30s. On Sunday, we expect some morning flurries north and west to be followed by returning sunshine. Most of Kansas will reach the 40s for highs while south central Kansas will make it to the lower 50s. More sunshine is forecast for Monday with highs in the lower 50s. Even milder temperatures will be around on Tuesday before a weather system approaches Kansas on Wednesday. Increasing clouds and wind are expected, with a some light rain and snow possible. Stay tuned for additional updates concerning this mid-week system. A drastically colder day will be in the works for Thursday.

A few morning flurries across northwest Kansas and southwest Nebraska, otherwise more cloud cover today will lead to cooler conditions statewide. Fog has developed across central and eastern Kansas this morning and will likely lift by 10 A.M., lingering longer east of the Kansas Turnpike. Highs will be in the 40s and lower 50s. Expect mostly cloudy skies tonight with overnight lows dropping into the 20s and low 30s. More sunshine is in the forecast for Monday with a warming trend through Tuesday. Highs in the 50s to near 60 each day. Our attention turns to the next approaching storm system and cold front slated to arrive on Wednesday. This system has the potential to bring showers both in the form of rain and snow to Kansas. Colder air will work into the system overnight and light snow is possible statewide. It is still too early to tell how much accumulating snow is possible, however it does appear portions of Kansas could pick up some accumulations. Wind will be the other weather factor Wednesday into Thursday. Gusts 30-40 m.p.h. are possible with wind chills in the single digits and teens. Stay tuned for additional updates concerning this mid-week system. A much colder, and windy day will be in the works for Thursday.

Wichita police are asking drivers to take a "little extra time".... When heading to work Friday morning. That's because some roads could re-freeze over night. Wednesday night's storm proved to be a little more than city officials expected. They only pre-treated bridges and elevated roads ahead of the storm. But that wasn't enough. Even though no rain or snow is forecast tonight... Officials are asking drivers to be careful. There's always the possibility in the morning that this stuff could re-freeze overnight 27:04 and so, they need to be prepared you know, it could be that you come up on that slick bridge that ... You know, got to slow down today city officials apologized for bad road conditions. They say they will be more aggressive in pre-treating roads next time.

It's the first official day of winter and it sure does feel like it. A snowstorm hits the nation's mid-section right at the start of the busy Christmas travel period. Eyewitness news reporter Andrew Spencer talks with exhausted travelers... The middle of the country is starting to dig out from a blustery snowstorm. In Waterloo, Iowa..shovels and snow plows are back in use after more than eight inches of snow fell. Good news for many businesses after a lackluster season a year ago. "Been delivering a lot of snow blowers a lot of equipment been breaking fixing equipment for people to get snow removed. Picturesque in Wisconsin, good for building snowmen but a challenge for crews clearing roads. "The snow is so wet and there's a lot of moisture content in. A lot of build up on the front of the plows and very hard the, uh, the snow to scour off the plow," storm conditions caused havoc on many roadways and left thousands of residents without power in the Midwest...inside airports anxious travelers facing flight delays and cancellations. "praying for it..yeah i think it will be, hopefully if it says what it is right now we'll just be a little late." in the south, a possible tornado touching down in Mobile Alabama damaging cars at this dealership and in Tennessee strong winds knocked trees onto roofs.. Ushering in winter with some extreme weather promising to bring more troubles as Christmas travel gets into full swing. I'm Andrew Spencer reporting.

20-12 was a bad year for dry weather and many are still dealing with the ongoing drought. Kansas now has a drought task force that will meet regularly to discuss ways to deal with the effects of the drought. The director at the Kansas water office and chairman of the task force says at least 200 water supply systems in Kansas have entered into conservation phases. At least nine are in emergency situations.

Clouds will slowly increase across Kansas overnight with a chance for a few flurries in the far northwest late tonight. Thursday looks mostly cloudy with some light snow or flurries along and north of I-70. Little accumulation is expected. High temperatures Thursday will range from around 20 in the northwest to the mid 30s in the south. We will get back to partly cloudy skies on Friday but temperatures will be colder. The weekend looks dry with temperatures warming up from day to day. Near seasonal temperatures will be with us for the first half of next week with dry conditions continuing.

A few flurries will fly over northern Kansas today but no accumulation is expected. Elsewhere, skies will turn partly cloudy with highs in the teens, 20s and 30s. Gusty southeast to south winds are expected east, while the winds turn to the northwest over western Kansas. More clouds will filter in overnight with flurries or very light snow in the northcentral and northeast. Lows in the single digits and teens are forecast. A cooler Friday can be expected with highs in the 20s. Our weekend temperatures will slowly warm.

A quiet night is ahead with lows in the teens thanks to clear to mostly clear skies. On Sunday, we'll see increasing high clouds, especially for western Kansas. More wind will be around too as temperatures climb to the 30s in the west and 40s again east. Big changes are ahead for Sunday night and Monday as a winter storm takes aim on Kansas. We'll see a light wintry mix transition to some light to moderate snow starting early Monday. There are still some question marks on the timing and track of the system but as it stands, a band of moderate accumulation is possible over parts of central, south central and eastern Kansas. 2-4 inches of accumulation is possible along and north of Wichita, with lighter amounts in far southern and western Kansas. In any event, some travel impacts will be felt for the New Year's holiday. Temperatures will remain cold through the middle of next week.

Head injuries have led to lawsuits against the nfl by former players. But as athlets get bigger, stronger and faster at younger ages...concussions are becoming a growing problem in high school as well... The latest "k-u school of medicine--Wichita" magazine... Features a local player who suffered multiple brain injuries on the field. Eyewitness news reporter jim grawe has the story. Brandon streeter:2:00:23 it's just the last play and i know what's going to happen every time. I guess it makes me feel bad--makes me hurt a little bit. Standup: that was brandon streeter's last blow to the head in a football game. It was the hit that ended his athletic career and could have ended his life. It brings back a lot of bad memories. Though the past couple years...streeter's memory in general has been hazy. He was a receiver for rose hill...playing against circle high. This tackle knocked him out. It was his fifth serious brain injury in six years... He'd been suffering from headaches and memory loss before this...but didn't tell anybody. I was just really competitive and i didn't want everyone to stop and i was the kind of player who was never going to--i would never say i was hurt unless it physically could be seen. Dr. Bart grelinger: 1:43:20 you're trained to be tough as nails. They want to be out there. You don't want to let the team down. Neurologist bart grelinger chairs the board of the kansas sports concussion partnership. The board is just a year and a half old. It was created for doctors, schools, players and parents...to deal with a growing problem. We're definitely bigger, stronger, more aggressive. People don't understand the devastating effect that concussions can have. Streeter's story is featured in the fall issue of k-u Wichita magazine he's had two long years of medical treatment...trying to get back to normal. It was a total process of trying to restart my life from the normal me to post-concussion me. Streeter's message to other players is...tell somebody about headaches, memory loss and other symptoms. Because a hit like this...can change your life forever. Jim grawe kwch 12 eyewitness news.

Kansas authorities worry marijuana from colorado will cross into our state. Eyewitness news reporter jim Grawe looks at how law enforcement will try to keep the drug from crossing the state line. In Colorado....marijuana supporters are celebrating. Guy: i am feeling amazing. This is the best day i've seen in my life the day after their state votes to legalize pot.. Susy perez and gary dockins are passing through Kansas. Mi would rather see them legalize marijuana than alcohol. Susy: i didn't vote, but most of my friends did and they did vote yes. Standup: but some are wondering if what happens in colorado will stay in Colorado. After all it's not an island. Just think about all the people who cross across the colorado Kansas border every day. And that has wallace county sheriff larry townsend concerned. People going to Colorado and using what is an illegal drug in our state, we going to be dealing with them coming back. The sheriff says people will not only be driving colorado pot into kansas....but he suspects they'll also be high at the time. He says that will mean more traffic accidents and he says it's not like testing for alcohol. There's only one officer in his three county area certified to do on the spot drug tests. It's certainly going to put kansas to scrambling to to step up to deal with it. On the other hand.... Michael birzer heads the criminology department at wichita state...and doesn't expect colorado's legalized pot to be problem here. Michael birzer 6:25:35 i don't think it will have much of an impact on Kansas. There are some who would put forth the argument it would actually reduce crime, particularly young people who are out buying it from a drug dealer sheriff townsend believes it'll mean more marijuana use in Kansas....and he sees nothing good about that. Sheriff townsend: it's sad that it's even happening. We see the kids that get started on marijuana and then they're using coke and meth that gateway thing is for real. Jim grawe kwch 12 eyewitness news.

In tonight's health watch... The flu bug has officially hit Wichita, with confirmed cases in several hospitals. This is an early start to the flu season...but it's not too late to get vaccinated. If you catch it....pharmacists say you'll have seven to ten days of misery ahead of you. Symptoms are more serious for the elderly, young children and those with chronic conditions when it comes to the best medicine, the best advice is to treat the symptoms you have rather than an all in one product. If you have a headache, a body ache, tylenol--if you can't take tylenol, ibuprofen works pretty well. But, the key really is, a lot of rest and hydration. And take off work. Don't go to work sick and pass it on to your fellow employees. For a list of places you can get a flu vaccine in your area....check out our website kwch -dot-com and look for the link

Wichita police are answering questions about why officers used tear gas to subdue a crowd in old town friday morning. A group was gathered in the 200 block of north Mosley. Officers threw a small canister of tear gas into the crowd after a bar in the area closed... And the crowd wasn't breaking up. Police say the tear gas was effective in getting the crowd moving. indications are there were some of them who were a little bit rowdy, so what the canister of tear gas does, is it allows us to put out basically a fog, and that gets people to move.> one person complained of irritation after the tear gas was used. That person was checked out on the scene by e-m-s. As protocol-- police say they are looking into the situation to make sure the appropriate amount of tear gas was used.

We now have video--showing what happened the night Wichita police used tear gas to clear a crowd in old town. And Wichita's chief of police defends his officers actions. Eyewitness news anchor Michael schwanke talked to old town leaders... Who once again want to convince people the area is safe. The video shows the large crowd--as bars in old town let out early friday morning. And in the crowd--you can see a fight start between at least two men--some in the crowd back away. But now look to the left--you will see the canister of tear gas go off--and shortly after the crowd clears now Wichita police chief norman williams--who says because of the holiday there were fewer officers-- is explaining why tear gas was used. Norman Williams "you wish the crowd would have dispersed prior to that, but when you have multiple disturbances going on and you only have so many officers, then you rely on those tools. This is the same area of north mosely where shots were fired four weekends in a row this summer. In response city loitering laws were changed...more police were brought in, and cameras were installed--however weren't working during this incident...and old town businesses came together to find solutions--now their doing it again. We have to wait till all the city is trying to do takes effect. Old town association president charlie claycomb says the group's main focus is convincing people old town is still safe--that all of the incidents--including this one...have happened as the bars close. We want people to know old town is safe place to come have a drink after work to eat go to a movie and --as the chief points out--there's only so much old town businesses and police can do. Norman Williams "you can add all the officers you want to have down there, but it still comes down to personal accountability.

It was a busy Saturday morning for Wichita fire fighters. 70 were on the scene of a massive fire near downtown Wichita. Take a look. Flames engulfed a business near Lewis and Washington. At one point the walls collapsed, forcing crews to go defensive - which means there was little hope to save the structure fire fighters got the call just after four this morning, but they don't know when or how the fire started. It was a business, it's my understanding it was automotive in nature. It's not a full time operating business, we are visiting with the owner right now and attempting to gather more information. Crews stayed on scene for several hours to monitor hot spots, to make sure the fire didn't start up again.

A new piece of equipment is changing how area schools diagnose vision problems in children. A test that used to take more than 10 minutes, now takes a matter of seconds. New at six, eyewitness news reporter Michael schwanke shows you the simple, but sophisticated tool that area schools are using... And how they got it. This is what the kid sees and hears- the sound of birds to get their attention--and lights to help them focus. While on the other side--a nurse sees inside their eyes--and within seconds this machine tells them what they need to know. It's very beneficial to the nurses it's called a spot pedivision-- and can replace the old eye chart tests. It would usually take five to 10 minutes to do the test. Not only is it faster--it provides more information. These machines look simple and they are simple to use school nurses can use them with very little training... But this unit cost 9,000 dollars and that's money the schools don't have. It would very difficult for us to find funds they didn't have to-- this machine was donated by the lion's club--the bel aire club brought it to isely elementary on this day--but already 40 other school nurses have said they want it too. Like a light bulb comes and an i realize what this can really do. The lion's club gives back in many ways-- but there's this one incident that makes you feel like you've done something great and this screener is when i realized this is what i do as a lion to help them. Because with children--it's about more than vision.

The sooner we find out a student has a problem that can be corrected the better that child is going to perform in school. In bel aire, michael schwanke kwch 12 eyewitness news.

This is the time of year we talk about toys- ...and more importantly for parents...toy safety. The annual "trouble in toyland" list is out. A team of consumer advocates looks at popular toys on store shelves to see which ones are a potential hazard. Factfinder 12 investigator brian heap takes a closer look at one threat you may be overlooking. Track: parents are used to warnings about choking hazards or lead paint in toys. But we rarely think about hearing loss. Track: body slamming super heroes won't damage your child's ears, but other toys could pose a risk...track: the "dora tunes guitar" is one of the toys singled-out by safety experts...because of concerns it's too noisy... Track: we brought a couple of toys to doctor thomas kryzer's office and asked the hearing specialist for his opinion. "some of these loud toys...i don't know if i would just leave around so that they would just play constantly for hours at a time." track: dr. Kryzer used a smartphone app and a decibel meter to measure dora's audio level. "the average is 90 and that's that's high. That's four hours max." track: dr. Kryzer says that's probably the longest a child could play with the guitar, in one sitting, without risking any damage. Track: he may be even more concerned... Track: about the cat "honk and rumble wheel". "this would be something that i would maybe monitor. So i don't know if i can say it's safe, or not. But that's loud." track: parents shouldn't panic, but it's one more thing to think about at playtime. "it's irreversible. You can't take that away. There's no medicine for hearing loss. There's no medicine to make their tinnitus go away. So it is troublesome and worrisome." "if it's loud and annoying to you, it's probably too loud for your children." track: brian heap, factfinder 12 investigators.

We could be seeing our first signs of winter weather very soon... In Kansas storm team 12 meteorologist merill teller... Has a look at what's coming... And what part of the state can expect snow.

The "kansas department of transportation" started closing parts of interstate-70 in the northwest early this afternoon. Now... You can't get any farther than hays.... As the storm moves east. Eyewitness news reporter jim grawe talked to drivers... Who found their travel plans interrupted.

12/20/12 9pm

The Kansas highway patrol wants to remind drivers to move over for slow or stopped vehicles. That's after a trooper is hit by a semi in bourbon county. The trooper was working a minor-injury accident at the time. K-h-p says the trooper was in his car when the semi crashed into it. The trooper was taken to the hospital. He has been released.

A 10 mile section of i-70 is open again. For much of sunday...part of the highway in lincoln county was closed due to a chemical spill. Authorities say a semi rolled over and spilled about 500 gallons of ethanol on the road. The driver was taken to a salina hospital. The eastbound lane was closed into the evening as crews continued to clean up the mess.

A valley center home catches fire-- displacing a family on christmas day and killing family pets. Firefighters responded after noon to the 400 block of south eastridge. The garage and a car are destroyed. The rest of the house is unliveable due to smoke and water damage. the family who lives here was not home when the fire started. My son was taking a turkey over to the neighbors to have them deep fry it for us and he saw the smoke coming out and so they called 911 at that time and, um, i went in to call my brother to get ahold of them crews from both valley center and the sedgwick county helped fight the fire. The fire chief has called in a state fire investigator to determine what started it.

The cold weather here in Kansas has frozen over many ponds, fountains.. Even wastewater lagoons but that ice isn't very thick.. As one goddard dog discovered this afternoon. New at nine tonight. His family shared their frantic attempts to rescue him with eyewitness news reporter pilar pedraza. Roger... It was a *desperate fight* to save a beloved family pet. In the end... It took two different crews from the sedgwick county fire department to pull *bear the beagle* to safety. Bear is still recovering from the hour or so he spent in the freezing water... Only because he didn't show up for dinner with his brother and sister. His owner... Patricia Wilson went looking for him. I heard what i thought was a cat cry. 13:05 but it was actually him whining 13:08 he was stuck in the middle of the lagoon that's when she says... She panicked. Even while telling us bear's story... His brother woody managed to get out onto the lagoon. That's exactly what happened he didn't break through the ice... Saving another call for help. Unwilling to wait... Wilson says she started trying to rescue bear herself... Trying to scoot things out to him, see if he would climb up on them. I was trying to break the ice, seeing if i could get him to me. When that didn't work... She grabbed a floatie from the pool... Tied a rope around her waist... And tried to scoot out to bear. With her husband's help she got close enough to grab his paw... All of the sudden crack, crack, crack and it breaks. I go under where the puppy fell through it was probably three inches just as Wilson managed to get out of the paralyzingly cold water... A crew from sedgwick county fire station 35 arrived. They too tried.. And failed... To reach bear. It took the help of a second crew... With cold weather wetsuits to pull the beagle out of the wastewater lagoon. As cold as it is, it's going to be cold in there and it's going to be even colder when you get out. The Wilson's rushed bear to the vet... Where his body temperature was only 83-degrees. I just don't know how he hung on that long. A couple hours later... He was warm enough to go home... A walking warning for dogs and people alike.

One of the hottest gifts this Christmas... Guns. That's because of possible new federal restrictions on firearms. Many people say they're buying up before it's too late. Eyewitness news reporter jim grawe shows us what one local gunshop is doing. She has a gun....and knows how to use it. And---she's just ten years old. Lauren dodd at first it's kind of scary and then it gets kind of easy. Lauren dodd....took up shooting a few months ago. She says it's fun way to spend time with her dad....and a good thing to be able to do as she gets older. Lauren dodd i just like coming here to get some practice in just in case somebody tries to come in my house. Bullseye shooting range owner mike relihan says handguns are the hottest sellers right now. There are specific reasons people are buying guns and it's to protect themselves. But he says sales of semi-automatic rifles--sometimes called assault rifles--are also selling big. Derek rhoades got his earlier this year...for target practice...which he says is a lot of fun. It's something you can either do by yourself or with family that anybody can do. You can bring your mom, your kids. Everybody can come out and do it. He says a proposed ban on guns like this following the Connecticut school shooting....would do more harm than good. Derek rhoades: I hope there's not a knee-jerk reaction. I understand there are some issues and maybe we could change some of rules as far as background checks go and things like that. But you can't restrict things that are already out on the market. In the meantime...relihan says this kind of rifle is now hard to keep in stock.it's probably a little bit of the hostess twinkie effect. When they started talking about banning twinkies everybody went out and bought as many as they could get their hands on. He says these are also the gun of choice for many soldiers coming back from iraq and afghanistan it's what they're used to shooting...and like to hunt with. Relihan says banning guns won't make dangerous people any safer but the threat of a ban...has been good for his business---at least for now. In Wichita Jim Grawe kwch 12 eyewitness news.

While their running mates are campaigning in must-win-states. Eyewitness news reporter drew levinson shows us the build-up to the showdown.

In our campaign 2012 coverage tonight. President obama and mitt romney are battling it out in the nation's swing states the 2 have been criss-crossing the country trying to gain support from undecided voters. And they both plan to spend more time in florida. Florida has 29 electoral votes... And nearly a third of voters there are seniors.the candidates will focus on medicare and retirement security. President obama will be in tampa thursday. Romney will visit the sunshine state saturday.

Kicking off today's coverage of campaign 20-12... Thousands of voters will cast ther ballots between now and November sixth. Back in august, one wrong mouse-click...caused results to be wrong. Factfinder 12 investigator michael schwanke finds out if the sedgwick county election office is ready.

10/27/12 9pm

Next month Wichita voters will decide if the city will fluoridate its water factfinder 12 takes an in-depth look at the debate next week our half hour special, "fluoride: it's your choice" will air Tuesday night at 6-30 on k-w-c-h 12. We will also stream the special on our website, k-w-c-h dot com.

10/28/12 7am

So far the candidates have raised a record amount of money during this year's election combined....donors have given nearly two **billion dollars to president obama and mitt romeny's campaigns. Fact finder 12 looked into what two billion dollars can buy. The l-a dodgers are a possibilit last spring, a group bought the team for just over two billion. That's also the price tag for a trip mars - almost. Nasa spent two and a *half billion on the recent curiosity mission to mars. And if the candidates need transportation, they could buy eight dreamliner 7-87 jets from boeing with the money they've raised..

10/30/12 9pm

and wichita voters will decide if the city will fluoridate next week. In our latest fact finder 12 scientific survey.... voters are split on the issue. We asked more than 500 voters how they would vote. 44-percent said no 43-percent said yes. 13-percent are still not sure.

10/31/12 7am

In our campaign 20-12 coverage this morning... The election is next week and millions in the north-east are still without power.the situation has some talking about the possiblity of postponing next week's election fact finder 12 takes a look at how such decisions are made. Congress sets the date for the election...and does have the power to change it. But they would have to come back from recess and pass a law. Elections have never been postponed at the presidential level. New york city and new orleans rescheduled local elections after 9/11 and hurricane katrina.

11/1/12 8am

President obama campaigns once again today along with mitt romney... The president had canceled all campaign appearances to monitor the governement's response to sandy.

11/2/12 4pm

Kansas democrats object to new mailers from the state department of revenue. The brochures were sent to 146 thousand business owners...they describe state income tax cuts enacted earlier this year. But some democrats are criticizing the timing of the mailers. They went out wednesday...just six days before the election.i think when you see something that comes out under the banner of the governor and the state making a pronouncement about the efficacy of this law-- i think that could have an impact on people. A spokesperson for the department of revenue says the mailers cost 52 thousand dollars for printing and postage. The department of revenue says they're designed to answer common questions about the tax cuts.

11/5/12 8am

In less than 24 hours Americans will head to the polls... And that means president obama and mitt Romney have less than 24 hours left of campaigning... Kicking off our coverage of campaign 20-12.. Both campaigns agree... Most Americans have made up their minds.. Today is less about swaying voters and more about getting their supporters out to the polls. We're no longer relevant. We're just props. Ultimately it's up to you. You have the power.<butto> "we're taking back the white house because we're going to win pennsylvania."> all polls point to a tight race tomorrow. Millions have already done their part. More than 27 million Americans have already voted in 34 states and washington, d.c. Where early voting is allowed.

We'll be watching several local and statewide ballot issues tonight. In wichita-- one of the most talked-about issues is fluoride. This vote is only open to wichita residents... They will decide whether to add fluoride to the city's water supply. In hutchinson and salina, voters weigh in on each city's anti-discrimination ordinance. At issue is whether existing ordinances banning discrimination in housing and employment should include sexual orientation. In salina, a "yes" vote means you want to repeal the protections for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered people. A "no" vote means you want the protections to stay in place. In hutchinson, the question is phrased differently a "yes" vote means you want the city's equality ordinance to continue to cover sexual orientation "no" means you do not approve of the ordinance. Statewide, kansas voters will see a question that would allow lawmakers to lower taxes on boats and watercraft. Lawmakers say many people register boats in oklahoma or missouri, because the tax rates are lower. Supporters say lowering the rates could bring in more money... If people do not go out of state to register boats.

11/7/12 9pm

Wichita voters decide against adding fluoride to the city's water. The issue was voted down by a 20-- percent margin last night. A group of wichitans opposed to fluoride held a news conference this morning to thank voters. Wichita is one of the largest cities in the nation that doesn't fluoridate.

11/8/12 7am

There will be new opening on the Wichita city council. Council member Michael o'donnell says he will step down at the end of the year. This after o'donnell won the race for state senate. O'donnell beat timothy snow by 300 votes for the 25th district senate seat. He can legally serve as a state senator and a city councilman, but says it wouldn't be best for his district. He plans to step down December 31st. The city council will appoint his replacement. That person will serve on an interim basis until a new person is elected in the april 2013 election.

11/9/12 8am

Governor sam brownback says kansas *won't* partner with the federal government...to run a health care exchange. The governor says instead of a partnership, Kansas will choose to have a federally run exchange program...where the uninsured can compare and buy health plans. Brownback says the state won't benefit from a partnership...and he says it would cost kansas taxpayers millions of dollars. Kansas will join a list of more than ten other states that have chosen *not* to partner with the federal government.

11/12/12 8am

Immigration reform talks are set to start this week. New York senator Charles Schumer says he and senator Lindsey graham of south Carolina have a plan they think will pass. The bi-partisan plan has four key elements including stronger border security.....and legal documents that can't be forged. It would also require immigrants to learn English and have a job. Schumer says the plan would also let people we need into the country... Through universities or labor work. I think we have a darn good chance using this blueprint to get something done this year. The Republican Party has learned that being anti-illegal and anti-immigrant doesn't work for them politically and they know it. Schumer hasn't said what the timeline for the talks will be.

11/15/12 7am

The elections just finished... But one of american's most famous investors is already looking forward to 20-16. Billionaire investor warren buffett threw in an early endorsement for hillary clinton wednesday. He says he hopes she will become the first woman president. He also said he couldnt' think of anyone who was better qualified. Buffett may be out of luck however... Clinton she has no plans to run in 20-16...

President Obama meets with congressional leaders today. He'll be talking with them about the federal budget crisis. The president is also meeting with 13 heads of civil rights organizations. Automatic tax increases and spending cuts are set to go into effect on January 1st. President Obama wants tax increases on the wealthy. But many republicans say they will not accept higher tax rates.

11/26/12 8am

The city of buhler will change its seal. It will no longer display a cross. "the freedom from religion foundation" sent a letter to the city, saying... It was violating constitutional rights by having the cross in the seal. Instead of going to court, the city will re-design its seal, without the cross it will also change two signs that had the seal on them... One at becker park... The other at city hall. We looked at the issue from a legal standpoint and a fiscal responsibility standpoint and we just couldn't find any way to keep the seal as is without some significant risks to the community. The city has decided on a new design of the seal. It will replace the old one in the next two to three months.

12/6/12 7am

And at the stroke of mid-night folks were lighting up in Washington. Both Washington and Colorado legalized marijuana during Novembers vote. The law went into effect at 12-01 this morning..

12/10/12 8am

President Obama visits an car manufacturirng plant in Detroit. He'll talk about the need for congress to strike a deal to avoid the so-called fiscal cliff. The series of significant tax hikes and automatic spending cuts will start in a few weeks. President Obama and speaker of the house john boehner say they'll do all the deal-making from here on. The two men met at the white house Sunday. But no details are being released.

12/14/12 8am

U-n ambassador susan rice withdraws her name from consideration for secretary of state. Senators say rice misled the public about the September 11th attack on the american consulate in benghazi. Senator john kerry is the next front runner.

12/21/12            8am

Continuing coverage of national budget negotiations... Ten days away, and the nation is still headed toward the fiscal cliff. Republican leader john boehner has scrapped his latest plan. Boehner couldn't get enough support from members of his own party to get his so-called "plan b" passed. It would have raised taxes for Americans who earn a million dollars a year or more. It was considered a major concession because republican leaders had said they didn't want to raise taxes on anyone. Meantime, the president and republicans still are still far apart on the size and scope of government spending cuts.

With four days left until the national budget deadline... President obama and congress search for common ground.. Eyewitnessnews reports ed payne shows us where congressional leaders stand... In what is seen as a last-minute attempt to reach a deal, president Obama meets at the white house with senate majority leader harry Reid, house minority leader nancy pelosi, senate minority leader mitch mcconnell and house speaker john boehner. They have only four days to reach an agreement... Or the u-s economy will go over the so-called "fiscal cliff." that's when automatic tax increases and spending cuts would take effect. Reaching a deal before then won't be easy. Because right now, both sides are involved in a high-stakes political blame game. We are here in washington working while the members of the house of representatives are out watching movies and watching the kids play soccer and basketball and doing all kinds of things. They should be here. I told the president i'd be happy to look at whatever he proposes but the truth is we're coming up against a hard deadline here and as i said this is a conversation we should have had months ago. Democrats want to extend the bush-era tax cuts to everyone except those americans making 250-thousand dollars or more a year. Many republicans remain against any tax increases. Most Americans just want something to be done. People are just tired of partisanship and they want everyone to come together. If lawmakers don't reach a deal by January 1st, many economists are concerned it could eventually lead to another recession.i'm ed payne reporting.

Secretary of state hilary clinton wakes up in a hospital bed this morning. A doctor's visit turned into a trip to the hospital. Eyewitness news reporter marlie hall has the latest from new york. Secretary of state hillary clinton will spend new year's eve in a new york hospital after doctors found a blood clot. The state department issued a statement saying: "in the course of a follow-up exam, doctors discovered a blood clot had formed, stemming from the concussion she sustained several weeks ago." the 65-year-old got her concussion after fainting at home in mid-december. The secretary had been battling a stomach virus she contracted during an overseas trip when she fainted. Doctors say the blood clot's location will determine how serious the threat is to her health. "there are two main possibilities here. One is that she developed a blood clot, or blood clots, in her legs as a result of bed rest during her concussion. Those would commonly be treated with anti-coagulants. A second possibility is that she developed something called a subdural hematoma, which means that as a result of the blow on her head, she broke a small blood vessel on the surface of her brain." doctors have prescribed blood thinners and they will keep secretary clinton in the hospital for 48 hours so they can see how she responds to the medication. Clinton had been scheduled to testify before congress about the September 11th attack on the u-s consulate in benghazi, libya but had to cancel because of her health issues. Ambassador chris stevens and three other Americans were killed in the shootout. A government review of the attack cited serious failures of leadership and management at the state department for the lack of security at the consulate. Secretary clinton took responsibility for their safety, but the report did not hold her personally responsible. Clinton was already scheduled to step down as secretary of state next month. President Obama has nominated senator john Kerry to be her replacement. Marla hall for cbs news, New York.
