

Issues Report
January 1, 2013-March 31, 2013 (Q1)
Program: KVPR/KPRX's Valley Edition
Host: Juanita Stevenson

01/01/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Minorities, Gaming, Environmental, Social

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we talk about plans by a local Native American tribe to open a casino on land north of Madera along Highway 99. The effort took a big step forward in recent days as the Bureau of Indian Affairs agreed to put the land for the new casino in trust for the tribe.

Segment 2: Also on our program today, we learn more about an effort from the Central Valley Air Quality Coalition which is asking San Joaquin Valley counties, including Fresno and Kern to implement a new emergency air quality monitoring system. Walter Ramirez of the California Rural Legal Assistance Foundation is our guest.

Segment 3: We close our program with an interview with CSU Bakersfield professor Doug Davis, who has written a new memoir titled "Gifts Given: Family, Community, and Integration's Move from the Courtroom to the Schoolyard." The book details his memories of one of the most significant and painful incidents in America in the 1950's, the forced desegregation of Clinton High School in rural Tennessee. Davis tells us about his memories of the turbulent summer and fall of 1956, the role his father played on both sides of the issue, and how one night, the eight year old boy discovered a cross burning in his front yard.

01/08/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Social, Poverty, Business

Segment 1: Today on Valley Edition, we talk with local author Armen Bacon about her new book "Griefland" and learn how a friendship grew out of the tragic loss of her son. We'll also talk about how tragic circumstances can change lives. Peter Nazaretian, a licensed marriage and family therapist, also joins our discussion.

Segment 2: Speaking of lives changed, in our second segment we talk with Gloria Owings, who once lived on Fresno's streets, but now has a home thanks to the help of the Fresno Housing Authority. We'll learn more about how her life has changed, and talk with Angelina Nguyen from the Housing Authority and learn more about the progress being made in housing Fresno's homeless.

Segment 3: We close our program with a look at the latest idea to revitalize downtown Fresno - creating an indoor public market. Craig Scharton of the City of Fresno joins us to talk about the concept, which would draw inspiration from similar ventures in Seattle (Pike Place Market) and San Francisco (Ferry Building). Could the city owned portion of the former Gottschalks' building in downtown soon be home to just such a market, which would showcase the agricultural riches of the valley? We talk to Craig and find out what the city hopes to learn from a market consultant who will visit Fresno later today.

01/15/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Healthcare, Poverty, Veterans, Parks & Recreation

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition, KVPR's Rebecca Plevin reports on how valley counties are preparing to expand coverage to their poorest residents under the Affordable Care Act. We'll also talk with Peter Cunningham, Ph.D., Senior Fellow and Director of Quantitative Research with The Center for Studying Health System Change about whether the San Joaquin Valley as a whole is ready to take on health reform.

Segment 2: In the second segment of our program we talk about the long awaited opening of the Fresno Veterans Home. After more than a decade of planning and lobbying by Valley veterans groups the home is set to open fall of 2013. We ask guests Nazzeera Tackett, assistant administrator of the Fresno Veterans Home, and valley veterans advocate Charlie Waters about the process of opening the home and what it will mean to Valley veterans.

Segment 3: Last week President Obama signed legislation authorizing the creation of the nation's newest national park, Pinnacles, located just a few hours from Fresno near the Central Coast. We close our program with a look at what makes Pinnacles a destination worthy of visiting. We'll learn about its soaring ancient volcanic pinnacles, monoliths and spires, and its wildlife, including the endangered California condor. Annette Kondo of the Wilderness Society, California region, joins us to talk about what the park offers and the process of upgrading the park from a national monument to a national park.

01/22/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Environmental, Health, Social, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition, Juanita Stevenson reports on the dispute between Fresno FAX bus drivers and the city of Fresno. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero brings an updated report on the battle over Fresno Mayor Ashley Swearengen's plan to outsource Fresno's residential trash service.

Segment 2: We also look to the effects of pollution caused by diesel in Kettleman City in a report by 89.3's Rebecca Plevin. Jonathan London, an assistant professor of Human and Community Development at University of California, Davis, also chimes in on the discussion.

Segment 3: In the next segment of the program we talk about the effects of the flu in the Valley. Has influenza hit the Valley as hard as it has in Los Angeles County and other parts of the country? We ask Leticia Berber, a healthcare specialist with the Public Health Department of Fresno County, about the reality of the flu in the region and where to get low cost flu shots.

Segment 4: And finally, we speak with Oscar Speace and Janice Noga of "Janka: A Play," the story of holocaust survivor Janka Festinger told through a play set to perform in Visalia on Saturday Jan. 26. Janice Noga, Festinger's sister in-law, brings the memory of Festinger back to life through the performance.

01/29/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Environmental, Health, Sports, Education, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition, Rebecca Plevin reports on the California Air Resources Board's approval of a plan intended to bring the Valley's particulate pollution into compliance with federal standards. But residents and health advocates expressed concern that the plan doesn't act quickly enough to protect public health.

Segment 2: In other Valley news, 89.3's Ezra Romero explores the measures Fresno schools are taking to stop head trauma caused by football among the city's youth. With the Super Bowl just around the corner the topic of terminal brain injuries from football has become a concern across the nation, especially with head injuries making the news. Jim Crichlow, commissioner with the CIF Central Section, and Dr. Robert Cantu, co-director of the Center of Study of Traumatic Encephalopathy at Boston University, join the conversation.

Segment 3: In the next segment of this week's Valley Edition we speak with Charles Manock, a Bullard High School parent and member of Bullard Pride, about the reasons why the Bullard High community is rallying to demand changes to schools in the area. The question we pose is whether the issues at hand are Bullard High School centric or a problem that all Valley schools are facing.

Segment 4: We close our program with an interview with Emmy Award-winning musician Peter Buffett. For more than 30 years Buffett has entertained around the nation and globe. Buffett plans to bring the message of his book, "Life Is What You Make It," alive in a musical event titled "Life Is What You Make It: A Concert & Conversation with Peter Buffett." In our conversation with Buffet he comments on life under his famous father – billionaire investor Warren Buffett, how he began his career and what to expect in the upcoming show.

02/05/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Immigration, Healthcare, Education

Segment 1: In this week's Valley Edition, 89.3's Rebecca Plevin shares the story of Pablo Reyes-Morales, a West Hills College Student, Lemoore. Morales counts himself among the ranks of the 'Dream Army' – or, young, undocumented people who would qualify for the federal DREAM ACT, if it were passed - and are currently barred from serving in the U.S. military. Plevin's piece unfolds a conversation on immigration with Valley Edition's Juanita Stevenson, California State University, Fresno Political Science Professor Kenneth Hansen and Xavier Vazquez, an undocumented Fresno State student who also is part of the Central Valley Dream Team.

Segment 2: In the second portion of the program we talk about the ever increasing doctor shortage sprawling across the Central Valley. We speak with Emily Bazar, a reporter with the Center for Health Reporting at the University of Southern California, who wrote a four part series for the Bakersfield Californian delving into the looming doctor shortage that may hit the region when Obamacare comes into effect in 2014. Debbie Wood, coordinator for School Health and Neighborhood Support programs for the Bakersfield City School District, also joins the conversation. Also in the second segment, Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero tells the story of Rene and Veronica Ramirez who grew up, studied and now practice medicine in the Valley. The couple encountered the same challenges that many from rural communities face, but were successful at overcoming those obstacles. They credit a program at a local university as a major component to their success as physicians. With the Valley facing a looming shortage of doctors their story suggests a way to grow the number physicians in the region.

Segment 3: And finally, we speak with Marit MacArthur, project director for the documentary 'Camp to Campus' and a professor at California State University, Bakersfield. The 90-minute film focuses on first-generation college graduates who come from a migrant labor background. The 'Camp to Campus' documentary will premiere at 7 p.m., Tuesday, February 5, 2013, in the Dore Theatre at CSU Bakersfield. For more information visit <http://www.csub.edu/camptocampus/>.

02/12/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Economy, Social, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we venture into the topic of the future of downtown Fresno. Valley Edition host Juanita Stevenson explores the differing opinions on how Fresno should invest time, effort and funds into downtown, whether the Fulton Mall should be renovated and the vibe that could be cultivated in the region of the city. Joining Stevenson are Director of Downtown Community Revitalization for the City of Fresno Craig Scharton, Chair of the Downtown Fresno Coalition Kate McKnight and Fresno Brewing Company owner Ephiram Bosse. As an example of what kind of business is taking off in downtown Fresno, Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero explores what locals call CartHop – a band of six food trucks that meet in three separate locales across Fresno weekly.

Segment 2: In the second segment of the show we continue our conversation about downtown Fresno with a view from outside the Fresno bubble. Juanita Stevenson engages in conversation with Charles Birnbaum, the Founder and President of The Cultural Landscape Foundation in Washington D.C. In 2010, Birnbaum alongside Fresno leaders analyzed the state of downtown in a summary that he wrote after visiting Fresno. Also joining the conversation are Kate Borders, President and CEO of the Downtown Fresno Partnership, and Keith Woodcock a Fresno State geography professor with over 20 years of experience in city planning in the Central Valley.

Segment 3: We close our discussion with a conversation with Nikiko Masumoto and her one-woman show "What We Could Carry." In the show, Masumoto asks the audience to think about the lives and memories of Japanese American experiences before, during and after Internment and World War II. The show is based almost entirely off of individuals from the Los Angeles hearings of the 1981 Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians. Masumoto explores the stories of 13 testimonials surrounding internment.

02/19/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Health, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: On this week's Valley Edition, host Juanita Stevenson takes a look into whether a tax to pay for public safety is right for the City of Fresno. Stevenson begins with a report from the South Valley discussing the City of Visalia's decision to implement a public safety tax and whether Fresno should follow suit. Joining a conversation about a possible public safety tax and the state of Fresno's finances are Fresno City Manager Mark Scott and Fresno Bee Editorial Page Editor Bill McEwen.

Segment 2: The second segment of this week's show explores the idea that soda consumption causes obesity. The conversation stems from a new Field Poll highlighting that a majority of California voters – with record numbers of ethnic voters – support taxing sugar-sweetened beverages if those taxes are used for school nutrition and physical education programs. We question Genoveva Islas-Hooker, the regional program director for the Central California Regional Obesity Program and Harold Goldstein, the Executive Producer of the California Center for Public Health Advocacy, about the state of obesity in the region and at the statewide level.

Segment 3: We close our program with a conversation surrounding a trio of eco-friendly art exhibits titled "The Green Project" at Arte Américas in downtown Fresno. Ken and Melanie Light, the photographer and writer behind the photography series "Valley of Shadows and Dreams," discuss their 31-black-and-white photo compilation portraying the couple's five-year journey through the Central Valley, agriculture and the marginalization of its people. Frank Delgado, program director of Arte Américas, also chimes in.

02/26/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Healthcare, Education, Political, Arts & Entertainment

Segment 1: The Affordable Care Act is expected to expand health insurance coverage to millions of Californians. But with those newly insured patients will come a dire need for more primary doctors. FM 89.3's Rebecca Plevin reports on a new type of medical residency program that's intended to train primary doctors who will remain in the Central Valley and work in local community health centers. Joining Valley Edition host Juanita Stevenson in a conversation over how the Affordable Care Act will affect the Central Valley is Carmela Castellano-Garcia, the CEO of the California Primary Care Association.

Segment 2: Joe Moore interviews Fresno State political science professor Thomas Holyoke about last week's surprise resignation by State Senator Michael Rubio. Holyoke answers the questions about what Rubio's resignation means politically and which candidates might be looking to fill his seat in the 16th District. Rubio, whose daughter has Down syndrome, said in a statement that his resignation was prompted by a desire to spend more time with his family. The Shafter Democrat also used the occasion to announce his new job, as a lobbyist for the Chevron Corporation.

Segment 3: In the next segment of this week's Valley Edition we speak with College of the Sequoias President, Stan Carrizosa, about the college possibly losing its accreditation. The news comes after a commission from the Western Association of Schools and Colleges found that COS was in "substantial non-compliance" with the organization's standards. The Accrediting Commission for Community and Junior Colleges has given the junior college until mid-October to address issues in areas including institutional planning, student learning and achievement.

Segment 4: We close our program with a segment on the 12th Annual Rogue Festival in Fresno. The fringe festival celebrates the independent performer and artist by providing the opportunity to showcase works in friendly, affordable and creative setting. Amy Querin, co-producer of the Rogue Festival and head of NOCO Fresno Dance Collective, explains the concept behind the festival and what is to be expected from the nine-day event.

03/05/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Social, Immigration, Seniors, Agriculture, Business

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we look into an airplane disaster that took place in the hills near Coalinga 65 years ago. The accident grabbed national headlines and even inspired a song by Woody Guthrie titled 'Deportee.' Valley Public Radio reporter Rebecca Plevin explores the tragedy with the help of local author Tim Z. Hernandez and his quest to ensure that those who died in the crash are not forgotten. Hernandez, along with the Fresno Diocese and Holy Cross Cemetery are working together to erect a memorial headstone with the full names of all 28 passengers.

Segment 2: In the second segment of this week's Valley Edition, we discuss the reasoning behind why many seniors are choosing to work past retirement. A recent Gallup Poll shows that one of the top fiscal worries of American's is that come retirement their bank accounts won't be full enough to support their households. 89.3's Ezra Romero asks working seniors in the Central Valley about why they have chosen to work beyond the average retirement age. Tom and Pauline Jones join the conversation. Tom is the founder of WORx Inc., a Management Engineering firm based in Carmel, Calif.

Segment 3: We close our program with a segment on the third Fresno Food Expo. The expo is a regional food show and was developed to help grow the San Joaquin Valley's food industry by introducing locally owned and headquartered food companies in the region to buyers from the retail, foodservice and export industries. Vincent Ricchiuti, with Enzo Olive Oil and an exhibitor at the expo, and Amy Huerta, the Business Initiatives Manager with the City of Fresno, join the conversation.

03/12/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Environmental, Economy, Social, Elderly, Healthcare

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a hike into the foothills of Fresno County. Valley Public Radio's Ezra Romero takes the listener on a journey through the McKenzie Table Mountain Preserve run by the Sierra Foothill Conservancy. Jeannette Tuitele – Lewis, executive director of the Sierra Foothill Conservancy, joins host Juanita Stevenson in a discussion surrounding the Valley locale, its ties to the community and future dates for preserve exploration.

Segment 2: Also on this week's program, Ben Adler with Capitol Public Radio in Sacramento interviews U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy. The two discuss Kennedy's hope for a booming California and his work involving the state's overcrowding prisons.

Segment 3: We turn to Fresno State philosophy professor Andrew Fiala for a discussion surrounding rational response to possible catastrophe. From the effects of climate change to the threat posed by a giant asteroid there's a lot humans worry about. Fiala points to a pessimistic conclusion.

Segment 4: The second half of the program explores the issues surrounding end of life care. What steps and decisions need to be made before a loved one passes or becomes ill? The conversation stems from the issues faced when 87-year-old Lorraine Bayless died at a senior living center in Bakersfield in early March after a 911 recording showed that a staff member refused to do CPR on the woman. The call prompted outrage across the nation, but was the nurse's decision ethical? Joining the conversation are Michael Nisco, Program Director of the Hospice and Palliative Medicine (HPM) Fellowship Program at UCSF Fresno, and Dr. Christopher Meyers, director of the Kegley Institute of Ethics and professor of philosophy at CSU, Bakersfield.

03/19/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Education, Health, Business

Segment 1: On this week's Valley Edition we discuss the future of animal control across California's Central Valley. Host Juanita Stevenson takes the listener into Fresno County where the city and county no longer work together when it comes to Animal Control since the SPCA six months back announced it would no longer provide services to either agency. With the SPCA's pullout and talk of an animal control tax in Fresno the future for animal control in the region is uncertain. But in Bakersfield the story is a little different. The city of Bakersfield and Kern County have decided to operate their animal control facilities separately from each other, with a shared intake center. Is the South Valley ahead of Fresno? If so, how can the region catch up? Daniel Bailey, the president of Liberty Animal Control Services in Fresno County, and Shyanne Schull, the deputy director of Kern County Animal Control join the conversation.

Segment 2: Also on this week's program, we turn to Fresno State professor Jack Benninga for a commentary on President Obama's support of "High Quality Preschools." Are politicians and the tax-paying public willing to foot the bill? On this edition of FM89's commentary series The Moral Is, Benninga says the new effort may fail, if it's not properly funded.

Segment 3: In the second half of the show, Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin explores the future of legislation for the disease valley fever. Last fall, then-State Senator Michael Rubio decided to finally do something about the disease, but earlier this month Rubio resigned. Will valley fever victims find a new advocate and is progress in funding research into this deadly disease just around the corner? To answer this question, Plevin and Michael MacLean, Kings County Health Officer, discuss future efforts and the presence of the disease in the region.

Segment 4: Ending the program we take a look at the Valley's young professionals. The "40 Under 40" reception, presented by Business Street Online, honors outstanding business professionals in the private and public sectors of the region who have yet to reach 40 years old. Lance Cardoza, the president of Business Street Online, and honorees Tim Fenigan Jr., of Fresno Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram, join the conversation.

03/26/13 VE 9:00-10:00am

Issues: Local, Government, Transportation, Social

Segment 1: This week on Valley Edition we take a ride to into the South Valley where a battle is heating up over a freeway connector project intended to connect Highway 58 from Tehachapi and beyond to Interstate 5. The major issue, the Centennial Corridor Project will tear out 300 homes in a well-established neighborhood just west of Highway 99 in Bakersfield. FM 89's Ezra Romero speaks with community leaders, those whose homes will be destroyed and brings a report on the future of what some call a better connected Bakersfield and California. Valley Edition Host Juanita Stevenson leads a discussion on the future of the neighborhood along with Bakersfield City Council member Terry Maxwell and Tim Stonelake, a homeowner who lives a block from the site of the freeway and who is also part of the Westpark Homeowners Association.

Segment 2: In the second half of this week's program, Valley Public Radio's Rebecca Plevin takes the listener on a walk through Fresno's Lowell neighborhood. The community is one of the oldest in the city and one of the most troubled. Many of the low income renters who call the area home are concerned with the substandard living conditions they are subject to. Plevin discusses the efforts of a Fresno couple who are working to address the issue and raise awareness of tenant rights. Joining the conversation with Stevenson on the future of the Lowell neighborhood are Don Simmons, a lecturer of Humanics at Fresno State, and Barbara Fiske, co-chair of the Lowell Neighborhood Association and Union de Familias. Both guests live in the Lowell community.

Gov. to Propose Education Funding Revamp

Next week, Governor Jerry Brown is expected to propose a dramatic overhaul in the way California spends money on education. A similar proposal fell flat last year -- but education officials with the Brown administration have been tweaking it, and the plan may have more political support this time around. Anthony York of the Los Angeles Times got a sneak peek, and joins us to talk about the details.

In Oakland, School Officials Tackle Rising Suspensions

A number of new education laws in California tackle a particularly alarming issue: the state's schools now issue more suspensions to students than diplomas, especially to African-American students. California's Budget Is Missing Something: Red Ink

Never mind the Governor's budget plan released Thursday - what California's cognoscenti are talking about is the budget deficit. Schools To Get Increased Funding Under Brown's Budget

California's schools are getting the only significant boost in the budget, including the better part of $3 billion for K-12 and community colleges. Concussion Researchers Take to the Gridiron

The NFL playoffs continue this weekend, with the San Francisco 49ers on a quest to reclaim Super Bowl glory. But once the ultimate bragging rights are settled, one thing remains unsettled, and unsettling. Concussions are endemic in football at every level, from peewees to the pros. Still, we don't know exactly how they're caused. Adding urgency, a study of brain tissue from former San Diego Chargers linebacker Junior Seau revealed this week he had degenerative brain disease, a possible factor in his suicide last year. Now, Stanford University is searching for answers -- and its laboratory is the football field itself.

Few issues have been as divisive in recent history as same-sex marriage, and California has been at the center of the maelstrom since voters approved Proposition 8. Outside of the legal questions facing the ban on same-sex marriage, many churches and their followers are grappling with their own position on gays and lesbians. Our series "A Church Divided" concludes with the story of a Mormon mother and son working to bridge a historical divide.

Retracing the History of Prop. 8

On Tuesday, March 26, more than four years after California voters approved Proposition 8, the state's ban on same-sex marriage will get a full hearing before the U.S. Supreme Court. It's been a long and winding road to the nation's high court -- a road paved with joy, anger, euphoria and fear. We retrace the history of Proposition 8, from the moment it became a ballot measure in 2008. Reporter: Scott Shafer

California Songs: Dave Stamey's 'The Vaquero Song'

Cowboy singer Dave Stamey's "Vaquero Song" is a nostalgic look back at the Rancho era of the 1840s, when California was still part of Mexico, and vaqueros, or cowboys, rode the range. Stamey lived for 25 years on the site of one of the historic ranchos on the Central Coast, now the town of Nipomo. We spoke to him about California's first cowboys and the intersections of past and present as part of our "California Songs" series. Reporter: Valerie Hamilton

Voices From Spring Training

Baseball season kicks off on March 31, and all five of California's major league teams are in the desert getting ready. Every year fans flock to spring training in Arizona to get a sneak peek of their teams and to get a little sun. We talked to some of those fans this week. Stem Cell Bank on the Way to Reality

California is opening its first bank for human stem cells. Taxpayers are giving more than $30 million to a handful of scientists to begin cultivating the cells. This effort to bank stem cells is the nation's most ambitious, according to Dr. Uta Grieshammer of California's stem cell agency. Dr. Grieshammer says grantees will use Nobel Prize-winning breakthroughs to create stem cells from blood cells.

Supreme Court Hears Arguments on DOMA and Prop. 8

History will be made this week when the U.S. Supreme Court hears oral arguments on the constitutionality of the federal Defense of Marriage Act, or DOMA, and Proposition 8, California's ban on same sex marriage. The California Report will be in Washington D.C. for two days of arguments.

Supreme Court Takes On Prop. 8

The U.S. Supreme Court heard oral arguments today in a case challenging California's ban on same-sex marriage. Attorneys fighting the constitutionality of the law say marriage is a fundamental right and denying it because of sexual orientation violates the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment. Prop. 8 supporters say the will of the state's voters should not be invalidated by the courts.

Say Goodbye to Devil's Slide

The stretch of Highway 1 known as Devil's Slide has plagued drivers for more than 75 years. The road, south of San Francisco, has closed numerous times due to landslides, turning a seven-mile drive down the coast into a 45-mile detour. And the sharp turns are notorious for causing collisions. Not any more: Tuesday morning two new tunnels are opening to traffic. Reporter: Molly Samuel

State Asks Judge to End Oversight of Prison Mental Health Care

California prison officials will ask a federal judge on Wednesday to end his oversight of the mental healthcare system in the state's prisons. The judge appointed a special master more than a decade ago. Since then, California has spent billions of dollars to improve psychiatric care for inmates as the suicide rate has still gone up in recent years. Reporter: Julie Small

Prop. 8 Supporters, Detractors React to High Court Hearing

After spirited oral arguments Tuesday, the fate of California's Proposition 8 is now in the hands of the U.S. Supreme Court. But not all the action was in the courtroom. Huge crowds of both supporters and opponents of the proposition gathered outside of the courtroom to voice their opinions. Reporter: Scott Shafer

Supreme Court Takes On DOMA

How is the Defense of Marriage Act case different as a U.S. Supreme Court challenge than California's Proposition 8? The California Report's Scott Shafer is in Washington D.C. and talks to guest host Penny Nelson about Wednesday's Supreme Court hearing on the Defense of Marriage Act.

State Awaits Ruling on Prison Mental Health Care

Governor Jerry Brown's administration is keen to end federal oversight of the state's prisons, but that entails convincing federal judges it's time to let go. In the case involving more than 32,000 inmates with mental health issues, however, that's looking less likely to happen soon. Reporter: Julie Small

New Details on Delta Water Tunnel Plan

Governor Jerry Brown's administration has released more details about its $23 billion plan to build two 35-mile tunnels between the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta and farms and cities elsewhere in the state. But environmentalists, worried about what will happen to fish in that water, are no more enchanted with the project than they were before the release. Reporter: Lauren Sommer

A Milestone for Gay Rights, No Matter the Outcome

No one can say for sure how the U.S. Supreme Court will rule on Proposition 8 and the Defense of Marriage Act. But the dramatic events of this week constitute a benchmark for the Gay Rights movement. Reporter: Scott Shafer

Commission Suggests Big Changes for State Parks

Earlier this week, the nonpartisan Little Hoover Commission dropped a political bomb in Sacramento with a report suggesting the state should divest itself of the parks it can't afford to run. The California Department of Parks and Recreation is under new management after an accounting scandal last summer, but the Commission is recommending more dramatic changes in the months to come. The head of the Little Hoover Commission, Stuart Drown, explained it to The California Report's Rachael Myrow.

For One Oakland Resident, a Bullet Revives a Memory

When Oakland resident Jean Melesaine was driving to work recently, she was surprised to find an unused bullet in her dashboard. As part of our occasional series, "What's Your Story?" we hear from Melesaine about how the bullet was from a gun she owned seven years ago. Reporter: Shuka Kalantari

Latino Population Growth No Boon for Chicano Studies Programs

The fight over gay rights is front and center today. In many ways, it carries forward struggles that began in the 1960s. Back then, many young Mexican-Americans called themselves as Chicanos, raising their voices against racism. In time, they claimed a place at American universities. But that was half a century ago. Mexican-American students today don't define themselves in the same way, and Chicano Studies departments are in trouble. Reporter: Adrian Florido

A Quest to Memorialize Central Valley Plane Crash

Sixty-five years ago, a plane full of Mexican deportees crashed in the hills near Coalinga. At the time, the disaster grabbed national headlines, and even inspired a song by Woody Guthrie. The song has since been covered by many artists, but the event itself has faded into the mists of Central Valley history. What would it take to turn that around?Reporter: Rebecca Plevin
